Strange, in a way, that it was not a politician who disenchanted us with McCarthyism. There were great opportunities for some brave political leader to do a thorough analysis of this new and frightening thing that has confused and confounded America and the whole world. It was beginning to look as though the United States of America had lost confidence in its free system.

Always in our past some great political leader has stepped forward to put his country back on the track. In 1799 it was Thomas Jefferson, who fought the Alien and Sedition Acts. In 1861 it was Abraham Lincoln, who gave his life for it. In 1921 it was Charles Evans Hughes, who spoke out boldly against the Palmer raids.

Why no politician this time? Fear, I guess. They had lost confidence in the fair-mindedness of the American people. They found it simpler to ride out the hysteria.

Adlai Stevenson spoke out, but he did not get firm support even from some leaders of his own party. Perhaps some of his advisers felt that an all-out attack sustained on McCarthy would perhaps falsely identify Stevenson as "pro-Communist." It remained for Murrow, a news analyst, to tell the story Adlai Stevenson tried to tell, not as an act in defense of communism, which is absurd, but as an act in defense of Americanism.

No American traditionalist, however conservative, could stand by and see our legal system mocked, our ethics torn to shreds, our sense of fair play destroyed, our very language fouled and corrupted by a shrewd, ambitious and thoroughly unscrupulous band of character assassins operating under the authority of the U.S. Congress. To fight McCarthyism was to defend Americanism, and Edward R. Murrow that Tuesday night on television may have saved the Union just as surely as Lincoln did it 90 years earlier.

It is impossible to get into a man's mind and discover by what process he came to the conclusion that he had to do what he did. My own guess is that like the boy in Holland who put his arm in the hole in the dike, Murrow felt the cruel sea pouring in on his beloved country, destroying the dikes of our freedom and our constitution, and decided it was time for somebody to try to put a stop to the thing.

Pastor Martin Niemoeller must have searched his soul similarly before he spoke out in Hitler Germany, but it was too late. All he got for his act of faith and courage was a term in a Nazi prison. But it is to man's eternal credit that man learns from history. Ed Murrow, in whom the brooding has grown until he had to cry out, cried out for millions of his countrymen, and he cried out in time.

By this act of purification,

Bring 'Win' Back, They Cry

Seek Return Of Stracke To Video

Lake View Mothers Begin Drive for Children's Entertainer

The efforts of two Lake View women to bring Win Stracke, television personality, back on the air has snowballed into a campaign by mothers throughout Chicago, Skokie, Des Plaines and Elmhurst.

And it all began when two little girls sat down in front of their television set on Feb. 26 and cried because "Uncle Win" and his Animal Playtime wasn't on Channel 5 at 12:30 p.m.

A mother can't just sit back and watch her daughter cry, so Mrs. Irving Adler, 624 Cornelia, and Mrs. Martin Leven, 724 Waveland, began a campaign to bring the familiar face back to their television screens.

On March 6, the two young housewives sent a letter to the National Broadcasting Co., and protested the loss of their daughters' friend.

"Petitions are being circulated throughout the city, and we're using every medium we can to express ourselves," the women wrote NBC. "Our children are heartbroken because Uncle Win is a part of their lives."

Since the women received no answer to their letter, they went into action and circulated petitions and pictures of Uncle Win in grocery stores throughout Lake View.

Grocers Like Petition

"When we went to collect the petitions, grocers asked us to leave them because they were good for business," Mrs. Leven said. The grocers said their customers thought they were wonderful for supporting the protest."

It took only a week for Mrs. Adler and Mrs. Leven to canvass the entire North Side, and word of their work spread throughout Chicago suburbs, and into the Far South Side..

"We never realized that housewives could make such a big noise," Mrs. Adler said. "But if ever there was a reason for mothers to unite, this is it!"

The mothers said that they feel strongly about Win Stracke be-

CENTER OF MOTHERS' CAMPAIGN is Win Stracke, right, ballad-singing television star who was taken off the air Feb. 26. Because these mothers started a campaign to bring Stracke's Animal Playtime back to television, he made a personal appearance Friday in the home of Mrs. Richard Felix, 3507 Pine Grove, center. Rites Today for Mitch McKeown, Top Fund Raiser

Requiem mass will be said today (Wednesday) for Mitchell McKeown, 57, known throughout Chicago for his fund-raising activities.

Mr. McKeown, 2430 Lakeview, died Sunday in Passavant hospital. The head of the Mitchell McKeown Organization, 135 S. La Salle, he established a basic concept, now standard in his field, for public relations and fund raising in connection with charitable and philanthropic affairs.

He came to Chicago from Brooklyn in the early 1930s and became fund-raising counselor for United Charities, the predecessor of Community Fund.

During the last 14 years, Mr. McKeown has been public relations and fund raising counselor for the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross.

Mr. McKeown, who was public relations man and manager of Mayor Kennelly's election and reelection campaigns, conceived the Mayor's Youth Foundation.

The funeral will be from Carroll's chapel, 25 E. Erie, and St. Clement's church, 642 Deming, at 10:30 a.m. to All Saints cemetery.

SUR-PRIZE-O

$120 Cash Next Week

This week's award went to Leo Liske, 1307 Addison, a neighborhood booster. He was given a merit certificate but missed out on an extra cash award of $60 when he couldn't present his newsboy receipt, thereby making that award $120 for next week.

No consideration is necessary. You need only your newsboy receipt or a reasonably exact facsimile to win the extra cash award.

Newsboys are now collecting their regular 10-cent weekly subscription charge and are presenting red receipts. If the newsboy on your route does not call, telephone BUckingham 1-7500 and somebody will be sent out.

'Wrong Turn' in Zoning Case Disturbs Neighbors

Feel Golf Property 'Bribe Offer' Emphasis Harmful

Neighbors who have been fighting against encroachment of factories in their community are deeply disturbed by the turn the Bodine matter has taken.

These Lake View residents became involved in the Bodine fight solely to protect their homes and property. Now an alleged bribe offer appears to be getting more attention than the question of what is to become of the former golf course site.

Several of these neighbors, with the average person's awe of grand jury proceedings, were frightened when called to testify before that body last week. All are worried by the political overtones which appear to be stronger than the merit of the real issue.

What the neighbors seem to have walked into is a fight between the regular element and the reform element of the city council. The reform element—particularly Charles J. Fleck, former 45th ward alderman, Ald. John J. Hoellen (47th) and Ald. Robert Merriam (5th)—have been on the side of the people.

Now these aldermen are being inadvertently smeared by headlines about the alleged bribe offer. The headlines have given the wrong impression of these men, who have rejected any bribes and have worked to keep the area residential. They are being tagged with the word "bribe," when, as a matter of fact, they have taken nothing and have worked long and

Booster Baby Gets Quick Traffic Sign Cooperation

Two Lake View crossings are brighter spots today as a result of The Booster Baby and the prompt cooperation given him by the city and the Park District.

Bright new signs direct motorists to go "Slow" at Greenview and Roscoe, and to "Stop" at Fullerton and Geneva. The faces of neighbors in the vicinity of the two intersections are considerably brighter, too, as a result of the signs.

A neighbor wrote the Baby that the crossing at Fullerton was a dangerous one where there had been a number of accidents. One of the least of these had resulted in a motorist knocking down the Stop sign. A makeshift sign had been put up, but was inadequate.

As soon as this situation was reported to the Park District Traffic Engineering section, which has charge of signs on boulevards, wheels started to roll to carry a new sign to Lake View. It is now in a temporary base, and the Park District says as soon as the ground thaws, they will install a firm metal foundation.

Passing the corner of Greenview and Roscoe, the Booster Baby had noticed children trying to cross to go to school. However, cars whizzed right through the intersection, for drivers could not tell what the unsightly faceless sign was meant to say.

There is no mistaking the warning now, though, since the city Traffic Control Bureau answered the Baby's call for help with a bright new warning sign.

2 Hospital Claims Net Him $534

Last August, Commercial Hospitalization Agency paid John Carlson, 3618 N. Racine, $250.50 for an accident to, and hospital confinement of, his son Robert.

But Commercial's protection of this North Side family didn't end there.

Carlson's wife was hospitalized with a subsequent illness, for which Commercial delivered to the neighbor a check for $283.50, just last March 1.

Total returns of $534 attest to the business acumen of Carlson, who is proprietor of Kulin Range & Furnace Oils, 1207 Wellington.

Four outstanding low-cost, all-inclusive policies offered by Commercial, recommended by this newspaper, will cure financial ills attendant upon needed medical, surgical or hospital care.

Mme. Noel Takes Action Against Juvenile Delinquency

One Lake View adult, deeply disturbed by the difficulties facing today's teen-agers, has taken definite steps to do something about it.

Last autumn Mme. Jeannette Noel, who for years has taught dancing to neighborhood youngsters at her studios at 1835 School, returned to her home in Belgium for a visit. During the three months she toured Europe, she was deeply impressed by the adult, well-balanced behavior of the young people she saw.

Youth and grownups worked together and played together in European families, Mme. Noel noted, and the teen-agers were treated as respected members of society and responded in kind.

When she returned home, Mme. Noel heard complaints on every side about the teen-agers in the community. Neighbors complained that young people hung around the streets, making noise and getting in the way—but no one gave them a better place to go. Adults condemned youth for acts of vandalism—but gave them nothing better to do.

So Mme. Noel started a group, patterned after youth workshops she had seen in Europe, from which has grown the All-Community-Theater for Youth, Inc. Already the club has 130 members.

Show Their Work

On Sunday, March 28, at 3 p.m. in Hamlin park fieldhouse, Hoyne and Wellington, the young people will show the public what they have accomplished. There will be no charge to see the variety show which is the result of devoting teen energies to constructive activity.

Response to the program from young people of the area has been immediate and enthusiastic. Adult professionals, sought out by Mme. Noel, have contributed their services to provide instruction in drama, dancing, costume, scenery designing, business management, promotion, music, stage direction, and all other fields of the theater.

Members plan to continue to produce their own shows and programs under sponsorship of the Developing Wave Confronts Police

One Suspect Shot, Caught; Another Repeats Calls on Clerk

Lake View's police are tackling what seems to be a developing wave of hotel robberies, as more and more hostelry clerks are victims of gunmen.

However, Sheffield officers believe they have captured one of the bandits, known by his habits as the "plastic toy-gun bandit."

Bob Smith, 32, of 730 Barry, was caught Saturday morning attempting to escape from a hotel at 739 Belmont, where, according to police, he had committed a robbery.

Patrolmen reported Smith was shot in the back while fleeing. According to Sheffield Capt. James Hackett, the suspect is being treated at Bridewell hospital, prior to facing robbery charges.

A number of hotel clerks from Lake View will "visit" him during his hospital stay, to see if he is the one who victimized them in the past.

Meanwhile, Charles Dillon, clerk in a hotel at 711 Belmont, reported one bandit is trying to make a habit of robbing him.

He told police that the same gunman has been "coming off and on for the past six months."

The lone bandit struck twice last week, taking $20 from Dillon Wednesday, then dropping in Saturday night for an additional $25.

Mrs. Eggers Services Tomorrow

Funeral will be held tomorrow (Thursday) for Mrs. Clara Eggers, 66, of 3742 N. Janssen, who died Monday morning in her home.

Mrs. Eggers, who had been ill for six months, had managed the Eggers' Hardware and Bicycle shop, 1444 Belmont, for her son, Albert, for 10 years.

Born and reared in Lake View, Mrs. Eggers belonged to Bethlehem Evangelical church, Diversey and Magnolia. She is survived by her daughter, Grace Zwemke, and a son, Albert Eggers, and two grandchildren.

Services will be held at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow in Muelhoefer's chapel, 1458 Belmont. Interment will be in Elmwood Park cemetery.

L. V. Kiwanians Will Honor St. Pat Today

A St. Patrick's Day party will be the keynote of the Lake View Kiwanis club meeting today (Wednesday) at noon in the Belden-Stratford hotel, 2300 N. Lincoln Park West. In charge of the meeting will be Harry E. Clohecy, who promises a program of Irish entertainment and corned beef and cabbage for all who wish it.

Primaries

Marshall Holleb, 451 Barry, president of the Independent Voters of Illinois, and Lee Schooler, 3121 Sheridan, radio and television commentator, will take part in a meeting of the Chicago Ethical society at 11 a.m. Sunday, March 21, at the Fine Arts building, 410 S. Michigan. A group of experts will discuss "Who's Who and What's What in the Primaries?"

Neighbor's Body Found In Harbor

Hold Funeral Services for Miss Hattam, 35, Long Ill

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Elmwood cemetery for Miss Mabel Hattam, 35, of 907 School.

The body of Miss Hattam, who had been missing since Jan. 25, was discovered Friday in a watery grave at the Belmont harbor.

An inquest was held Monday morning at the county morgue. Members of the Hattam family told a coroner's jury that Miss Hattam had been ill for some time. The jury listed cause of her death as "undetermined."

Survivors are: mother, Mrs. Semreda Hattam; a sister, Eleanor, and three brothers, Robert, Caldwell and Raymond.

Robbers Prove Again: No Honor Among Thieves

Two gunmen who took an auto away from Charles Hammer, 430 Diversey, failed to keep their promise.

He told Town Hall police that the two thieves jumped into his auto at 430 Belmont Friday night and made him drive his car to Roscoe and Bosworth.

At the intersection, they took $6, a gold ring and his 1951 Plymouth. The hoods promised that they would leave his auto at or near the Ivanhoe restaurant, 3000 N. Clark, "in a few hours."

Hammer and police waited at the Ivanhoe. Nobody, but nobody, returned the car.

St. Clement Mothers Discuss Programs

St. Clement Mothers' club will have the Rev. R. H. McGlynn as guest speaker at the meeting Thursday, March 25, at 8 p.m. in Fireside Hall, 2524 N. Orchard. There will also be discussion of programs planned for important meetings and events during April and May. Vocational movies will be shown, and a social hour will close the evening.

These are but a few of the many fine Irish men and women who reside in Lake View, and 'tis today a very special day on which we wish them "Top o' the Mornin'!"

The Irish, many fold, will attend special church services today (Wednesday) in honor of their patron saint. And every one of them will wear a wee touch of green in memory of St. Patrick.

Holiday flavor surrounding March 17 originated because St. Patrick, a Scotsman, was captured by a group of Irishmen and sold to slavery in Ireland.

After leading a hard life as a slave, St. Patrick escaped to France and fitted himself for the priesthood. The Pope returned him to Ireland to convert the natives to Christianity, and history has it that he was the first priest to preach Christianity to the Irish.

Police Doubt Explanation Of 'Escapade Rooftop'

Two men who fell from Mages Sporting Goods store roof at 3144 N. Ashland Thursday night are being held at Bridewell prison hospital for treatment and questioning.

Sheffield police are eager to learn what Robert L. Wilson, 21, of 2135 Cortland, and William H. Bill, 20, of 1021 Dakin, were doing on the roof.

Both men were injured when they fell into a walled-in area at the store. They explained to detectives that they were "chasing each other around." Police are doubtful about their explanation.

Bill managed to get out of the walled-in area and limped to fire station, Hook and Ladder 21, at 1501 School, for help. Firemen rescued his partner. Bill, according to police, would not say how he got out of the trap.

Wilson suffered leg fractures and Bill received possible fractures of the pelvis and left wrist.

Dear Mr. Murrow:

For quite some time, we have been running German translations of John Crosby's television column. Attached you will find this week's issue of the Aufbau which carries, on its back page, the article he devoted to your attack on Senator McCarthy. We were happy to present this excellent piece on a great public service which you have rendered to our common cause.

In my capacity of correspondent to various European dailies (Swiss and German) I have taken great pleasure to report about your valiant fight against McCarthyism.

Let me add that I was very much impressed with your program which presented Mrs. Annie Lee Moss. It was as heart-rending as it was infuriating.

With my heartfelt good wishes for your continued success in tearing down the net of bigotry, fascist fanatism and lies which has threatened to envelop our country, I am

"Ich hätte an Schwables Stelle gesagt, so etwas dürfen Sie doch überhaupt nicht tun"

Gespenster um Oberst Schwable

Von KURT KERSTEN

Der Fall des Obersten Frank H. Schwalbe und anderer Militärs, die in der nordkoreanischen Gefangenschaft unter uns unvorstellbarem Druck und infolge körperlichen Torturen Aussagen, noch dazu falsche, machten konnte nur solche Personen verwirren und zur unüberlegten Kritik verleiten, die weder Phantasie noch Erfahrungen in den Methoden totalitärer Regime besitzen. Man möchte sich noch immer nicht wahrhaben, dass sich der Charakter des Krieges völlig geändert hat und wir in einer Periode leben, in der es vor allem Bürgerkriege gibt. Präsident Eisenhower hat in einer Pressekonferenz ausführlich auf diese Veränderung des Kriegscharakters hingewiesen und einen interessanten historischen Exkurs über die Behandlung von Kriegsgefangenen gemacht.

Wahrscheinlich hatte der Präsident das Beispiel Jeffersons im Sinne, der landgräflich hessische Generale wie Geismar als Gäste empfing und auch auf seiner Deutschlandreise später nach Hanau fuhr, um Geismar aufzusuchen. Man wird sich aber vielleicht auch erinnern, dass der Präsident selbst im Zweiten Weltkrieg schon andere Auffassungen vertreten musste, als er sich weigerte, den gefangenen General Arnim in Nordafrika zu empfangen. Die Zeiten haben sich geändert. Alte ritterliche Begriffe existieren nicht mehr, die unsere Vorstellungen, selbst noch in den völkerrechtlichen Abkommen über die Behandlung von Gefangenen beherrscht haben. Unglücklicherweise scheint keine Aussicht zu bestehen, diese Abkommen fernerhin allgemein zur Durchführung zu bringen. Wenn man heute einen Gefangenen gut behandelt, so will man ihn für irgendwelche Zwecke gewinnen. So haben die Russen ihr Spiel mit den deutschen Offizieren getrieben, die vielleicht zur Mehrzahl zuerst nicht ahnten, dass sie nur missbraucht wurden. Wer aber nicht willig ist, wird inquisitorischen Methoden erbarmungslos ausgesetzt wie im Falle Schwable.

Darf man nun leichthin den Stab über unglückliche Menschen brechen, die sich auf dem Schlachtfeld unerschrocken zeigen, aber körperlichen Misshandlungen nicht zu trotzen vermögen? Märtyrer sind selten. In den ersten Jahren des Naziregimes wurden zuweilen noch politische Gefangene nach einer gewisser Zeit aus den Konzentrationslagern und Zuchthäusern entlassen. Zuweilen entkamen solche Entlassenen ins Ausland und berichteten von ihren meist schauerlichen Erlebnissen. Es war eine Qual solche Berichte zu vernehmen, in denen von unvorstellbaren Gewaltakten die Rede war. Es wäre einem unnatürlich, und unmenschlich erschienen, solchen Unglücklichen gar noch Vorhaltungen zu machen, weil sie sich etwa nicht standhaft genug gezeigt hatten. Wer musste sich nicht gestehen, vielleicht selber schwach zu werden, wenn er Foltern unterworfen werden würde!

Von MANFRED GEORGE

Man kann es der Eisenhower-Administration nicht verdenken, wenn sie darüber ihren Unmut äussert, dass die grausige Burleske McCarthys und der sensationslüsternen Mitglieder seines Stabes die Aufmerksamkeit von den schweren Problemen, die die Nation zu lösen hat, ablenkt. Es liegt zweifellos etwas Unwürdiges darin, dass die ganze politische Szene von den Giftwolken vernebelt wird, die ständig aus dem Pfuhl dieses politischen Sumpfes aufsteigen.

Statt dass aber wirklich eindeutig ein Strich unter das Ganze gezogen wurde, ist die Rede des Vizepräsidenten Nixon, die er im Namen des Präsidenten gehalten hat, bei aller ihrer scheinbaren Entschlossenheit mit vielen Zweideutigkeiten belastet gewesen. Nixon ist ein glatter und ehrgeiziger Mann, der an sich Verstand genug hatte, rechtzeitig zu bemerken, dass das Land auf die Dauer nicht die wüsten Parforce-Touren von Erzreaktionären, Abenteurern und Karrieristen, wie sie unter der Fahne des McCarthyismus versammelt sind, ertragen würde. Aber er ist weder entschlossen noch ideenreich genug, um den Präsidenten zu überzeugen, dass man mit dem Grundbösen niemals paktieren kann.

Er spürt auch, dass wenn nicht Wunder geschehen, die republikanischen Mehrheiten im Kongress im Herbst wie Butter vor der Sonne schmelzen dürften. Deshalb wollen er und die Seinen nicht die demagogische Waffe der "zwanzig Jahre demokratischen Verrats und Misswirtschaft", die ihnen McCarthy, Jenner, Dirksen und auch Brownell geschmiedet haben, aufgeben. Mit dreidreiviertel Millionen Arbeitslosen bereits heute und, angesichts der Steuer-Rebellion im Kongress, mit der Aussicht, dass dem Bundesschatzamt ein breites Loch von sieben Milliarden Dollar im kommenden Steuerjahr in seinen Finanzboden gerissen wird, wollen Nixon und seine Freunde im wahrsten Sinne des Wortes "to have their cake and eat it". Sie möchten den McCarthyismus als Wahlwaffe gebrauchen, ohne sich McCarthy persönlich zu verschreiben.

Der Senator von Wisconsin hätte es so leicht haben können, wenn er nicht alles überspannt hätte. Er hätte unseren auch Ehrgeiz und hätte Nixon, Andja können, wenn er nicht durch seine blindwütigen Beleidigungen der Armee und die Herausforderung solcher persönlicher Freunde Eisenhowers wie des Generals Lucius Clay, des Präsidenten der Chase National, John J. McCloy, oder auch des einflussreichen Paul Hoffman, es dem Vizepräsidenten unmöglich gemacht hätte, ihm zur Seite zu stehen. Nixon weiss besser als McCarthy, auf welcher Seite das Brot gebuttert wird. Er erfuhr im Weissen Haus den glühenden Zorn von Milton Eisenhower, dem Bruder des Präsidenten, und wusste auch, wie die übrigen Verwandten Eisenhowers McCarthy und seine Gruppe einschätzten. Musste der Senator von Wisconsin auch noch sein wüstes Pamphlet gegen den "Verräter" George Marshall an die Militär-Bibliotheken des Landes senden? Musste er anordnen, dass sich sein Haupt-Inquisitor, der penetrante Roy Cohn, in ein Duell ohne Pardon mit dem Heer einliess? Wieder zeigte sich, dass das Schicksal die, die es schlagen will, blind macht.

Aber man soll sich hüten zu glauben, dass McCarthy am Ende ist. Cohn und Schine und vielleicht auch Francis Carr, der Dritte in dem unheiligen Bunde im Kampf gegen die Armee, von dem man mit Staunen hört, dass er ein hoher Beamter der New Yorker FBI gewesen ist, werden vielleicht in den Staubwolken der Auseinandersetzung beruflich untergehen — McCarthy wird noch lange nicht seine Sache aufgeben.

Aber etwas Wesentliches ist geschehen: der Bann ist gebrochen, der Bann jener lähmenden Furcht, die McCarthy und die Seinen seit Jahren wie ein erstickendes Tuch über weite Gebiete der öffentlichen Meinung zu breiten versuchten. Grell fallen die Scheinwerfer auf diesen grossen "Säuberer" der jetzt selbst so sehr der Säuberung zu bedürfen beginnt. Es klingt heute schon ganz an-

Paul Ehrlichs Grösse

Von Dr. WILFRED C. HULSE

In diesen Tagen der grossen und ernsten wissenschaftlichen Geburtstagssymposia und der wiedererweckten witzigen Anekdoten und komischen Geschichtchen über den vor hundert Jahren geborenen und vor nahezu vierzig Jahren verstorbenen Professor Ehrlich erhebt sich die Frage in der grossen Welt des Publikums: was ist die Grösse im Werke Ehrlichs, dieses unermüdlichen Arbeiters, dieses ewig ruhelosen Mannes vom Frankfurter Georg Speyer-Institut?

Natürlich weiss jeder, dass er das Salvarsan erfunden hatte! Aber das Salvarsan, Ehrlichs letzte und sensationellste Tat, ist praktisch verschwunden: ist unnötig geworden. Die viel seltener gewordene Syphilis wird heute früh und schnell mit Penicillin und seinen Verwandten, den verschiedenen Antibiotics, behandelt. Ehrlichs Name und Ruf aber haben das Produkt seines Erfindergeistes überlebt. Warum das so ist, verdient einige Augenblicke der Erinnerung!

Nahezu zwanzig Jahre, ehe er das Salvarsan fand, hatte Ehrlich seinen Namen bereits tief in die Tafeln der Geschichte der Medizin eingegraben — er hatte die immunisierenden Kräfte des Organismus erforscht, hatte aus der Idee von Behrings eine praktische Wissenschaft von den schützenden Kräften des menschlichen und tierischen Körpers geschaffen. Er hatte gefunden und gelehrt, wie diese Kräfte verstärkt und provoziert werden und zur Vorbeugung und zur ders, wenn etwa die Ortsgruppe der "Veterans of Foreign Wars" im Geburtsort des von McCarthy so schmählich beleidigten Generals Zwicker eine Resolution gegen den Senator, das bisherige Ideal der grossen Kriegsteilnehmer-Verbände, annimmt, in der es als Begründung heisst:

"Fair Is Fair"

"Senator McCarthy schied auf eigenen Wunsch bereits aus dem Militärdienst aus, als seine Kameraden vom Marine-Korps noch viele blutige Kämpfe im Pazifik zu bestehen hatten. Senator McCarthy hat Behauptungen über erlittene Verwundungen gemacht, die er in Wirklichkeit nie erhalten hat. Er hat sich auf Bildern und in Reden als Maschinengewehr-Schütze im Flugzeug dargestellt, während er als Nachrichten-Offizier im Büro verwandt wurde. Er hat falsche Behauptungen aufgestellt, als er veröffentlichte, dass er als Gemeiner ins Heer eintrat, während er in Wirklichkeit als commissioned officer begann. Er hat ständig versucht, Orden und Auszeichnungen durchzusetzen, ohne dass die Vorgesetzten ihn dafür eingereicht hatten, usw."

Der grosse Joe wird in diesen Scheinwerfern ein kleiner, böser Zwerg. Es war peinlich für ihn, dass er an dem Tage, da er die Klage gegen Senator Benton zurückzog und mit der Behauptung kniff, dass niemand Benton glaube, von einflussreichen Persönlichkeiten auch in Zeitungen veröffentlichte Briefe erhielt, in dem diese versicherten, dass sie jede Anschuldigung Bentons gegen McCarthy glaubten und McCarthys Klage entgegensähen.

McCarthy hat bis heute auch noch nicht die berühmte Artikelserie des Verlegers der "Las Vegas Sun", Hank Greenspun, beantwortet, in der Greenspun verklagt, [illegible] die sieben Aufsätze des mutigen nevadischen Chefredakteurs (übrigens auch eines Erzfeindes des demokratischen Ichthyosaurus McCarran) Behauptungen und Enthüllungen enthalten, die kein anderer Mensch unbestritten würde hingehen lassen. Ganz abgesehen davon, dass Greenspun zum ersten Mal der Welt erzählt, dass McCarthy — ganz genau wie viele seiner erbarmungslos und oft sinnlos blossgestellten Opfer — in seiner Jugend ein radikaler New Deal-Demokrat gewesen ist, der im Lande mit Reden gegen die "Hoover Depression" herumfuhr und bei vielen als ein verkappter Kommunist galt, werden beunruhigende Einzelheiten über seine Handlungen, Neigungen, Mitarbeiter bis ins Einzelne belegt. Besonders interessant ist auch die Entlarvung, dass einer seiner Haupt-Assistenten, Don Surine, aus der FBI herausgeflogen ist. Ein anderer Assistent ist wegen seines Verhaltens 1950 von der Polizei in Washington aufgegriffen worden, wieder ein anderer wurde "dishonorably" aus der Flotte entlassen, war ein ehemaliger Kommunist und wurde dann ebenfalls ein Stab-Mitglied McCarthys. Ueber Dr. J. B. Matthews, der später das Velde Committee mit seinem Angriff gegen die protestantische Kirche in schwerste Verlegenheit brachte, ist oft genug geschrieben worden. Manche Vertraute der Washingtoner Szene werden sich übrigens daran erinnern, dass derselbe Matthews einmal von dem Kongressmann Martin Dies, dem Vater aller "Ausschüsse gegen unamerikanische Tätigkeiten", herausgeworfen worden ist. So könnte man stundenlang fortfahren. Cohn und Schine gehören in eine andere Kategorie, ausser dass diese beiden "Katzenjammer-Kids" bei aller sogenannten juristischen "Bildung" menschlich und geistig ebenso unreif sind wie ihr Herr und Meister.

"How Deep Do You Think It Goes?"

Die Scheinwerfer sind angedreht. Sie werden angedreht bleiben. Da aber McCarthy und Cohn ihre Taktik aus den totalitären Lehrbüchern gelernt haben, werden sie mit der Verzweiflung des gestellten Wildes angreifen. Es dürfte wahrscheinlich sein, dass das grosse Ablenkungs-Manöver, das McCarthy versuchen wird, ein konzentrischer Angriff — zusammen mit Fulton Lewis Junior, Walter Winchell, Westbrook Pegler, der China Lobby, den Leuten hinter "Human Events" und anderen Elementen — auf den Staatssekretär Dulles sein wird. Ausbrechen wird der Kampf, wenn Dulles den bereits achtmal offiziell als loyal erklärten Diplomaten John Paton Davies ebenfalls für unschuldig erklären wird. Davies ist bekanntlich der Sündenbock, der von McCarthy und den Seinen als Hauptschuldiger an der China-Politik Trumans und Achesons bezeichnet wird. Es besteht kaum ein Zweifel, dass Davies immer ein völlig loyaler Beamter war.

Aber was gilt Unschuld, was ist Gerechtigkeit, was bedeutet Loyalität in einer Atmosphäre, wie sie vom McCarthyismus geschaffen worden ist? Vizepräsident Nixon hat ganz recht: servieren wir die McCarthy, Cohn und Genossen raschestens ab und kümmern wir uns nicht mehr um sie. Wir haben Wichtigeres zu tun. Aber servieren wir sie wirklich ab und drohen wir nicht wie Nixon mit dem Oberlehrer-Finger. Ein Tadel wegen schlechten Betragens und 15 Minuten in der Ecke nach Schulschluss — das sind Massnahmen, die in diesem Falle nicht ausreichen.

Spanischer Arbeiterführer zu Tode gefoltert

In einigen spanischen Städten, Madrid, Barcelona und Bilbao, wurden kürzlich zahlreiche Mitglieder der Freien Gewerkschaften verhaftet und im Gefängnis peinlichen Verhören unterworfen. Es handelt sich fast nur um Eisenbahner, die politisch zur Sozialdemokratie gehören, wie auch die illegalen Gewerkschaften sozialdemokratisch sind. Aus Madrid wurde die Nachricht verbreitet, die verhafteten Gewerkschaftler hätten grosse Summen aus dem Ausland erhalten, um eine umstürzlerische Tätigkeit zu entfalten. Der Sekretär der Gewerkschaftsgruppe Tomas Centeno, soll im Gefängnis an "inneren Blutungen" gestorben sein.

Wie das Nachrichtenblatt der International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (New York, 20 West 40th Street) mitteilt, wurde Centeno am 15. Februar am Krankenbett seiner Frau in einer Klinik verhaftet und starb nach fünf Tagen im Gefängnis. Sein Leichnam wurde der Familie überlassen. Aerzte stellten Brüche und schwere Verletzungen fest, Spuren von Martern, denen Centeno ausgesetzt worden sein muss. Die Gelder, die nach der Madrider Meldung angeblich aus dem Ausland stammten, waren von Mitgliedern der Gewerkschaftsgruppe freiwillig aufgebracht worden. (k)

Paul Ehrlich wurde zum Vater der modernen Immunisationslehre, ihrer Antitoxine und Vakcine, all der verschiedenen vorbeugenden und heilenden Einspritzungen, die unter diesem Namen Gemeingut der ärztlichen Praxis geworden sind. Seine Seitenkettentheorie, zunächst als eine interessante wissenschaftliche Spielerei und Phantasie betrachtet, hat die Jahrzehnte überlebt und ist nicht nur die Grundlage der Immunisierungslehre, sondern auch der modernen Allergieforschung geworden.

Das sogenannte Salvarsan aber, Ehrlich-Hota 606 — das sechshundertundsechste Produkt einer mühevollen Reihe wissenschaftlicher Experimente — ist mehr als eine Medizin für Syphilis. Es ist das erste wirksame Produkt eines neuen medizinischen Zeitalters, der Chemotherapie, einer systematischen Lehre von der Krankheitsbekämpfung durch chemische Produkte. Ehrlich selbst konnte nicht ahnen, dass die Infektionskrankheiten aller Art, die Malaria, die Schlafkrankheit und schliesslich, mit den Sulfadrogen auch die Coccen und Bakterien, die Erreger der Lungen- und Gehirnhautentzündungen, der Ohr- und der Hautinfektionen, kurz, alle infektiösen Prozesse wirksam durch chemische Produkte geheilt werden können.

Das wiedererweckte Interesse für Chemotherapie brachte uns schliesslich die halbvergessenen Antibiotics, das Penicillin und Streptomycin und all die anderen, die zur täglichen Waffe des praktischen Arztes geworden sind. Die moderne Therapie der ansteckenden Krankheiten und ihre Vorbeugung gehören zu den grossen Triumphen zeitgenössischer Medizin.

Ihre schnelle Entwicklung und ihre Erfolge wären ohne die Entdeckungen Paul Ehrlichs undenkbar. Darin ist seine Grösse begründet. Sie wird auch die nächsten hundert Jahre überleben!

machen, zuweilen zog jemand den Tod vor, bevor er den Mund öffnete. Die Literatur ist voll von solchen Berichten, und kein anderer als Arthur Koestler, der körperlich nicht gefoltert worden ist, hat die seelische Verfassung eines politischen Gefangenen in seinem "Spanischen Testament" erregend geschildert. Man wünschte dies schon vergessene Buch, das wahrscheinlich manchen heute nicht mehr zeitgemäss erscheint, würde von jenen wieder gelesen werden, die sich mit dem Fall Schwable beschäftigen.

Damals hat man aber auch schon höchst befremdliche Erfahungen machen müssen. Von kommunistischer Seite wurde damals unbarmherzig über Menschen der Stab gebrochen, die in der Haft schwach geworden waren, und das Buch Koestlers wurde von kommunistischer Seite diffamiert. Man brach den Stab auch über Menschen, die bei ihrer Freilassung einen Revers unterzeichnet hatten, sich fortan als "loyale Bürger "zu benehmen und nichts über ihre Erlebnisse in der Haft laut werden zu lassen. Solche Menschen wurden damals von den Kommunisten in Acht und Bann getan, und manche sind in Moskau als "Agenten" erschossen worden.

Sollte man in Erinnerung an diese kommunistischen Methoden nicht mehr Verständnis für das Verhalten von Gefangenen in totalitären Händen zeigen?

Ergänzung

In dem Nachruf auf Gustav Warsweiler, den wir in der letzten Nummer des "Aufbau" brachten, ist durch ein Versehen des Setzers der Name von Rabbiner Dr. Max Gruenewald, der die Hauptansprache auf der Trauerfeier hielt, ausgelassen worden.

Dear Mr. Murrow:-

I am enclosing one of my editorials which appears in today's issue of our paper. Please do not examine it too closely for literary imperfections since I was pressed for time when writing it.

My only reason for sending it to you is to show you where one Canadian newspaper stands on "McCarthyism." I do not know what you Americans are going to do about this man McCarthy. We, in Canada, are concerned, because any major issue which affects your great country in any way also affects us. And something should be done--and soon.

Naturally, we follow carefully the major addresses of your President. But, frankly, many of us in this country are beginning to feel that nice-sounding words which are not implemented by action are worse than no words at all. Some of us are losing faith in those impressive, carefully chosen words.

I enjoy your commentaries tremendously. Keep up the good work.

Yours sincerely,

J. C. Lewis

My Dear Mr. Murrow,

Your "See It Now" study of Sen. McCarthy may, in the final analysis, represent one of the turning points in his heinous career. Your ability to reach the so-called average man, who may not be enlightened by The New York Times and similar responsible publications--and who must eventually make the final decision on McCarthy--must certainly have exercised a tremendous effect in alerting the public to McCarthy's evil and corrosive philosophy.

Enclosed is an editorial I wrote for The Record, which more fully explains my sentiments on the great service you have rendered the cause of freedom. I have always felt the warmest admiration for your work, and I am certain that your already high stature must have been increased in the eyes of the American public.

Confident that you will not be dismayed by the senator's loathesome attacks upon your loyalty, I look forward to your continued efforts against the cancerous growth of McCarthyism. Again, my congratulations for a magnificent job.

Very truly yours,

Sal Foderaro

Mr. Murrow Speaks Up

Edward R. Murrow, one of the nation's most respected news commentators, placed his career on the line Tuesday night when he presented a critical portrait of Sen. McCarthy on his television show, "See It Now." And in so doing, he reaffirmed his devotion to those high standards of journalism which have been the hallmark of his career.

To denounce so emphatically a controversial individual like McCarthy, in the face of the senator's own considerable power and his vast and vociferous group of admirers, required no little courage. Bigger men than Murrow have strangely disappeared from the public scene, or have lived to regret the day they tangled with the Wisconsin senator. In this regard, a salute for bravery — if nothing else — must go to Mr. Murrow; his producer, Fred W. Friendly; and his sponsor, the Aluminum Company of America.

In his superb merger of word and picture, and relying primarily on film excerpts of the senator's own speeches, Mr. Murrow rendered a service to the nation which, eventually, can only add to his already considerable stature in the broadcasting-journalism field.

Subscribing to the theory that the senator is his own worst enemy, Mr. Murrow's aim during the program was "to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature." No more damning indictment of the senator could be presented than this — to show him as he is.

The importance of the televised unmasking of the senator's activities was highlighted by the very nature of the medium in which it was offered. Mr. Murrow was thus able to reach to the very heart of America, parading McCarthy's shoddy record into the homes of millions of viewers across the country. Thus, the great mass of the people — who either do not have access to, or do not bother to learn the facts as long published in many

The importance of the televised unmasking of the senator's activities was highlighted by the very nature of the medium in which it was offered. Mr. Murrow was thus able to reach to the very heart of America, parading McCarthy's shoddy record into the homes of millions of viewers across the country. Thus, the great mass of the people — who either do not have access to, or do not bother to learn the facts as long published in many newspapers — were provided a brilliant crystallization of the menace of McCarthyism in all its tortuous and labyrinthine courses.

The torrents of wires and phone calls which flooded the Columbia Broadcasting System testify to the program's tremendous appeal, and the overwhelming approval of the reaction will, we hope, inspire Mr. Murrow to continue the good fight.

Portions of the films and tape-recordings used ranged from repugnant to frightening. Thus, when the senator was shown grilling a witness, the leering, almost sadistic countenance was brought before the merciless eye of the close-up lens. McCarthy's infamous "Alger — I mean Adlai" speech, delivered late in the campaign, was exposed for the base and despicable lie it was. Other sections of the program revealed McCarthy's incomparable dexterity in the technique of the half-truth. Mr. Murrow called the turn when he said the senator employs half-truths as "staple."

Mr. Murrow said that this is a time for all to speak out, whether they favor or oppose the senator. He reminded his audience that this nation was not founded by fearful men, and that fear has no place in this country today. He asserted that McCarthy's "primary achievement has been in confusing the public mind as between the internal and the external threats of Communism." This, of course, has been the chariot on which the senator stormed to power.

Mr. Murrow's courageous stand on McCarthy, coming at a time when the senator is challenging even the administrative functions of the President, is most expedient. He has dared stand up where others are cowed into silence. He has struck a telling blow in the struggle to restore honesty and responsibility to the American scene. In that, he has served the highest aims of a free and enlightened press.

Sen. McCarthy's petulant reaction to the network's granting of free air time to the Republican National Committee in order to answer Adlai Stevenson's attack is another example of his modus operandi. In the course of his running fight with the Federal Communications Commission, NBC and CBS, the senator voiced, what seems to us, a highly significant statement.

He said that if F.C.C. regulations do not entitle him to free time, then "the rules have got to be changed."

The remark characterizes McCarthy's entire philosophy in a remarkable way. To brand this view glaringly hostile to the American tradition of fair play and sportsmanship is unnecessary.

Apparently, the senator will have to learn the hard way those principles of abiding by rules and accepting reversals which every schoolboy absorbs in the sandlot and playground.

He will also have to learn that here in America we don't "change the rules" for him or anyone else.

M'Carthy Indicts Self on Murrow 'Show'

Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now" program on WCBS-TV this week took a critical, but utterly fair, look at Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy. The network reported the following day that the program had received more audience response, most of it favorable, than any other show in its history. For the enlightenment of those who missed the program, The Herald reprints the script with very slight abridgment.

MURROW: Because a report on Senator McCarthy is by definition controversial we want to say exactly what we mean to say and I request your permission to read from the script whatever remarks Murrow and Friendly may make. If the Senator believes we have done violence to his words or pictures and desires to speak, to answer himself, an opportunity will be afforded him on this program.

EDWARD R. MURROW

Our working thesis tonight is this question:

"If this fight against Communism is made a fight against America's two great political parties the American people know that one of these parties will be destroyed and the Republic cannot endure very long as a one party system."

We applaud that statement and we think Senator McCarthy ought to. He said it, 17 months ago in Milwaukee.

McCARTHY: The American people realize this cannot be made a fight between America's two great political parties. If this fight against Communism is made a fight between America's two great political parties the American people know that one of those parties will be destroyed and the Republic cannot endure very long as a one party system.

MURROW: Thus on Feb. 4, 1954, Senator McCarthy spoke of one party's treason. This was at Charleston, West Virginia, where there were no cameras running. It was recorded on tape.

McCARTHY: The issue between the Republicans and Democrats is clearly drawn. It has been deliberately drawn by those who have been in charge of 20 years of treason. The hard fact is—the hard fact is that those who wear the label, those who wear the label Democrat wear it with the stain of a historic betrayal.

MURROW: Seventeen months ago Candidate Eisenhower met Senator McCarthy in Green Bay, Wis., and he laid down the ground rules on how he would meet Communism if elected.

EISENHOWER: This is a pledge I make. If I am charged by you people to be the responsible head of the Executive Department it will be my initial responsibility to see that subversion, disloyalty, is kept out of the Executive Department. We will always appreciate and welcome Congressional investigations but the responsibility will rest squarely on the shoulders of the Executive and I hold that there are ample powers in the government to get rid of these people if the Executive Department is really concerned in doing it. We can do it with absolute assurance.

(APPLAUSE)

This is America's principle: Trial by jury, of the innocent until proved guilty, and I expect to stand to do it.

MURROW: That same night in Milwaukee, Senator McCarthy stated what he would do if the General was elected.

McCARTHY: I spent about a half hour with the General last night. While I can't—while I can't report that we agreed entirely on everything—I can report that when I left that meeting with the General, I had the same feeling as when I went in, and that is that he is a great American, and will make a great President, an outstanding President. But I want to tell you tonight, tell the American people as long as I represent you and the rest of the American people in the Senate, I shall continue to call them as I see them regardless of who happens to be President.

McCARTHY: A few days ago I read that President Eisenhower expressed the hope that by election time in 1954 the subject of Communism would be a dead and forgotten issue. The raw, harsh unpleasant fact is that Communism is an issue and wi issue in 1954.

MURROW: In Philadelphia, on Washington's Birthday, 1954, his heart was so full he could talk. He reviewed some of the General Zwicker testimony and proved he hadn't abused him.

McCARTHY: Nothing is more serious than a traitor to this country in the Communist conspiracy. Question: Do you think standing up is more serious than being a traitor to the country and a part of the Communist conspiracy?

Answer: That, sir, was not my decision.

Shall we go on to that for a while? I hate to impose on your time. I just got two pages. This is the abuse which is . . . the meat of abuse, this is the Official reporter's record of the hearing. After he said he wouldn't remove that General from the Army who cleared Communists, I said: "Then General, you should be removed from any Command. Any man who has been given the honor of being promoted to General, and who says 'I will protect another general who protects Communists,' is not fit to wear that uniform, General."

(APPLAUSE)

"I think it is a tremendous disgrace to the Army to have to bring these facts before the public but I intend to give it to the public, General, I have a duty to do that. I intend to repeat to the press exactly what you said so that you can know that and be back here to hear it, General."

And wait 'til you hear the bleeding hearts scream and cry about our methods of trying to drag the truth from those who know, or should know, who covered up a Fifth Amendment Communist Major. But they say, "Oh, it's all right to uncover them but don't get rough doing it, McCarthy."

MURROW: But two days later, Secretary Stevens and the Senator had lunch, agreed on a memorandum of understanding, disagreed on what the small type said.

STEVENS: I shall never accede to the abuse of Army personnel under any circumstances including committee hearings. I shall not accede to them being browbeaten or humiliated. In the light of those assurances although I did not propose cancellation of the hearing, I acceded to it. If it had not been for these assurances, I would never have entered into any agreement whatsoever.

MURROW: Then President Eisenhower issued a statement that his advisers thought censored the Senator, but the Senator saw it as another victory, called the entire Zwicker case "a tempest in a teapot."

McCARTHY: If a stupid, arrogant or witless man in a position of power appears before our Committee and is found aiding the Commun— Party, he will be exposed. The fact that he might be a General places him in no special class as far as I am concerned. Apparently — apparently, the President and I now agree on the necessity of getting rid of Communists. We apparently disagree only on how we should handle those who protect Communists. When the shouting and the tumult dies the American people and the President will realize that this unprecedented mud slinging against the Committee by the extreme left wing elements of press and radio were caused solely because another Fifth Amendment Communist was finally dug out of the dark recesses and exposed to the public view.

MURROW: Senator McCarthy claims that only the left wing press criticized him on the Zwicker case. Of the 50 large circulation newspapers in the country, these are the left wing papers that criticized. These are the ones which supported him. The ratio is about three to one against the Senator. Now let us look at some of these left wing papers that criticized the Senator.

The Chicago Tribune: McCarthy will better serve his cause if he learns to distinguish the role of investigator from the role of avenging angel.

The New York Times: The unwarranted interference of a demagogue—a domestic Munich.

The Times Herald, Washington: Senator McCarthy's behavior toward Zwicker is not justified.

The Herald Tribune of New York: McCarthyism involves assault on Republican assets.

Milwaukee Journal: The line must be drawn and defended or McCarthy will become the government.

The Evening Star of Washington: It was a bad day for everyone who resents and detests the bully boy tactics which Senator McCarthy often employs.

The New York World Telegram: Bamboozling, bludgeoning, distorting.

St. Louis Post Dispatch: Unscrupulous bullying. What tragic irony—the President's advisers keep him from doing whatever decent instinct must command him to do.

That is the ratio from three to one of the left wing press.

There was one other interesting quote on the Zwicker controversy, and it came from the Senator himself.

McCARTHY: May I say that I was extremely shocked when I heard that Secretary Stevens told two Army officers they had to take part in the cover up of those who promoted and coddled Communists. As I read his statement, I thought of the quotation, "On what meat doth this, our Caesar, feed?"

MURROW: And upon what meat does Sen. McCarthy feed? Two of the staples of his diet are the investigations (protected by immunity) and the half truth. We herewith submit samples of both. First, the half truth. This was an attack on Adlai Stevenson at the end of the '52 campaign. President Eisenhower, it must be said, had no prior knowledge of it.

McCARTHY: I perform this unpleasant task because the American people are entitled to have the coldly documented history of this man who says he wants to be your President. But strangely, Alger—I mean Adlai . . . but let's move on to another part of the jigsaw puzzle. While you may think that there can be no connection between the debonair Democrat candidate and a dilapidated Massachusetts barn, I want to show you a picture of this barn and explain the connection. Here is the outside of the barn. Give me the picture of the inside of the barn. Here is the outside of the barn at Lee, Mass. It looks as though it couldn't house a farmer's cow or goat. Here's the inside (showing a picture). A beautiful, paneled conference room with maps of the Soviet Union. What way does Stevenson tie up with that?

My—my investigators went out and took pictures of the barn after we had been tipped off what was in it. Tipped off that there was in this barn all the missing documents from the Communist front—IPR. The IPR which was named by the McCarran Committee—named before the McCarran Committee as a coverup for Communist espionage. Let's take a look at the photostat of the document taken from the Massachusetts barn. One of those documents which was never supposed to see the light of day. Rather interesting it is. This is a document which shows that Alger Hiss and Frank Coe recommended Adlai Stevenson to the Mount Tremblant Conference which was called for the purpose of establishing foreign policy—post-war policy in Asia. As you know, Alger Hiss is a convicted traitor, Frank Coe is a man who has been named under oath before the Congressional Committee seven times as a member of the Communist Party. Why, why Hiss and Coe find that Adlai Stevenson is the man they want representing them at this conference? I don't know. Perhaps Adlai knows.

MURROW: But Sen. McCarthy didn't permit his audience to hear the entire paragraph. This is the official record of the McCarran hearings and anyone could have bought it for two dollars. Quote: "Another possibility for the Mount Tremblant Conferences on Asia is someone from Knox' office or Stimson's office." (Frank Knox was our wartime Secretary of the Navy; Henry Stimson our Secretary of the Army, both distinguished Republicans). Coe and Hiss mentioned Adlai Stevenson, one of Knox' special assistants, and Harvey Bundy, former Assistant Secretary of State under Hoover, and now assistant to Stimson because of their jobs.

We read from this documented record not in defense of Mr. Stevenson, but in defense of truth. Specifically, Mr. Stevenson's identification with that red barn was no more, no less than that of Knox, Stimson or Bundy. It should be stated that Mr. Stevenson was once a member of the Institute of Pacific Relations. But so were such other loyal Americans as Sen. Ferguson, John Foster Dulles, Paul Hoffman, Henry Luce and Herbert F. Hoover. Their association carries with it no guilt, and that barn has nothing to do with any of them.

(Murrow then discussed the now infamous McCarthy hearing involving Reed Harris, an official of the U. S. Information program. It has been deleted, reluctantly, by the editors because of space limitations.)

MURROW: Now let us try to bring the McCarthy story a little more up to date. Two years ago Sen. Benton of Connecticut accused McCarthy of apparent perjury, unethical practice and perpetrating a hoax on the Senate. McCarthy sued for two million dollars. Last week he dropped the case saying no one could be found who believed Benton's story. Several volunteers have come forward saying they believe it in its entirety.

Today Sen. McCarthy says he's going to get a lawyer and force the networks to give him time to reply to Adlai Stevenson's speech. Earlier, the Senator asked, "upon what meat does this our Caesar feed." Had he looked three lines earlier in Shakespeare's Caesar he would have found this line, which is not altogether inappropriate: "The fault, dear Brutus is not in our stars but in ourselves."

No one familiar with the history of this country can deny that Congressional committees are useful. It is necessary to investigate before legislating, but the line between investigation and persecuting is a very fine one and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly. His primary achievement has been in confusing the public mind as between internal and the external threat of Communism. We must not confuse dissent with disloyalty. We must remember always that accusation is not proof and that conviction depends upon evidence and due process of law. We will not walk in fear, one of another. We will not be driven by fear into an age of unreason if we dig deep in our history and our doctrine, and remember that we are not descended from fearful men, not from men who feared to write, to speak, to associate and to defend causes which were for the moment unpopular.

This is no time for men who oppose Sen. McCarthy's methods to keep silent, or for those who approve. We can deny our heritage and our history but we cannot escape responsibility for the result. There is no way for a citizen of a republic to abdicate his responsibilities. As a nation we have come into our full inheritance at a tender age. We proclaim ourselves, as indeed we are, the defenders of freedom, what's left of it, but we cannot defend freedom abroad by deserting it at home. The actions of the junior senator from Wisconsin have caused alarm and dismay amongst our allies abroad and given considerable comfort to our enemies, and whose fault is that? Not really his, he didn't create this situation of fear, he merely exploited it and rather successfully. Cassius was right, "The fault, dear Brutus is not in our stars, but in ourselves."

Good night, and good luck.

Dear Ed:

The biggest news, certainly from the standpoint of impact, to hit Britain in some time was the report of your TV show re Senator McCarthy (I thought you might be interested in the page 1 story attached, from the "News Chronicle" which was perhaps the outstanding "play" given by the British press, although most of the London dailies carried the story, at least briefly. It also got heavy play in the BBC Newscast this morning.).

This is a request that I am hoping against hope you can fulfill -- I would love to have a telefilm of your show for viewing here. I would particularly like to show it to the Ambassador who read the British reports of your show with great interest.

If such a film is available and I could borrow it, I would make whatever arrangements you required gladly and would have it shipped over and back via diplomatic pouch. Will you let me know please, as soon as possible ?

Incidentally, the Aidan Crawley Series, in which I understand you aided tremendously, have had a tremendous effect here -- particularly the last two having to do with the Junior Senator from Wisconsin.

My love to Janet.

Hopefully,

Joe.

12,000 ring up Ed Murrow

By ROBERT WAITHMAN

IN the news from America last night was an intimation that Mr. Edward R. Murrow was taking Senator McCarthy apart.

It said that 12,000 excited telegrams and telephone calls had come in from television fans all over the United States who had seen him do it.

Edward R. Murrow, one of the world's best radio commentators, is the man who made the London blitz understood in America. Night after night, in the war years, the Americans waited for him, and for his opening words:

This . . . is London.

And then the Americans would hear, over Murrow's microphones, the wail of the sirens, the clattering of feet in the dark streets, the noises of the A.A. guns and the clump of bombs.

There was nothing quite like Murrow's broadcasts; and they always began: This . . . is London.

In America now millions tune in to this programme "See It Now."

Ed Murrow this week ran extracts from the film the B.B.C. recently showed on television: the grilling of a U.S. Information Services official about a book he wrote in 1932—a classic piece of bullying and bluster.

This . . . was McCarthy.

Ed chipped in to prove that a statement McCarthy made in the course of that performance was, in plain language, a lie.

Half-truths

He followed this up with recordings of McCarthy's voice, uttering his own particular brand of half-truth; and he went back to a film in which President Eisenhower was seen making a promise—that he and his Administration would deal with the Communists-in-Government—which McCarthy was defying.

McCarthy was seen making the familiar claim that those who opposed him were the negligible "Left-wing" Press. Murrow then demonstrated that the Press on the far Right were denouncing the witch-hunting senator.

"His primary achievement," said Murrow, "has been in confusing the public mind. We proclaim ourselves, as indeed we are, the defenders of freedom. But we cannot defend freedom abroad by deserting it at home!"

Ed Murrow is not only the star broadcaster but also a high executive of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Took a risk

Never before has any network departed from the strict impartiality which is enjoined upon it by American law.

Murrow met the letter of the law by offering McCarthy facilities to reply.

BUT HE HAS TAKEN A RISK THAT NO OTHER NETWORK SO FAR HAS BEEN PREPARED TO CONSIDER.

Perhaps the way was opened by Mr. Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic Party leader, when he made one of America's historic political speeches on the McCarthy issue last Saturday.

Perhaps the dam which has held back the protests of the affronted millions in America—for it has been a dangerous thing to oppose McCarthy—is now breaking.

There was some sign last night that McCarthy was aware of the danger.

After lunching with the Secretary of Defence, Mr. Charles Wilson, McCarthy sounded placatory, even humble.

"I agree one hundred per cent. with Secretary Wilson that the Army, as such, isn't coddling Communists," he declared. "Ninety-nine per cent.—maybe higher than that—of military personnel are good, loyal Americans."

Party split?

That wasn't what he said not many days ago when, riding high, he was insulting and brow-beating an Army general.

President Eisenhower is now facing the possibility that his party, the Republicans, may be split and discredited—in advance of next November's Congressional elections—over the question whether to cash McCarthy's following or

Dear Ed,

Thought you'd be interested in Boston reaction to your McCarthy piece on See It Now----particularly because Boston didn't "see it."

United Press next day led it's radio world news roundups (enclosed) with story. I used it pretty much asw was. Immediately we were flooded with phone calls wanting to know why Boston was again left out in the cold; why Bostpn couldn't see such programs.

Ratio of calls-Pro-Murrow and why can't we see him.....about 50.

Pro-McCarthy.....exactly 2 (cranks who said we were again McCarthy because he is a Catholic.

Mr. Edward R. Murrow,

New York, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Murrow:

Congratulations on your splendid handling of McCarthy Tuesday night. It was the most effective thing I've seen on a subject that needs much more treatment than it has been getting.

I hope to see your documentary rerun over the country. It deserves it -- and the country needs it. It was a supremely fair presentation and the fact that the net result was devastating to Joe is on Joe's own head.

I thought you might be interested in the way we handled the story of your program. I also thought you might be interested in the editorial we published today -- the latest of many in which we have dealt with our national headache.

Again, congratulations. It seems to me that the timing was perfect -- that you gave a push just as there is hope that the tide may be turning.

Best personal regards,

Will Eisenhower Stop Senator McCarthy's Drive for Power?

President Eisenhower and his administration face a choice: Curb Senator McCarthy or become subservient to him, little by little.

Once such a situation would have seemed incredible. It is no longer so. McCarthy, with the help of some in his party and the timid acquiescence of many of the others in it, has become a power which threatens to split or take over the Republican party. Either would be fatal to the GOP.

The record is clear for the president to see.

McCarthy undermined the state department under Truman. He continues under Eisenhower to sow distrust in the men and policies upon which our security rests.

He continues and intensifies his campaign to destroy confidence in the army and our military leaders.

He bullies, accuses and smears our allies to the point of endangering our place as leader of the free world.

He has become a symbol of the kind of America that suspicious foreigners fear and that the Communists picture in their propaganda.

He has shouldered himself into a major political position. If the Republicans win in the fall he will claim the credit. If they lose, he will blame Eisenhower for not peddling the McCarthy brand of political carbon monoxide.

He seems to be able to get large sums of money, particularly oil money, for his purposes.

He has a large following, including unreasoning groups who are impervious to facts and blind to the significance of his drive for power. He has the backing of many who put political party success above national good. He has frightened many opponents into silence.

He has proved time and again that it is dangerous to brush his incredible antics aside in the belief that, "given enough rope, he will hang himself."

He is giving every indication of setting up Eisenhower himself as a prime target for 1955 or 1956.

tics of his own party. He fights administration supporters. His part in the current attempt to defeat Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine is an example.

An administration that wants to curb McCarthy—as this one must if it is not to come apart at the seams—would root out his henchmen in government agencies.

It would tolerate no spies, no one whose loyalty went not to the administration, but to McCarthy.

It would send down firm notice that all officials were to refuse to knuckle under to McCarthy and that they would get White House backing.

It would fight for its own supporters who came under McCarthy's unjustified attack.

It would deny McCarthy influence in appointments — whether for the federal marshal's job in Milwaukee or a switchboard operator's in the state department.

It would assert such leadership that there would be no void into which McCarthy could move.

President Eisenhower need have no illusion that he can appease, or work with, McCarthy or that he is personally safe from a smear. As early as June 14, 1950, in one of his shameful attacks on Gen. Marshall as a front for traitors, McCarthy charged that Marshall "unflaggingly opposed" methods that could win the war in north Africa, Sicily and Italy. He added that "in all these attitudes, Eisenhower . . . was Marshall's firm supporter."

Eisenhower has seen McCarthy pillory one after another of his friends and associates. He has heard McCarthy charge that the administration's "batting average is zero" in anti-Communist cases. He has seen McCarthy snicker at the president's infrequent attempts to criticize impersonally some of McCarthy's reckless actions. He has experienced the blast of McCarthy's ridicule and irresponsible innuendo, as in the Stevens-McCarthy clash.

Now there are indications that McCarthy investigators are at work assembling information on alleged Communist activities in the military government of Germany in 1945-'46, when Eisenhower was in command there. Does anyone doubt who the target will be if and when it suits McCarthy's purpose?

McCarthy has won every skirmish with the president since the day he talked Eisenhower into changing his campaign speech given in Milwaukee in 1952. Who can doubt that he intends, in the end, to triumph over Eisenhower completely?

If McCarthy succeeds, the Republican party will be split wide open.

Even if no split comes, McCarthy tactics can lead to political defeat for the Republicans—for these tactics can block any successful Republican program. He has managed for months to keep the mind of the nation, the congress and the administration off the Eisenhower

Carthy?

By stopping the refrain that they have the same aim as McCarthy—rooting out Communists. That's not McCarthy's primary aim. His aim is power for McCarthy.

By stopping the refrain that McCarthy has alerted the nation to communism. He hasn't. Others have found Communists. McCarthy has mostly created bogeymen or rehashed work others have done. To give him credit for rooting out communism is, in the words of Elmer Davis, like saying that "nothing brings the danger of fire more to the attention of the public than turning in false alarms all over town."

By labeling McCarthy for what he is—the destroyer of confidence in American leaders and American government. This cannot be done, as Atty. Gen. Brownell and others have tried, by out-McCarthying McCarthy. It cannot be done if the GOP, through its national committee, persists in giving McCarthy the office of St. George and sending him forth to slay dragons he has created and to smear many good Americans.

Next, the president and his administration can prune McCarthy's power by nipping its roots wherever it has crept into government through patronage or intimidation.

That source of McCarthy's power has been created with the help of the administration. The president named a McCarthy friend to the important federal communications commission, for instance. McCarthy threatens and harasses radio and television networks for free time to which he has no right. He has become a useful agent for persons seeking FCC favors.

The state department offers another example. R. W. Scott McLeod, another McCarthy "friend," is security officer there. He has been given his own private FBI, of 176 persons, outside of civil service, with which he can carry on McCarthy's campaign of intimidation, fear and destruction of state department morale.

McCarthy spies exist in department after department. His committee has a welcome mat for any jealous, disgruntled or incompetent employe who wishes to offer up his department head or associates to bullying and smear. The official who refuses to "yes" McCarthy is pilloried, and —up to now—has not been able to count on White House backing.

Through under the counter deals, intimidation, and this personal spy system, McCarthy has had access to FBI reports, personnel records, income tax reports and other supposedly secret files. He has gotten his hands on private mail and the contents of private wastebaskets. His sources of information run even into the White House.

This spy system extends abroad. Embassies, consulates, American foreign operations of all kinds—and even officials of foreign governments—have been questioned and spied upon by agents seeking grist for McCarthy's scandal mill.

Finally, McCarthy interferes in the poli-

It is time for President [illegible] realize the political truth of a maxim misapplied by McCarthy — you can't fight skunks with kid gloves. The president's support of Senator Flanders Wednesday shows that he may be beginning to realize this.

The nation can outlive McCarthy. But, for President Eisenhower, it is a real question whether the Republican party can.

The Great Silence

From the Army Times, Veterans' Edition (unofficial).

We are looking for possible action to restore to the processes of our federal government those principles of the democracy upon which it is founded.

We are looking to the American Legion—and to the other major veterans' organizations—to break their bonds of silence and stand up and be counted, not simply among the anti-Communists, but among the protectors of freedom.

The preamble to the American Legion constitution dedicates all legionnaires "to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom, and democracy; to sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

We believe that the legion and the lesser veterans' organizations have a duty to perform. That duty is to make known to the American public where they stand in the continuing battle between Senator McCarthy and the executive branch of the United States government. If they are pro-McCarthy, let them so announce themselves. If they are prodemocracy, then let their voices be heard and their influences be felt.

When virtually everyone with a voice or a typewriter was having his say about the "great surrender," we were impressed by the unnatural silence which marked the public reactions of the major veterans' organizations. It was a strange silence.

It was strange if one understands that the national leadership of the veterans' organizations has seldom been shy about popping off on almost any subject or issue imaginable.

But we heard not a peep from any of them when a combat hero of World War II, a much decorated former comrade in arms—Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker—was accused by Senator McCarthy of being "not fit to wear" his uniform because he obeyed the orders of his superiors and his commander in chief. . . .

In which direction does the path of loyalty lead?

Our concern is not that the veterans' organization leaders did not join in the universal criticism of Senator McCarthy. It is over the fact that not a single national spokesman had the courage to rise to the defense of a former comrade in arms untainted by the slightest suspicion of "softness" toward communism.

And we wonder why? They are never loathe to criticize the president or any of his policies if it suits their purpose. They attack or defend in dozens of areas outside the veterans' affairs. So why the silence on an issue which touches the very heart of American unity?

In our opinion, the McCarthy-Zwicker issue provides any truly patriotic organization with a heaven sent opportunity to prove its Americanism beyond question.

Where do YOU stand?

Senator Gets Blast on TV

Ed Murrow Program Features Films From McCarthy's Past

New York, N. Y.—Edward R. Murrow, Columbia Broadcasting System commentator, said Tuesday night that Senator McCarthy had repeatedly stepped over the line between "investigating and persecuting."

Murrow ended a half hour film and record roundup of the Wisconsin Republican's career on his "See It Now" program with an attack on the senator's methods and a call to his opponents—and supporters—to speak up.

"This is no time," Murrow said, "for men who oppose Senator McCarthy's methods to keep silent—or for those who approve."

Murrow's telecast came as McCarthy was threatening to take legal action to force CBS and the National Broadcasting Co. to give him, personally, free time to answer a speech made last Saturday by Democratic leader Adlai Stevenson. The CBS and NBC networks had turned McCarthy down after giving free time to the Republican national committee.

Offers Him Time

Murrow said at the start of the program that his comments were all from a script and on record, and that if McCarthy wished to answer them, "an opportunity will be afforded him on this program."

Murrow said the usefulness of congressional committees such as that McCarthy heads could not be denied.

"It is necessary to investigate before legislating," he said. "But the line between investigating and persecuting is a very fine one and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly.

"His primary achievement," Murrow added, "has been in confusing the public mind as between the internal and the external threats of communism."

A spokesman for CBS said after the telecast that Murrow was giving his own personal views. CBS reported that the network's switchboard was jammed by an "unprecedented" number of telephone calls after the program.

Some 2,500 calls were received, the spokesman said, of which about 96% were congratulatory. He added that some 1,046 telegrams were received, of which all but 13 expressed approval of the program.

Margaret Truman Is One

A CBS official said those telephoning congratulations included Margaret Truman, daughter of former President Harry S. Truman, and Senator Mike Monroney (Dem., Okla.).

TV stations across the country which carried the CBS network program were flooded with calls, most of them praising the broadcast.

[Upward of 400 telephone calls, every one of them complimentary, were received Tuesday night and Wednesday by WCAN-TV after presentation of the Murrow program, according to Lou Poller, president and general manager of the station. So popular was the program that Poller asked CBS offices in New York for permission to rebroadcast it as a public service. Poller said his station also was willing to give McCarthy time for a reply if he wanted it.]

Murrow opened his program with an acknowledgment that it would be "controversial."

The program included film clips of McCarthy speeches and a sequence from a hearing by his permanent investigations subcommittee.

Murrow showed a film of McCarthy, earlier in his career, in which he spoke out in praise of the two party system. Then he showed the senator during his recent description of the Democratic party as the "party of treason."

Film clips at least twice showed McCarthy in unattractive poses, laughing or chuckling with an almost fiendish expression.

The commentator also showed a film of President Eisenhower during a Wisconsin campaign speech. In the speech, the president pledged to get rid of all "subversives" and emphasized that while congressional investigations were needed, the prime responsibility lay in the executive. This was a slap at McCarthy's efforts to take over this "executive" responsibility.

Hearing Is Shown

Then Murrow took up the senator's claim that he never browbeat a witness. A film of a McCarthy hearing was shown. McCarthy had Reed Harris, formerly of the Voice of America, on the stand. McCarthy, during questioning of Harris, referred to the witness' suspension by Columbia university in the early thirties. He asked if Harris had been furnished a lawyer by the American Civil Liberties Union. Harris conceded that he had.

McCarthy asked if Harris "knew" that the ACLU had been "listed" as an organization serving Communist ends.

Harris said he didn't "know" that.

Murrow afterward explained that this was typical McCarthy technique, and said that the ACLU had not been "listed" by any responsible government agencies nor by the attorney general.

Monmouth Probe Hit

Murrow said McCarthy had "investigated and substantially demoralized the present state department" and had made charges of espionage at Fort Monmouth, N. J., while the army "has been unable to find anything related to espionage there."

The commentator scoffed at McCarthy's claim that "only the left wing press" criticized him for calling Brig. Gen. Ralph Zwicker, commanding officer at Camp Kilmer, N. J., a "disgrace" to his uniform.

Murrow said editorial opinion on the incident was 3 to 1 against McCarthy in "the 50 large circulation newspapers in the country." He read excerpts from editorials in McCarthy styled "left wing" papers that included the New York World-Telegram & the Sun, the Chicago Tribune, New York Times, St. Louis Post Dispatch, The Milwaukee Journal, New York Herald Tribune and Washington Times Herald.

Murrow made his points in a quiet voice. There could be no implication that he was "hysterical" or "excited" about McCarthy . . . but rather that he was giving a cold, dispassionate picture of the man.

As Murrow said, his purpose was to get at "the truth."

In Washington, McCarthy's wife said the senator went to bed early Tuesday night and did not see the program. She refused to wake him up to talk to reporters.

CAPITOL STUFF

By JOHN O'DONNELL

Washington, D. C., June 22.—Just two years ago this week, this reporter along with several thousand other newspapermen, radio and TV commentators, magazine writers, assorted pundits and trained seals, packed suitcases, took a firm grip on the portable typewriter and started off for the Chicago stockyards and the scene of the Taft-Eisenhower battle for the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

Political developments of today shed a new and important light on the Chicago events of two years ago. The fog of political battle on the convention scene, particularly the defeat of Taft in the emotional warfare over his southern delegates, then obscured all the strategic and trickiness of the Eisenhower political staff.

Now political news from Texas blasts to bits the pious protestations of the Eisenhower followers at the convention that Ike's delegates were the real McCoy Republicans, and were not, as the Taft forces charged, "Republicans only for a day." The Eisenhower high command paraded through Chicago carrying the "thou shalt not steal" banners, which infuriated friends of the late Senator from Ohio.

The argument, thought up by the Eisenhower high command, was that Ike's delegation represented the honest upsurge of an authentic two-party system in the Lone Star State, one that would endure. According to the Ike forces, only the blind and the bigoted could believe that these Ike delegates were rally Democrats who had crashed the Texas state convention, overpowered the regular GOP organization and would promptly return to the Democratic fold once they had accomplished the defeat of Taft and put Ike, whom they considered a Democrat, in the White House.

Now Few Texas Republicans Are Entered.

So now what happens down in the Lone Star State—where the Ike boys professed such confidence that the GOP would be a permanent and lusty political growth? We point to the present political news. Here's your answer:

There are 14 state offices to be filled in the coming election. Four Republicans have filed in the primary. In 21 district Congressional races, only four Republicans have entered. There are contests for more than 5,000 county offices in Texas, but less than a dozen Republicans are in the field.

Less than a dozen Republicans have filed for 165 seats in the Texas Legislature.

That's what one brief span of two poltical years has done to the sanctimonious promises and phony moral indignation of the Eisenhower forces. By throwing out the Taft delegates, elected by the regular Texas Republican organization, they killed off GOP hopes to maintain even the core of a second party.

Who masterminded the convention coup which cost Taft the nomination? The strategists for Ike were New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, present Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Brownell's top assistant, William Rogers; then Republican Senator from Massachusetts Henry Cabot Lodge and Gov. Sherman Adams of New Hampshire.

And who sat in at the famous conference last January when the decision was made to file charges against Wisconsin's Senator Joe McCarthy, thereby setting the stage for the recent great TV extravaganza? The names are familiar. Present at that still secret session were Attorney General Borwnell, his chief assistant William Rogers, White House assistant Sherman Adams and Henry Cabot Lodge, now chief U. S. Delegate to the UN.

Two years have passed, but the same group of one-worlders have not changed their technique. In '52 at Chicago, it was an effort to destroy by charges of theft the character of perhaps the most honest—intellectually, financially, politically—personality in public life that this generation has seen.

The Signs Were Ready—the Tactics Worked.

In Washington in '54, it was an effort to block by smears the efforts of the one Senator who has slugged away at the chore of turning up the names of individuals—hangovers from the New Deal and Fair Deal past—who have been protecting or failing to oust subversives and security risks.

The technique of the Ike boys in their successful effort to kick out the 38 Taft Texas delegates differed in some details from the present efforts, but the basic principle was the same: never underestimate the gullibility of the suckers; never hesitate to roar the most brazen charges.

Nobody in his right mind would ever conceive of Senator Taft as being a crook. Yet the Eisenhower boys had their signs all made, "We Like Ike—Rob with Bob." "We Like Ike—Graft With Taft," "Thou Shalt Not Steal," etc. And the cruel fact is that the tactics worked.

Now the same crowd has done its best to knock off the one Rebublican in Congress who knows more about Commie infiltration than any member of Senate or House.

SENATOR JOSEPH McCARTHY LAUNCHES NEW ATTACK ON TIME

NEW YORK, June 16 - "Over the past two weeks, Senator Joseph McCarthy, of Wisconsin, has been sending out letters attacking TIME to the advertising managers of a number of TIME's advertisers," James A. Linen, publisher of TIME, reported. "To date eleven national advertisers have notified TIME that they had received the Senator's letter, which is attached."

Linen said the Senator's attack on TIME began after a cover story on Senator McCarthy appeared some seven months ago in its October 22, 1951 issue.

"The following month," Linen said, "Senator McCarthy launched a campaign through the mail and through the press charging that the whole story was a 'vicious and malicious lie' and a 'clearly deliberate, dishonest attempt to discredit my (Joseph McCarthy's) fight against Communism.'

"Obviously it is ridiculous to state, as McCarthy has, that the story was an effort to 'obstruct the fight against Communists.' As everybody knows," Linen stated, "TIME was among the first to expose Communists and the Communist program and has continually and consistently adhered to that editorial course.

"We obviously do not agree with McCarthy's tactics," Linen stated, "and evidently from what we hear our advertisers don't either."

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

May 28, 1952

Dear Sir:

Nora de Toledano, wife of Ralph de Toledano, who was co-author of Seeds of Treason and who has also written Spies, Dupes, and Diplomats, did an excellent job documenting the extent to which TIME Magazine has been deliberately twisting and distorting the facts about my fight to expose and remove Communists from Government. Her story, under the heading, "TIME Marches on McCarthy," was published in the February issue of The American Mercury. I thought you might be interested in seeing a copy of this, in view of the fact that you are one of TIME Magazine's advertisers.

I realize that bringing these facts to the attention of TIME's advertisers will cause some of the unthinking to shout that this is endangering "freedom of the press." It might be well, therefore, to define freedom of the press. To me freedom of the press means freedom to print all of the truth regardless of how pleasant or unpleasant it may be, and regardless of who may be helped or hurt thereby, as well as freedom to editorialize as the editor sees fit so long as he does not misstate facts. Freedom of the press does not mean freedom to lie and twist and distort facts as some would have the American people believe.

I heartily disagree with those who apparently feel that it is proper to expose only those liars who do not own newspapers or magazines. It is my opinion, it is much more important to expose a liar, a crook, or a traitor who is able to poison the streams of information flowing into a vast number of American homes than to expose an equally vicious crook, liar, or traitor who has no magazine or newspaper outlet for his poison. To allow a liar to hide behind the cry, "You are endangering freedom of the press," is not only ridiculous, it is dangerous.

TIME's advertisers make it possible for the Luce chain to send into millions of American homes the type of dishonest twisted news as exposed in the enclosed de Toledano article. Many of those advertisers are militantly anti-communist and intensely American. When I know that they are not aware of the facts and because of that are unknowingly helping to pollute and poison the waterholes of information, I have a duty to bring that to their attention. For that reason, I am enclosing a copy of a de Toledano article as well as a reprint from the Congressional Record which contains copies of the documents referred to in the de Toledano article.

Sincerely yours,

S/ Joe McCarthy

Was govt witness for prosecution of top communist leaders; was communist youth leader himself; worked for McCarthy; says he has all intimate knowledge of McCarthy's acts in Maryland election, other state electio etc; says he has documents on McCarthy's plan to attack McCloy on question of army "subversives" directive.

Matusow is young (about 28); dedicated; professional informer; dangerous --says he's through with McCarthy and wants to see him brought to book --says money is no motivation.

He would be thoroughly discredited by McCarthy in any court, except for one thing--he was an important expert witness for the FBI-Govt case against the communist leadership; furthermore, in McCarthy's anti-Stevenson Chicago speech of Oct 1952, McCarth called onMatusow to stand up in the audience to prove McCarthy's point.

Matusow would have to be investigated with the skillof a leading prosecutor--somebody of the caliber of Robert Morris or Telford Taylor. Morris, incidentally, is a graduate of the McCarthy group; Matusow says Morris played an important part in the Maryland-Tydings election.

FOR RELEASE AT 6:00 P.M. EST FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1951.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 -- James A. Linen, Publisher of TIME, today answered the charge, made by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin, that TIME's cover story on him in its issue of October 22 contained "false statements".

Said Linen: "We believe our interpretation and analysis of Senator McCarthy's political activities is an honest and factual one drawn from months of interviews, research, checking and cross-reference."

Senator McCarthy had charged, in a telegram released to the press, that TIME's story had as its purpose to "obstruct the fight against communists" and that the magazine had not used information in its files alleging that Gustavo Duran, once a State Department employee and now a section chief at U.N., is a Communist.

"TIME's record in the fight against Communism," Linen said, "is long, clear and consistent. It cannot be twisted around to make it appear that TIME is obstructing that fight."

Thirteen days after the story appeared, Senator McCarthy wrote to Henry R. Luce, Editor-in-Chief of TIME, alleging "not only false statements in regard to Duran but the many false statements in the story." Luce replied by letter on November 5:

"Dear Senator McCarthy:-

"You say that a story about you in the October 22 issue of TIME contains "many false statements".

"Your letter specifies only statements relating to Gustavo Duran. In support of your view that Duran was a Communist agent, you cite an interoffice message of April 25, 1947 from TIME's Washington Bureau. This dispatch was never published in TIME, and for a very good reason. It simply transmitted certain charges against Duran collected by U.S. Army Intelligence. You will note that it concluded with a significant cautionary note from TIME's reporter:

'Remember that counter-intelligence operations do not involve proof of assumptions. They are made on a working basis for the purpose of neutralizing foreign espionage and on occasion for disseminating false information.'

"TIME, after examining the available evidence in this case, came to the conclusion that there was not sufficient documentation to support the charge that Duran was a Communist agent.

"In your letter you ask what action I intend to take 'to correct not only false statements about Duran but the many false statements in the story.' If you will let me know what other statements you consider false, TIME will be glad 1) to re-check them. 2) to publish corrections of any errors.

"You conclude your letter by a reference to those principles of fairness which must be the basis of a free America. You feel TIME hasn't lived up to those principles in its treatment of you. TIME feels you haven't lived up to those principles in your campaign against Communism.

"Surely we must both try harder than ever before to put those principles of fairness into practice both in the field of politics and in the field of journalism.

Sincerely Yours,
Henry R. Luce"

Luce's letter crossed a telegram to Luce from the Senator dated November 6, in which the Senator threatened to publish the complete TIME, LIFE, FORTUNE file on Duran. Publisher Linen replied:

"Senator Joseph R. McCarthy
Senate Office Building
Washington, D. C.

"Henry Luce's reply to your letter of last week was mailed Monday and no doubt you received it shortly after dispatching your telegram of Tuesday.

"Neither your letter of October 31st nor your telegram of November 6th produces any evidence that any of the statements in TIME's story about you in its October 22nd issue were false or erroneous.

"On any story TIME uses as many sources as possible and then checks these with the greatest of care in order to keep its statements accurate and truthful. I repeat my statement to William Loeb that in the case of the entire story about you, 'every word in TIME's story, incidentally, was thoroughly checked for accuracy of fact and interpretation.' Our editors sifted and weighed a tremendous amount of material before clearing the final story. Your statement that 'this proves without a doubt that the article published on October 22 was not a casual project of TIME, LIFE & FORTUNE, but a project prepared with painstaking care for a definite purpose -- to obstruct the fight against Communists' is a complete non-sequitur and contains no logic.

"As to your statement about the TIME files that you have and your threat to make them public, I have this to say. What you claim to hold is confidential material, such as any editorial enterprise amasses in the course of dealing with any major news story. It is from the evaluation of such confidential material that editorial judgments are made, and the basic material is normally considered to be immune from pilfering and from public use. Nonetheless, you say you have such files and intend to publish them. My only answer to your threat then, is to say that if that is your intention, I cannot prevent you from carrying it out. Because I am sure that you will not quote the files in their entirety, I reserve only the privilege of carrying on the quotations as you make them public to restore them to their proper context and meaning.

The text of Sen. McCarthy's October 31 letter to Henry Luce follows:

"Mr. Henry R. Luce
Editor, TIME Magazine
Time-Life-Fortune Building
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Luce:

"As you know, ever since I commenced the public phase of my fight against Communists high in our Government, the Communist Daily Worker has led a vicious personal smear attack against me, which has been gleefully joined in by a vast number of the camp-following elements of the press and radio. You, of course, are fully aware of the extent to which TIME magazine has joined in this campaign.

"If I were to attemp to read, much less answer, all of the false statements and smear attacks on me, no time would be left for any other business. For that reason, I have ignored the Communist party line smear attack and relied upon the good judgment and common sense of the American people to see through the smoke screen of slime and smear and recognize the truth.

"On October 22nd, TIME magazine carried a feature story about McCarthy, which contained the usual number of untruths and half-truths. At this time I would like to call your attention to statements in that article about the evidence which I gave on Gustavo Duran.

"As you know, all of the material which I have given about Duran's background came from Army Intelligence files. Your article accuses me of lying about the Duran case. You state:

" ' Duran, never a red, was definitely and clearly anti-Comminist. . . . He worked for the United States Government in Cuba during World War II tracking down axis and Communist agents.'

"In this connection, I would like to call your attention to a memorandum in the files of TIME Magazine, dated April 25, 1947, written by Jim Shepley, who, I understand, was one of your Washington correspondents at that time, to David Hulburd, in your New York office. It is initialed by RTE, who I assume is Robert T. Elson, who is now National Affairs editor of LIFE Magazine. This memorandum is entitled: 'Duran-Michanowski - I - NA -- INTL -- LA.' It goes much further and ascribes many more damaging activities to Duran than those discussed by me. I especially call your attention to the third paragraph on page one, which effectively deals with Duran's original claim of mistaken identity. You will recall that Duran originally claimed that he was not the Gustavo Duran described in the Army Intelligence report. This claim was no longer made, however, after I produced a picture of Duran in the uniform which he wore while regional head of the Sim in Spain. As you know, Prieto, Minister of Defense for Spain, and others have labeled Sim as the counterpart of the Russian GPU and Communist-controlled.

"I also call your attention to the last paragraph on page one of the memorandum in your files. I call your attention also to paragraph four on page two of your memorandum, to the effect that Duran was chief of Sim for the Madrid zone, and finally if there is any doubt about the complete and deliberate falsity of your story on Duran, I call your attention to the concluding paragraph on page three of your office memorandum.

"In view of the memorandum in your own file, prepared by your own staff, which is much more damaging to Duran than anything I have said about him, plus the Army Intelligence report which confirms everything I have said, it would be interesting to know the basis for TIME's statement: 'Duran, never a red, was definitely and clearly anti-Communist.'

"Other statements in the story are equally untrue, but I confine myself to this phase of it, because your own files contradict your story on Duran in every detail. Your own files on Duran, if true, also show that I greatly understated the case against Gustavo Duran.

"In view of the above, I would like to hear from you as to what, if any, action you intend to take to correct not only false statements in regard to Duran but the many false statements in the story.

"I realize, of course, that you have interests in a sizeable number of publications and that it is not even remotely possible for you to personally supervise all your writers or read all the stories before they are published.

"I assume you are, therefore, not personally responsible for this vicious and malicious lie being broadcast to millions of American people in a clearly deliberate, dishonest attempt to discredit my fight against Communism.

"I don't ask or expect any decency from TIME Magazine so far as I personally am concerned. However, I am sure you will agree with me that if freedom of the press is to be maintained, then the editors of a national magazine such as yours, regardless of how much they want to discredit my fight against Communists, do owe some honesty and decency to the public.

Sincerely Yours,
Joe McCarthy"

The Text of Senator McCarthy's Nov. 6 telegram follows:

"Henry R. Luce, Publisher
TIME NYK

"I am still awaiting an answer to my letter of October 31, regarding the article published in TIME Magazine on October 22. This article used Gustavo Duran as the example of a loyal American who has been falsely accused by McCarthy. The complete files of TIME LIFE & FORTUNE in the Duran case are now in my possession. In spite of the fact that your own researchers confirmed everything which I have said about Duran, a completely opposite story was published by TIME. The fact that this deliberate falsification of the facts has been sent into the homes of millions of Americans whose future depends on the outcome of the anti Communist fight in this country makes it impossible for me to consider this matter closed.

"As you well know, the TIME story is a direct and flagrant contradiction of the facts reported by your staff. The fact that this falsification of the story was knowingly done is borne out by your editors letter to William Loeb editor and publisher of the Manchester Union in which he states 'every word in TIMES story incidentally was thoroughly checked for accuracy of fact and interpretation. It is a policy that the Senator would do well to follow.'

"This proves without a doubt that the article published on October 22 was not a casual project of TIME LIFE & FORTUNE but a project prepared with painstaking care for a definite purpose -- to obstruct the fight against Communists.

"During my recent speaking tour through the West one of your staff reporters accompanied me. In reporting to the New York office, he honestly advised that the evidence on Duran which I gave my audience was one of the most convincing links in the picture of Communist infiltration of Government. His strong representations on this point undoubtedly led the TIME LIFE & FORTUNE staff to the conclusion that this story had to be discredited if the American people were to continue to be lulled into believing as LIFE recently put it 'Communist infiltration of Government is no longer a legitimate worry.'

"It is quite evident that the purpose of the article published in TIME of October 22 was intended solely to discredit McCarthy so that in the future he could no longer be believed regardless of his evidence.

"This is one of the most dishonest examples of prostitution of freedom of the press which has ever come to my attention. This is to notify you that unless TIME corrects the false statements on Duran and the other deliberate distortions of the facts in that story within one weeks time I shall have no choice but to make public your complete file in this matter so that the public may be aware of the sinister dishonesty of your magazine in this typical case.

Joe McCarthy USS."

WHERE I STAND

by HANK GREENSPUN

Is Senator Joe McCarthy a secret Communist?

After an exhaustive analysis of the national situation as it exists with respect to fear of McCarthy, I have come to the conclusion that I cannot share the fears which he has created on the national scene.

To quote the words of the immortal Roosevelt; "There is nothing to fear but fear itself." There are two things to fear of Sen. McCarthy and to my way of thinking they are trivial and should not cause grown men to quake.

1. If the person is a woman, don't get too close to McCarthy in a swimming pool.

2. If a man, don't let him kiss you on the lips.

I know such thoughts are not pleasing but there is no way to discuss disreputable people without some unpleasantness. It is the weaknesses of our public officials which often shapes their course and in so doing, sometimes patterns the destiny of nations. Just as Hitler's weaknesses brought him untold power, so does the weakness of McCarthy bring him untold strength.

Women should fear McCarthy in a swimming pool because McCarthy hates women. He looks upon them as rivals in the game of love. That's what makes his marriage to Jean Kerr so astonishing.

Joe has found a unique way to satisfy his perverse lust to physically scare and hurt women. In the swimming pool on the great Maryland estate of Garvin Tankersly, Joe likes to grab the women guests and hold them under water until their lungs are close to bursting. He only releases them when they start to drown. Joe gets a sadistic thrill out of this little sport. "Tank" Tankersly is the person who concocted the fake pictures used in the Tydings campaign. "Tank," a lad from Lynchburg, Va., was famed in his hometown for placing bets on his sexual prowess. After he was released from arrest for carrying concealed weapons in Roanoke, Va., he came to Washington and got a job as a photographer on the Washington Times Herald.

When Colonel McCormick, owner of the Times Herald, placed his married niece in the job as editor of the paper, photographer "Tank" soon won her favor and became executive editor. They later married although "Tank" had been happily married and a father of three children, before taking to himself another bride. This marriage made "Tank" the multi-millionaire who now entertains Joe McCarthy and the horsey set at his swank estate where Joe disports himself in the swimming pool by forcing hapless females under water.

The social soireee which usually feature the presence of McCarthy as guest of honor and include many leaders of the extreme-right wing press and some leaders of government, can only be compared to Hitlerian orgies. The people who comprise this set do not face realities. They are cavorting in a make-believe land, a virtual fairyland.

And this is the group which wields such tremendous power over our federal government. This is the gang which is asking the parents of this nation to entrust the lives and liberties of their children to them.

After McCarthy's victory in his campaign for the Senate, Joe burst into the hotel room where the voting returns were being tabulated. Ecstatic with joy, he rushed over to the president of the Young Republicans, Lloyd Tegge, and kissed him full on the mouth. An eyewitness to the scene reported it was as soulful a kiss as she had ever seen. Tegge pushed McCarthy away. It is just possible he remembered another incident involving another young Republican, William McMahon, who also permitted McCarthy to kiss him and later had to leave for Tokyo to avoid scandal.

After this column's expose of Joe's abnormalities, his social pals decided something must be done about it. Joe was a homey guest at the Washington residence of William Randolph Hearst Jr., owner of the American Weekly, among other enterprises. The build-up started.

The American Weekly came out with a three-part series on the private life of Joe McCarthy. Joe was pictured as a religious man who led a quiet life devoted to heroic crusading against Communism. Even Joe's bedroom was photographed with religious symbols in full view on the dresser. It was the worst sacriligious cover-up ever portrayed in the public press.

The story described Joe in polite pursuit of pretty Jean Kerr, whom he later married with a big fanfare of publicity. But the story has never been told about the time Joe pushed Jean off on an extended vacation to Honolulu. She was observed in tears at the Washington Airport when Joe put her on the plane, but it was also observed that she brushed him off when he tried to kiss her goodbye.

Jean Kerr had learned of McCarthy's frailties in December of 1950 which occasioned the tearful breakup and the hurried trip to Hawaii. Joe wasn't heartbroken at the separation. He was fearful of exposure by a furious woman. He even prevailed on the Federal Bureau of Investigation to keep an eye on her while she was in Honolulu. An FBI agent was with her when she tripped and broke her ankle on the moonlit shores of Waikiki.

The following is a list of telephone calls made by Joe to Jean:

12/13/50 To Honolulu, Hawaii to Miss Jean Kerr at Queens Hospital 5-5981
12/15/50 To Honolulu, Hawaii, Miss Jean Kerr, at Queens Hospital
12/19/50 To Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Jean Kerr
12/21/50 To Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Jean Kerr
1/ 3/51 To Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Jean Kerr
1/ 5/51 To Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Jean Kerr
1/ 7/51 To Hnoolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Jean Kerr
1/ 8/51 To Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Jean Kerr
1/11/51 Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Miss Jean Kerr
1/12/51 Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Miss Jean Kerr
1/15/51 Honolulu, Hawaii 7-1981 to Miss Jean Kerr

Of course, all the calls were made in the interests of the United States Government and if Joe has forgotten the contents, perhaps I might be in a position to refresh his memory.

Jean Kerr was not the first of his secretaries to set her bonnet for the boss. Another of his former female assistants also thought the senator was considering her when the time came for the 44-year-old bachelor to take unto himself a wife. She, too, attended parties and social affairs with the Senator but never quite made the grade when it came time to go home. She admitted she was always left standing at the post while Joe escorted some Gay young blade from the party. When the truth dawned upon her, she resigned and left Washington, a sadly disillusioned but wiser young female.

I am glad to report she is now a happily married young housewife.

McCarthy was once queried by a reporter who was friendly to him as to whether he intended to get married. The reporter thought the senator owed him a scoop for past favors. McCarthy told him there wasn't the slightest chance of wedding bells. Two days later, the announcement of the forthcoming marriage between Senator Joe McCarthy and Jean Kerr was announced by Miss Kerr.

When McCarthy was called for confirmation, he replied: "whatever Jean says goes." The friendly reporter who thought he earned the first break remonstrated with Joe for the slight and was informed by the hapless bridegroom: "she blackmailed me into it."

Jean Kerr was known throughout Washington as a very ambitious woman. As the wife of a powerful senator, she would gain much social prestige. As the wife of a President — heaven help us!

The marriage of the McCarthys will take its place in history as the biggest farce of the Century. Even Hitler went respectable after he came to power in Germany. He gave up Ernst Roehm for Eva Braun and later had Roehm killed to bury his past. He wound up marrying Eva Braun in the bloodiest wedding in the history of the world. Millions upon millions of lives were offered up as a sacrifice to the lust of the debaucher of Germany.

I'm just tracing a pattern. It can't happen here? Don't you believe it. It's happening. The same men who put Field Marshal Von Hindenburg in power in Germany later forced him to accept Hitler as Chancellor. Germany always had a President but Hitler ruled. Russia also has a President but who ever heard of his name?

The oil millionaires of Texas and some large industrialists of the country will eventually force McCarthy upon the United States. Before the coup d' etat can be accomplished, it will be necessary to still the voices of the liberal commentators and a few newspapers.

Time Magazine was almost forced out of business when McCarthy ordered a boycott of the advertisers of this magazine. Fanatic supporters of the right wing and secret support from the left wing adherents respond to any dictates, from sending letters and telegrams to the White House to threatening advertisers with loss of patronage.

Drew Pearson was sponsored by a large bank in Dallas, Texas. The bank's largest depositors threatened to withdraw their accounts unless bank sponsorship was withdrawn. The bank complied. A small merchant took on the broadcast until he, too, was forced to cancel by threats against his business.

This is the United States of America today. A reign of terror is blanketing the minds of the people. A self-imposed fear because the enemy are still few in number. The trouble with the American people is that the onlookers always outnumber the fighters. People who should be in there fighting against McCarthyism are only willing to hold the other fellow's coat.

WHERE I STAND

by HANK GREENSPUN

Is McCarthy a secret Communist?

While in Washington recently, I heard former Governor Harold Stassen, present head of the Mutual Security Agency, interviewed by the press upon his return from South America. Stassen was brisk and straightforward in his answers to all economic questions. When a reporter asked him to comment on charges of disloyalty in his department made by Sen. Joe McCarthy, Governor Stassen became mute. He made no attempt to defend his employees though he knew the charges were false and infamous. The mere mention of McCarthy's name brought an immediate reaction. He shadow-boxed, side-stepped, hedged and evaded. The brisk, direct answers had ceased. The Governor was a man in fear.

I had always been an admirer of Harold Stassen. What I saw and heard nauseated me. Why do grown men have to live in fear?

Extreme right-wing thinking and left-wing philosophies require the same mental processes. There is no difference between the Communists on the left and the Fascists of the right. They both exist through the enslavement of man's mind. They can only thrive through fear.

Hitler and Stalin rose to power through identical methods. Attack, attack. Create fear — promote confusion, keep the world off balance. Attack, attack, never defend, never look back, attack, attack.

The McCarthy apologists who say they "disagree with his methods but his intentions are noble," are either stupid, gullible people, or, people with a motive; a base, traitorous motive to destroy democracy.

How can a man's intentions be noble when he himself is a cheat, a liar, and a thief. McCarthy has never had a sincere thought or motive during his entire public career. His whole life is a fraud.

Even his service in the Marine Corps during the war was a fraud on the wonderful organization of men who spearheaded the attacks in the Pacific campaigns.

How many Marines were able to bamboozle a commission before they consented to serve with the Corps? McCarthy did. And he waited until long after the war was on, August, 1942 to be exact. How many Marines had safe desk jobs during the war? McCarthy kept his feet firmly planted on a desk in zones which had been made safe by the Marines months before. How many Marines were permitted to spend half the war years back home campaigning for public office while in uniform? McCarthy did.

How many Marines were permitted to resign from the Corps when the going got rough? McCarthy did. McCarthy had been applying for leaves to stay in Wisconsin to campaign for public office. The Marine Corps finally issued an ultimatum to Joe to fight or resign. Joe left the service.

How many Marines had to wait 10 years before it could be determined if they were brave enough to merit a medal? McCarthy was decorated in 1952 in his senate office after browbeating the Marine Corps for ten years to give him a medal. The Corps needed his vote in the Senate at appropriations time and McCarthy got his medal. Nobody knows what the decoration was for unless it was for bravery in action when he slipped and broke a bone in his foot while emerging from a swimming pool during a "shellback initiation" aboard the Navy tender "Chandeleur" as the ship crossed the equator.

McCarthy was known in his outfit as "the only guy in the Marine Corps who could promote anything up to and including the Congressional Medal of Honor."

He's been a phony all his life and he'll die one, and this is the "man" who is being groomed for President of the United States. McCarthy, in a speech before a Manufacturer's Association of suburban Cicero on January 20 of this year, stated that under no circumstances would he be a candidate for president in 1956. He told reporters that Ike was his choice.

The build-up is starting, McCarthy strategy calls for his playing coy for a couple of years. McCarthy will keep insisting he is not a candidate even though no one asks him, in order to create a demand for his candidacy. He even thinks like a woman, playing hard to get.

Tell the public they can't have something and the demand becomes overwhelming, whether it is sugar during times of war or the presidency of the United States.

The Texas oil millionaires have switched to McCarthy. He is just as anxious for right-wing support today as he was for Communist aid in 1946.

In seeking the Communist vote in his campaign against Bob LaFollette, McCarthy stated: "Communists have the same right to vote as anyone else." His statement that: "Stalin's proposal for world disarmament is a great thing and he must be given credit for being sincere about it," would bring charges of treason against anyone else but McCarthy. These were McCarthy's public sentiments in 1946, after the war was over and Russia had already started its campaign of fear against the rest of the world.

Today, McCarthy brands as a Communist anyone who thought well of Russia as far back as 1932. Persons called before the McCarthy Committee who innocently became a dupe of the Reds in early youth and have since recanted are still branded as traitors by the phony Red fighter, although he himself attended Communist cell meetings in Wisconsin in 1936 and had the reputation of the town's leading pinko. But to espouse the cause of the Communists as late as 1946 in his campaign for the United States Senate and still be called sincere by the stupid people who think his "intentions are noble," is almost too much for sensible people to endure.

It is easy for McCarthy to play both sides of the game from extreme left to extreme right because both sides are the same.

The $200,000 appropriation for the extension of the McCarthy Committee passed the Senate the other day with only one dissenting vote. Hitler had to set fire to the Reichstag before his power became absolute. It will not be necessary for McCarthy to follow this tactic because the fire of fear burns deep in the minds of the members of Congress. It is consuming all opposition.

If the extreme right-wing elements are successful, it may not be necessary for Russia to go to war. We may have a Communist in the White House even sooner than the Soviet timetable envisioned.

If McCarthy is not a secret Communist with a mission to take over the country for the Soviet Union, then he is a lunatic. He shows absolutely no responsibility for what he says or does. He is not the menace. It's the people who fear him who are endangering the country.

One thing about the man, he's smart enough to know when he can't win. He's a good enough lawyer to realize that truth is a defense in a libel action. McCarthy has had every opportunity to serve me with papers if I ever wrote an untruth about him. He knew I was in Washington and he knew where I was staying. I traveled the length and breadth of the senate office building many times and sat in the Senate gallery three days in a row!

For people to quake before this mountebank is the shame of the nation. What he needs is a Napoleon hat and a Greatcoat so he can stick his hand into the lapel and play emperor.

These are the times which try men's souls. What a Daniel Webster could do in the United States Senate today.

WHERE I STAND

by HANK GREENSPUN

A century ago, Abraham Lincoln declared that a foreign tyrant could never conquer this country, could not by force take a drink from the Ohio River. Our real danger, he warned, would come from the hands of a domestic tyrant, a demagogue who would rise in our own midst, an ambitious man who would burn and thirst for power. This tyrant would not come before the people, beating his breast and shouting his true purposes. He would come in dark disguse, a wolf in sheep's clothing, and would end up devouring the whole flock.

It doesn't take much experience in the political woods to recognize the trail of a tyrant. All who have tramped through history have left the same footprints. They have appealed to the passions and trampled down reason. They have preached blind patriotism, played on public fears, inflamed hatreds and prejudices. They have struck down their critics with charges of treason. And they have all worn the same disguise; they have posed as patriots.

Adolf Hitler passed himself off as the German savior; he taught that the enemies of Hitler were the enemies of Germany. Benito Mussolini posed as an Italian patriot; he preached that the enemies of Mussolini were the enemies of Italy. Josef Stalin enshrined himself as a Russian hero; he claimed that the enemies of Stalin were the enemies of Russia.

Today, Senator Joe McCarthy calls himself a Crusader for America; and he shouts that the enemies of McCarthy are the enemies of America.

Like the tyrants of the past, McCarthy waves the flag, stirs up our red blood, gives lip service to American ideals. But behind this red-white-and-blue smokescreen, he tramples roughshod over individual rights, kicks justice in the face and violates all the rules of fair play that are sacred to America. The methods of McCarthy—trial by accusation, guilt by association, character assassination—are no more American than Russia is a people's democracy.

It is high time we took Abraham Lincoln's advice and examined some of the footprints that are being stamped upon our society today. With this as my purpose, I offer another installment in the sordid, shocking, unAmerican record of Joseph Raymond McCarthy.

I proved in a previous article that McCarthy started his political career as a pinko, that his own past is as cluttered with Communist associations as the victims he denounces. Like a true demagogue, however, McCarthy was able to subordinate his own political philosophy and adopt any line that would get him ahead. He traveled the full political cycle from far left to far right, zigzagging as suited the circumstances. He hitched his political wagon to the fastest-rising star, riding up with the Democrats during the New Deal days, then switching to the GOP when the elephant started moving faster than the donkey in Wisconsin.

But through all this erratic political maneuvering, McCarthy followed a careful blueprint. He studied the masterwork of power politics, the roadmap of tyranny—Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf." McCarthy's close political crony of the 1930's, Jerry Jolin, has admitted that McCarthy was a devoted student of "Mein Kampf."

How well did McCarthy learn the lessons of "Mein Kampf"? How close has he followed Hitler's techniques? Here is the record:

1. When Adolf Hitler was nothing but a loud noise in German politics, he began accusing the Social Democrats of 14 years of "Marxist misgovernment." He used the Communist smear freely to discredit those whose power he coveted, or who stood in his way. In his time, Hitler exposed and jailed more alleged Communists than anyone in history. McCarthy, too, has used the Communist club to attack the opposition party and beat his enemies over the head.

2. Hitler undermined the democratic structure by attacking the heroes of the German Republic. He poured out invective against prominent German statesmen, both military and civilian, who stood up for democracy. Some of Hitler's old speeches sound strikingly like McCarthy's attack on General George Marshall, the World War II hero and Nobel peace prize winner. McCarthy accused Marshall of participating "in a conspiracy so immense and an infamy so black as to dwarf any such previous venture in the history of man." In the same speech, McCarthy accused General Dwight Eisenhower of conspiring with Marshall to sell out the world to the Communists.

3. Hitler persecuted all religions that would not bow to his will. Yet he piously proclaimed that the state had no intention of interfering with religious beliefs, but only wanted to weed out the "Marxist element" in the clergy. The investigation of the churches today is also disguised as an investigation of individual clergyman. Though Hitler was a renegade Catholic, he didn't hesitate to strike down Catholic priests who defied him, such as Father Joseph Rassaint, who had written anti-Communist articles but nevertheless was accused of collaborating with the Communists. Though McCarthy, too, is a Catholic, he has not hesitated to accuse his Catholic critics of following the Communist line, such as Commonweal magazine which is as bitterly anti-Communist as it is anti-McCarthy.

4. Hitler's favorite device was the Big Lie, since he claimed that people "are more easily victimized by a large than by a small lie." It would take a full volume to trace all the twists and turns of McCarthy's untruths. He is the only member of the U.S. Senate who can be called a congenital liar without fear of libel. He once went so far as to document a lie by inserting into the Congressional Record a forged FBI report on the loyalty of Edward Posniak.

5. Hitler was surrounded by strong-arm men, who intimidated his opponents. McCarthy never goes anywhere unless he is accomanied by a couple of musclemen. During the Maryland election campaign, McCarthy sent three of his strong-arm boys—Don Surine, Ewell Moore and George Niles—to take a frightened

Baltimore printer on a midnight ride. They tried to browbeat the printer, William Fedder, to give them an incriminating political document.

6. Hitler rose to power by organizing German youth, then building an elite corps of fanatical followers. McCarthy also became a political power in Wisconsin by re-organizing the state's dormant Young Republican clubs. He put in his own men, homosexuals such as Ed Babcock and Steve McMahon, to take over the leadership of the Young Republicans. Eventually, they rallied enough support to overthrow the Republican Old Guard and get the GOP senatorial nomination for McCarthy. Now McCarthy is quietly forming Freedom Clubs and McCarthy Clubs across the country in an attempt to band his fanatical followers together.

7. Hitler was financed by millionaries and industrialists, who visioned a return to unhampered, unlimited free enterprise. He was also supported by powerful conservatives, who did not condone his methods but believed they could control him for their own ends. Today, McCarthy is financed by Texas oil millionaires and midwestern industrialists. Certain conservatives, while deploring his methods, have used him as a technique for vote-getting. The early supporters of Hitler lived—and died—to regret it.

8. Hitler, in his drive for power, waged a vigorous campaign for more authority for the Reichstag, because it was only through the Reichstag that his Nazi Party could wield power. Senator McCarthy also derives his power from the legislative branch, and is fighting for the Bricker Amendment and other measures to increase Congress' authority. After Hitler seized complete control, of course, he transformed the Reichstag into a rubber stamp.

9. German law seemed to have no control over Hitler. McCarthy, too, appears to be above the law. He was elected to the Senate in violation of the Wisconsin Constitution. The State Supreme Court expressed its indignation, but failed to take legal action against him.

McCarthy accepted $10,000 from Lustron Corp. exactly one week after his Senate Investigating Committee began investigating Lustron. He arranged for a Pepsi-Cola lobbyist to endorse a $20,000 note one month after leading the Senate fight to get more sugar for the soft-drink makers. There are federal laws against such conduct.

McCarthy has cut corners on his income taxes since he was a circuit judge, but in each instance, he has been allowed to settle out of court. He repeatedly borrowed the bank account of his assistant, Ray Kiermas, to speculate on the stock market, though the kickback law prohibits a Senator from taking money from his employees. McCarthy's complex financial manipulations have violated the Wisconsin banking laws. The Army publicly accused McCarthy of violating the Espionage Act by publicizing classified material. Yet in all these cases, the Justice Department shows no inclination to prosecute.

10. Hitler had the habit of rearranging history to suit his own fancy. McCarthy, too, has been caught revising the past to conform with his idea of what should have happened. One conspicuous example was his rewriting of the Senate hearing, at which Voice of America official Donald Creed testified. The questions and answers were changed to suit McCarthy.

11. Of course, Hitler was notoriously anti-Semitic. McCarthy loudly denies that he is anti-Semitic, pointing to the fact that he has a Jew, Roy Cohn, on his staff. The fact is that Cohn is an opportunist who has discredited himself in the eyes of his own people. McCarthy will go on pretending that he is friendly to the Jews, because he can't afford to alienate them yet. However, McCarthy slipped into the Senate recording room once at 3 a.m. to making a recording for the notorious anti-Semite, Upton Close. On another occasion, McCarthy arranged to have Upton Close's propaganda actually printed in the Congressional Record. McCarthy's chief lieutenant, Don Surine, conspired with another anti-Semite, Gerald L. K. Smith, to smear Anna Rosenberg, the former Assistant Secretary of Defense. Surine even carried a letter of introduction from Smith.

Other anti-Semites, such as Benjamin Freedman and the Rev. Wesley Swift, used McCarthy's office as headquarters for their undercover campaign against Mrs. Rosenberg. This was brought out during sworn testimony.

It was also Joe McCarthy who defended the Nazi storm troopers after they had been found guilty of murdering American GIs in cold blood at Malmedy. McCarthy charged that American "vengeance teams," made up of Jews, had tortured the Nazi SS men into confessing.

Meanwhile, McCarthy is being praised to the skies in Germany by Dr. Werner Naumann, who was nominated in Hitler's will to succeed Goebbels as propaganda minister and who was arrested only recently by the British for heading a Nazi conspiracy to overthrow the West German government.

There are many who will say that I have not proven that McCarthy is a secret Communist but only that he is a Facist. Is there a difference?

The record is clear. Those who are for America must fight Communism, Facism and McCarthyism.

Is Senator McCarthy really a secret Communist?

The newspapers of the country are not playing fair with the American people. There is a great deal of information which many papers possess and which is not being printed so that the people might better be in a position to realize what is taking place in the country today.

I have just returned from the capital of the United States. Conditions in Washington, D. C. indicate a definite and hurried trend toward totalitarian principles. The city is blanketed by fear. People speak in soft tones. They peer over their shoulders before expressing an opinion and government officials both high and low nervously look around the room before giving expression to to their thoughts for fear the room is bugged.

It is a mood of hysteria which now has the nation's capital in its grasp. The newspapers, with few exceptions, are woefully derelict in their plain duty to inform the citizens. The press is cowed. It, too, lives in fear.

The pall on freedom which has descended on the country can be traced to one man. The person who has done more to weaken the country's security against internal subversion by intimidation, blackmail and smears is the junior senator from the state of Wisconsin, Joseph McCarthy.

What is the strange hold which McCarthy has on government officials? Why does the newspaper industry, almost to a man, fear him? Why does the Gallup poll show him to be steadily rising in popularity? Who is McCarthy?

Senator McCarthy is really a secret Communist!

From out of his past, the whisper has risen like a ghost to haunt him. When I first heard it in Washington, I thought it too incredible to be true. I knew he was a sadist and a pervert and if I had only stopped to think, the answer should have been, and why not a Communist?

McCarthy has been operating through a defense mechanism caused by a guilt complex. When McCarthy started on his first large publicity campaign, he uttered a charge that the State Department was honeycombed with homosexuals. According to the senator from Wisconsin, perverts were security risks because of their susceptibility to blackmail through fear of exposure.

I always thought that McCarthy "protesteth too much" and a search of his past disclosed that he, too, was a homosexual. His tactics became clear. By leading a supposed fight against perverts in government, he could avert suspicion from himself. For anyone to say that McCarthy is a sex deviate, would bring an instant retort: "ridiculous, he is the foremost fighter against perverts."

And yet, the plain unvarnished truth is that McCarthy, by his own admission is a security risk on the grounds of homosexuality.

His next big campaign was against Reds in Government. Another phase of a defense mechanism operating through a guilt complex. And yet, the hottest rumor in Washington is that McCarthy was a Red and for all we know, might still be a secret Communist. I got the story, the hottest story in the country and here it is:

An August 11, 1951, a mysterious witness was hustled behind closed doors of the Senate Internal Security Committee. His name was Albert Levitt. He was a confessed ex-Communist, who had come to squeal on his past associates. He talked all right, but he said much more than Chairman Pat McCarran had bargained for.

Albert Levitt, the ex-Communist, testified that he had seen Joe McCarthy at Communist meetings—the same Joe McCarthy who is now pretending to lead the fight against Communism. Levitt's testimony was never made public. The secret transcript has been mysteriously removed from the committees' files. Levitt himself has disappeared.

The records show that the Committee sat during the week when this testimony was brought out. All records of the committee were preserved except the transcript for the day when Levitt made the charges.

It is not too difficult to imagine what happened to this amazing testimony since Pat McCarran and Joe McCarthy are buttonhole buddies. But the important question is not so much who hushed up the story, but is it true? Was Albert Levitt telling the truth under oath?

To find the answer, I have searched McCarthy's past. It is no secret that McCarthy as a youth, was a radical left-winger. For the record, he was a New Deal Democrat. He was in charge of ticket sales for President Roosevelt's Birthday Ball in Waupaca, Wisconsin, on January 30, 1936. Seven months later, he was elected president of the Young Democratic Clubs of Wisconsin's Seventh District. He also ran as the Democratic candidate for Shawano County prosecutor.

Behind this Democratic front, however, young McCarthy had the reputation of a pinko. He was quick to take the stump and deliver bitter speeches about the "Hoover depression." He hung around with the radical element in Waupaca. When he accepted a job in the law office of a staunch Republican in nearby Shawano, the Waupaca County Post wrote jokingly on February 20, 1936: "Just to add a dash of zest in the life of Mike Eberlien's new hired man (McCarthy), we carefully padded his brief case with a couple of copies of the New Masses, a recent edition of the Daily Worker and a vest-pocket sized Das Kapital."

This was a teasing reference to the fact that McCarthy's new boss didn't realize he had hired the neighboring town's leading pinko. Of course, McCarthy was able to change his political spots overnight, to adjust his policies to suit his purpose. In time, he ran the gamut from the far left to the far right. He has given voice to every philosophy under the political sun. But what are his true beliefs? Where does his allegiance lie?

Newspapers are charged with the duty of guarding the liberties and freedom of America. The United States is the haven of the free world. If a threat to our liberties is not challenged by the newspapers of the country, we, too, will join the inevitable march towards a totalitarian state. It destroyed Germany, it will prove the eventual downfall of Russia and if the present trend continues in this country, it is conceivable that we too may be in line to go the way of all dictatorships.

If other newspapers will remain silent because of fear of advertising and circulation boycotts, which has been McCarthy's methods of silencing opposition, this newspaper will do its duty in the interests of freedom. Ours may be the only voice shouting in the wilderness.

I cannot expect some stupid, gullible people to believe me because there are none so blind as those who will not see. But I hope, that among the rest, if only a slight spark of understanding is kindled, the truth might nourish and grow until the flame becomes a conflagration which will consume this evil influence that has descended over our land and has caused a blight on the thinking, liberty and freedom of the people.

This series will continue daily until all the evidence I have gathered against McCarthy is brought out. His sadism, perversion and traitorous conduct will see the light of day.

I do not intend to be smart, facetious or crude because human weaknesses should not be exploited. Abnormalities of unfortunates should not be exposed to ridicule and though perversion might be tolerated among those whose lives do not affect the country's welfare, it does become a menace when these weaknesses imperil the strength of the nation.

WHERE I STAND

by HANK GREENSPUN

Is McCarthy really a secret Communist?

It cannot be denied that McCarthy has been shouting louder than anyone else against the Communists. Yet for all his shouting, he has not uncovered a single Communist who wasn't already known to the FBI.

McCarthy has been showered with greenbacks from well-wishers; he has collected fabulous contributions from right-wing millionaires; he extorted from the taxpayers the largest appropriation ever spent on a Congressional investigation. All this money was supposedly invested to help him hunt Communists. He was armed with subpoena power, deluged with tips and leads. Yet, after four years of investigating, he hasn't come up with a single new Communist.

But if McCarthy has done the Communists no real harm, has he helped their cause? He has been undermining the democratic processes and subverting American values. Does this help Communism? He has been stirring neighbor against neighbor, sowing seeds of suspicion, spreading confusion and hysteria.

Has he played into Communist hands? The Communist strategy, as any expert can tell you, is to divide and conquer. They hope to inflame labor against capital, Jew against Gentile, Protestant against Catholic, white against black. They preach hate and fear and suspicion. Their blueprint for revolution is to disorganize the populace, paralyze the government; then take over with a strong-disciplined minority.

The Communists do a lot of shouting, just like McCarthy. They shout about civil rights, about the downtrodden Negro, about slum clearance. But there are no civil rights in Russia; they don't care about the Negro except to use him; and they secretly delight in slums, which are the cesspools of Communism. Likewise the Communists shout against McCarthy, but they are no more sincerely anti-McCarthy than they are sincerely pro-civil rights.

Herbert Philbrick, the FBI counter-spy who rose higher in the Communist party than did Whitaker Chambers, Louis Budenz, Elizabeth Bentley, among other, has this to say about McCarthy: "According to leaders of the Communist Party, McCarthy has helped them a great deal. The kind of attacks he has made do three things the comrades like. They add greatly to the confusion, putting up a smoke screen for the party and making it more difficult than ever for people to discern just who is a Communist and who is not; they make the Party appear a lot stronger than it is; and they do considerable damage to some of the stupid liberals whom the party hates."

Who has benefitted more than the Communists from McCarthy's attacks on the State Department? on the Army? the Voice of America? Is it only coincidence that McCarthy has heaped his strongest abuse upon the same men the Kremlin wished to discredit? — such leaders as General George Marshall, who bolstered Western Europe against Communism; ex-Secretary of State Dean Acheson, whom diplomats regarded as the greatest anti-Communist brain; Phillip Jessup, who made such a fool of Andrei Vishinsky at the United Nations that the Kremlin called him back to Moscow until McCarthy blocked Jessup's re-appointment in the Senate. McCarthy also organized a smear campaign against General Douglas MacArthur and General Dwight Eisenhower until it became politically unpopular to keep it up.

Eric Sevareid, brilliant commentator and reporter for the Columbia Broadcasting System in a speech before the School of Journalism of the University of Minnesota, said: "For the uninitiated, let me give a couple of small but typical examples of how the McCarthys can use even the best of the daily press to do their work.

When, during McCarthy's assault of innuendo against Ambassador Charles Bohlen, the press play began to go against him, he reached into his bag of tricks. His demanded — the headline word is always, "demanded," somehow — that Bohlen be subjected to a lie-detector test. Now, it was preposterously impossible that the administration, having nominated Bohlen, would subject its distinguished diplomat to any such indignity or that Bohlen would accept the indignity.

Every sensible reporter and editor in town knew this was just a McCarthy straw man, for headline purposes. Yet, as sober a paper as the Washington Star gave an eight-column banner line to this so-called "demand," which of course spread the notion among those who "read as they run" that Charles Bohlen might be a liar."

"Again in difficulties, McCarthy and his office carefully leaked out the news that he was on his way to consult with Whitaker Chambers. This was entirely a stunt, yet so responsible a paper as the Washington Post gave it an eight-column headline, which of course spread the notion among those who read as they 'run' that somehow Bohlen was mixed up with Alger Hiss and the now famous "Pumpkin Patch" papers and treason. And McCarthy stayed in the headlines that much longer, prolonged the agony for Bohlen and the President that much more, and spread through innuendo an evil lie that much further."

When President Eisenhower appointed Bohlen to be Ambassador to Moscow, he knew that Bohlen was the best informed man in this country on Soviet technique. The Russians feared Bohlen because he knew too much about them. The Daily Worker heaped storms of abuse upon Bohlen and Eisenhower for appointing him, yet McCarthy was the man who tried to block the Bohlen appointment in the Senate. Whose game was McCarthy playing? Was he secretly following the Communist Party line.

Just a few months back, McCarthy unloosed upon the country the shocking news that Fort Monmouth was a hotbed of espionage and Soviet intrigue. His committee rushed to Monmouth and held hearings for over a week. Employees were suspended indiscriminately. Some of the nation's top scientists resigned from this all-important signal corps research center because of McCarthy's smear against all who were engaged in the top-secret work.

McCarthy made the headlines of the nation, quickly dropped the investigation and went charging after some other sensitive nerve center of the government.

What are the true facts of the Fort Monmouth investigation?

After an intensive investigation by Army Intelligence, secretary of the Army Stevens, issued a statement that there was no evidence of espionage at Monmouth. It was too late, however! The place had been disorganized, scientists refused to go back to work because of the smears and innuendoes, and valuable research projects were impeded.

The truth of the McCarthy investigation of Monmouth has now been ascertained by no less an organization than the FBI. Senator McCarthy was led into making the shocking charges by a Communist agent.

He did a job for the Commies. As clever a case of sabotage by Russia as has ever been perpetrated in this country. The FBI knows the story but nothing will come of it because of possible embarrassment to McCarthy.

It was also Senator McCarthy who defended the German war criminals and accused the American Army of torturing them. The Nazi murderers who massacred American war prisoners at Malmedy were sentenced to death. On the floor of the Senate McCarthy screamed that the judges who convicted the Nazis were "morons." As for the United States officers who obtained the confessions, McCarthy demanded they be given the lie-detector test.

McCarthy's accusations against the American judges who convicted the murderers at Malmedy kept up for several weeks, both on and off the Senate floor. The Communist press in Germany was echoing every word; mass meetings were held, and an inflamed Germany threatened riots if the convicted murderers were executed. The sentences were commuted. The murderers of American boys shot to death while their hands were tied behind their backs escaped with their lives. The victory belonged to Joe McCarthy and the German Communists.

But the amazing, little known fact is that the charges hurled by McCarthy on the Senate floor were sent to him in the first place by a German Communist, one named Rudolf Aschenauer. McCarthy was caught red-handed in possession of a manila envelope with Aschenauer's address in the upper left corner.

The Communists needed a U.S. Senator to give the false charges respectability, so they would carry more weight in Germany. McCarthy carried out the Communist plan. He got away with it.

The Swiss police also caught a confessed Communist, by the name of Davis, working on McCarthy's payroll. When McCarthy denied any connection with Davis, the Swiss Court produced a letter from Davis to McCarthy and the records of trans-Atlantic phone conversations between the two.

So, despite McCarthy's efforts to shout it down, the whisper still persists: "Is Senator McCarthy really a secret Communist?"

Is Senator McCarthy a secret Communist?

Joe McCarthy has instituted a reign of fear and terror in the capital of the nation, unequalled since, perhaps, the days of the War of 1812 when the British invaded Washington.

To accomplish this nefarious plot, he had to have help. It would be interesting at this time to show the people with whom the senator counseled, conserted and picked as his aides. A study of these individuals with their backgrounds would be indicative of the type of person we can expect to infest the government when and if McCarthy does become president of the United States. It would not even be necessary for the senator to achieve the presidency, because all his present recommendations for high government posts are receiving favorable consideration from the present administration.

An analysis of the men and women around McCarthy would not make pleasant reading. It might even be classed as shocking but the truth should not be sugar-coated especially when it presents a pattern which has destroyed other countries and is presently endangering ours.

McCarthy's chief assistant and hatchet man is a former FBI agent by the name of Don Surine. Surine was fired from that agency for supposedly disregarding FBI rules and regulations.

In testifying before a government committee, Surine stated under oath that he resigned from the FBI. He knew he had committed an act of perjury in this testimony so, in order to cover himself, he immediately dispatched a letter to J. Edgar Hoover on Feb. 7, 1950. The text of the letter to J. Edgar Hoover, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation, follows:

"Dear Mr. Hoover: I regret to advise you that as of Feb. 7, 1950, I desire to submit my resignation as a Special Agent. I have enjoyed working for you the past ten years or more and have appreciated your considerations in various personal and official matters during that time.

"In the event I can ever be of service to the Bureau please do not hesitate to call upon me.

"Sincerely, Donald A. Surine."

On March 6, 1950, the following letter was dispatched to Surine by Hoover:

"Dear Sir: The Bureau has been advised of your recent conversation with Inspector Nease and it will not be possible to change the manner in which you were separated from the Bureau's rolls. As you have been previously advised, the action was based upon a complete disregard of Bureau Rules and Regulations and no facts were submitted by you to warrant altering the original action in your case.

"Very Truly Yours, J. Edgar Hoover, Director."

Beneath this seemingly pleasant and official interchange of communications, there is an undercurrent of gross immorality which seems to typify the people with whom Senator McCarthy has surrounded himself.

The following affidavit gives a clearer insight into the type of person who is presently McCarthy's chief administrative assistant. When this affidavit was made, Surine was married and a father of 3 children.

"I, Raymond F. Weber, was living with Doris Jo Perry at the Emerson Hotel in Baltimore at the time of her arrest. She was arrested while visiting the room of two Army officers for immoral purposes. She was arrested by two FBI men — one of them being Don Surine — who later came to my room and arrested me. I was booked and released on bail that same day.

"Upon returning to the Emerson Hotel to get my luggage, I happened to step into the same elevator with Doris. She signaled me to follow her, and I followed her to Mandell's restaurant. She told me that Surine had turned her loose with the understanding she would help prosecute me. She also told me that Surine was going to put her in a different hotel and take care of her. During the next few months while I was out on bail, I saw Doris several times. She referred frequently to the fact that she had nothing to worry about because Surine would take care that nothing happened to her.

"I also learned from Doris that Surine was visiting with her almost every day, that he slept with her occasionally at the Abbey Hotel where he had put her up. I was present on a number of occasions when Doris called Surine and when Surine called Doris to make arrangements for a date later. Surine frequently picked up Doris at Burke's restaurant where she drank heavily.

"Naturally, I was sore having Surine, the same FBI man who had arrested me, going around with my girl friend and sleeping with her while I was awaiting trial. So I made a complaining call to the FBI. I understand that Surine was dismissed from the FBI as a result of the subsequent investigation into his relationship with Doris. Incidentally, I pleaded guilty, and Doris never testified against me. We are still good friends.

"Raymond F. Weber."

"Notary Seal."

I also have in my possession an affidavit from the woman in the case, Doris Jo Perry. She substantially confirms everything stated by Weber except that her affidavit contains many more details, all tending to show the immorality of the man who today has terrorized every witness to be brought before the McCarthy committee. Fear of Don Surine is only secondary to that of McCarthy.

Surine expects every witness to answer questions truthfully before senate committees though he himself committed perjury on more than one occasion.

Ed Babcock, another one of McCarthy's administrative assistants was picked up by Washington police in 1950 and charged with the offense of solicitation for a lewd and immoral purpose, rgy and fought to keep him on, but pressure from the administration forced "Doc" out of the picture.

And, thus, we see that in order to qualify as a member of the inner sanctum of the McCarthy cabinet, one must be a liar, a communist, a pervert, or all three. In fact, being a member of the "Gay" set is almost a condition precedent to landing a job with McCarthy.

This is the man who is being groomed for President of the United States. A country which can pridefully point to presidents Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson.

"What fools we mortals be."

which is the District of Columbia charge for soliciting another man to engage in unnatural sexual acts. Babcock pleaded guilty and paid a heavy fine while the press tried to hush the story.

Charlie Davis, another operative of McCarthy, was dishonorably discharged from the United States Navy for confessed homosexuality. He admits he belonged to the Communist party organization in Southern California right after World War II. Records show Davis is of extremely low moral character and would do anything for money.

Roy Cohn and G. David Schine, the attorney and investigator, respectively, for the McCarthy committee, are in a class by themselves. Their puerile behaviorism is in complete character with the type of investigations which McCarthy pursues; neither consistent, constructive, informative, intelligent nor investigative for that matter.

The favorite story in Washington today is about Cohn and Schine following McCarthy down the corridors of the senate building after a committee hearing. Joe happened to lapse into his normal gait which is a little to the left of manly, and Schine observing the effeminate crawl, poked Cohn in the ribs and in real be-bop language tittered: "dig that crazy convertible."

To adequately describe these "Katzenjammer Kids," their background, and the effect they have on International relations, would take a volume of words, so, of necessity, a separate chapter will be needed to chronicle their misdeeds.

And, now we come to Dr. J. B. Matthews, who became staff director of the McCarthy "Circus" committee last spring, after McCarthy decided that tall, blonde, handsome, dreamy-eyed Schine was not heavy enough for the job.

"Doc" Matthews, as he is affectionately called by all his co-workers, is of the same ilk, stripes and class as his "boss," McCarthy, and the rest of the crummy immoral group of bogeymen who are now frightening an entire nation. "Doc" got his start with the House Un-American Activties Committee when Congressman Martin Dies of Texas was its chairman.

"Doc" was chief investigator for the group and his first big headline game when Chairman Dies startled the press of the country with the sensational story that the Un-American Activities Committee offices were burglarized and files on secret activities were filched.

The story of the burglary is not exactly as Martin Dies told the quickly assembled reporters although Dies really believed it to be true at the time. The real scoop on the sensational "robbry" is this: —

"Doc" Matthews was in the habit of throwing "hot parties" in the staff office late at night. On this occasion, somebody went wild and smashed a window with an empty whiskey bottle. "Doc" and Bob Stripling, secretary of the committeee, quickly sobered up and had to figure a way "out" and fast! "Doc" hit on the bright idea of blaming the Communists; so, Bob and "Doc" jerked open the file cases and scattered the contents over the floor. Next morning, Congressman Dies was called in to survey the ruins — which, incidentally did not include the whiskey bottles.

"Doc" was later fired by Dies when it was discovered that he was serving two masters. "Doc" was stealing Dies' thunder of filching "hot dope" from the files and ghost-writing speeches for Congressman J. Parnell Thomas, a member of the Committee who had red-baiting ambitions of his own. Later Thomas became Chairman of the Committee and really did a job on the Reds until he was retired from the Committee, and by Congress because of a minor transgression like padding payrolls. Thomas exchanged his Congressional immunity for prison stripes.

The best description of "Doc" Matthews comes from no less and authority than the "old describer" himself, Westbrook Pegler, who in one of his better columns referred to Matthews as a "fellow-traveler" and "self-confessed female impersonator." Of course, Pegler and Matthews have since made up and are both now playing on the same team.

This is the same man, Dr. J. B. Matthews, chief investigator for Sen. Joe McCarthy, who gave the Eisenhower administration its first great setback with a false and bigoted story in a national magazine in which the Protestant clergy was characterized as being "infiltrated with Communists."

McCarthy approved of his investigators' conclusion on the

A Rich Man, A Growing Power

HAROLDSON LAFAYETTE HUNT, of Dallas, Tex., may be the richest man in America, which, if true, ordinarily would be of only passing interest.

However, in the last 30 months Hunt has created an organization of growing power in American mass communications and public opinion.

This organization is Facts Forum. It is, Hunt says, a nonpartisan, non-political, educational project with strict rules against carrying on propaganda or attempting to influence legislation. Except for anti-communism, and soil and water conservation, it has no opinions of its own, he says.

On this basis Facts Forum has, according to its figures, gathered 125,000 participants in its varicus activities; it has obtained over a million dollars worth annually of free radio and television time; it has presented many famous Americans in various interview and panel shows; it produces one network radio show and one network television-radio simulcast and is considering taking over a third well-known radio show. Its network time is free.

On this same basis of nonpartisanship, it sends out a mass of literature and "public opinion polls" to newspapers, radio stations and to every member of Congress.

On this same basis it has obtained a federal tax exemption both for its expenditures and for its contributors. Recently a former moderator for Facts Forum was appointed to the most powerful single body governing mass communications in America, the Federal Communications Commission.

Facts Forum began officially in June, 1951. It helps create local discussion groups whose basic information comes from the description of "both sides" of national issues as interpreted by Facts Forum. These "both sides" presentations are broadcast over 222 radio stations on recordings made by Dan Smoot, an ex-FBI agent who is now chief moderator for Facts Forum. The material for these broadcasts comes partly from a free circulating library with hundreds of titles and 20,000 books, which are given free to participants who get six other persons to read any given book first. Transcripts from the "both sides" broadcasts are sent to interested listeners and are reprinted in the organization's house organ, the Facts Forum News, which is sent to 60,000 persons monthly.

Haroldson Lafayette Hunt: He is the Forum's 'angel' and may be the richest man in the U.S.

Facts Forum also conducts a "public opinion poll" on certain selected questions, the results of which it releases as news to 1,800 newspapers, 500 radio stations and every member of Congress, some of whom introduce it into the Congressional Record.

Facts Forum also pays for certain newspaper and periodical activities by individuals.

It has 20 paid persons on its staff, mostly in the headquarters in Dallas, with branch offices elsewhere. It has a paid organizer and speech instructor for use in localities where Facts Forum activities are being created.

In recent months Facts Forum has branched out into radio and television network shows. It now produces the Mutual Broadcasting System show, "State of the Nation," a half-hour radio show on 315 stations on free time. It also produces the American Broadcasting Company television-radio half-hour show, "Answers for Americans," also on free time. Both shows have been favorably reviewed by impartial critics.

These are in addition to a half-hour television show filmed by Facts Forum in Washington and sent out free to 58 stations. The basic Dan Smoot "both sides" program is on 222 radio stations.

The moderator for Facts Forum on its two network shows is now in negotiation to add the MBS half-hour radio program, "Reporters' Roundup" to the growing list of Facts Forum activities.

The man behind this growing national organization is probably the most obscure individual among the rich men of the world. He broke his lifelong rule against personal publicity by announcing the formation of Facts Forum but before that, H. L. Hunt was unknown even to many citizens of Dallas.

It is problematical whether Hunt is, as he has been labeled, "The Richest Man in America" or "The Man Who Comes Closer Than Anyone Else on Earth to Being a Billionaire." He abhors such terms.

Yet, more is known about many local bankers than about H. L. Hunt. He is not in "Who's Who." In 10 years there are only two known references of any size to him in national magazines. A national magazine once tried to interview him, gave up and almost did a story on the difficulties of seeing H. L. Hunt. When Life magazine surreptitiously photographed Hunt crossing a street in Dallas, it was regarded as an incident of note.

Twenty-five years ago, no national magazine would have bothered to sneak a picture of Hunt. He was then an oil driller whose operations were undistinguished in size. Before that he was a farmer.

Worked as Farmhand, Lumberjack, at Odd Jobs

Hunt was born on a farm near Vandalia, Ill. At the age of three, it is said, he could read and write, but he had to leave the fourth grade to go to work. He worked as farmhand, lumberjack and at odd jobs. His father, who had fought in the Confederate Army, had once described the rich soil around the battlefields in Lake Village, Ark., so there H. L. Hunt finally went to grow cotton and pecans.

Hunt was and is a gambling man. In Lake Village today they say that he won his first oil lease in a poker game—on a bluff. Thus, about 1920, Haroldson Hunt got the whiff of oil. By 1930 he was doing moderately well, wildcatting around Van Zandt Country, just east of Dallas, and Scurry County, 250 miles to the west. It was the beginning of the Depression, and other drillers were pulling out. Hunt had a hunch there was something there and put everything he had into the two areas.

"Making money is something some people have a knack for," Hunt has said. He had the knack. By plunging in east Texas and Scurry County, H. L. Hunt got in on the ground floor of the two largest known oil deposits in the United States. It was these underground pools which made the multi-millionaires of Texas during the Depression.

Hunt is still adventurous. He still bets at the race tracks, but now with hundreds of dollars—and with the help of an employe who is a graduate statistician from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

At 64, Hunt is vigorous, stands six feet tall, has green eyes and generous grey hair. An admirer of George Washington, he lives in a five-times-larger replica of Mount Vernon, in Dallas. He has four sons and two daughters. One of his sons left school at the age of 19 to go into the oil business and made $3,000,000 before his health broke down.

Has a Distaste for Conspicuous Spending

Unlike some of his Texas oil colleagues, Hunt has not spent money openly on charities in amounts that would indicate his wealth, or indulged in financially publicized businesses. Texas oilman H. R. Cullen, for example, once gave a single gift of $150,000,000, and this year rewarded his favorite college football team for a single victory by giving their college over $2,000,000. Hunt has a distaste for such conspicuous expenditures. Another fabulous oilman, Clint Murchison, has made generous financial contributions to projects of Sen. Joseph McCarthy and controls companies whose known value is $302,000,000. For Hunt's fortune there are only estimates.

Hunt is estimated to own $200,000,000 worth of farmland. He is estimated to be the biggest independent oil operator in the world, with holdings in excess of $500,000,000. He is estimated to be the largest grower of pecans in the world. He has, in addition, gold mines, natural gas and other interests. His gross income has been estimated at $200,000 a day, an unusually large portion of which he can keep because of special exemptions for venture oil drilling.

Politically, Hunt is not noisy. Like his friend, novelist Louis Bromfield, he hates the New Deal and the Fair Deal and loves the soil. (Hunt owns more soil, probably, than any other American.) Some say that he has a farmer's coolness toward cities generally and toward the melting-pot atmosphere of the East, specifically. He has said, "The healthiest thinking in this country is being done by people who live on medium-sized farms."

Hunt made the bulk of his fortune during the Depression, a period which, he feels strongly, marked a deplorable tendency among his fellow Americans to demand welfare services from the federal government. He feels that the Democratic Party, except for the Dixiecrat movement, is the instrument of socialism and Communism in this country, and that the Republican Party as presently constituted displays dangerously radical tendencies.

In addition, he believes the American government should limit itself to the affairs of this country to a much greater degree than it does at present. During the first Iranian oil crisis, when Britain reportedly was threatening to withdraw from NATO if American oilmen continued to move into Anglo-Iranian operations, H. L. Hunt quietly appeared in Iran. This was after a strong plea by the American State Department that Americans stay out of the Iranian-British fight. Hunt feels the State Department meddles too much in foreign and business affairs.

MacArthur's Strongest Supporter in 1952

Hunt supported General MacArthur for the presidency in 1948 and later, when the general was deposed by President Truman and visited Texas in a special plane, Hunt was on his plane. Hunt was MacArthur's strongest supporter for the presidential nomination in 1952 and paid much of the bill for the "spontaneous" demonstrations for MacArthur at the Republican convention. Hunt is a firm supporter of MacArthur's foreign policy of total war in Asia or total withdrawal.

Apparently, Hunt was not prepared to start a third party in 1952, for MacArthur was run later that year by the Constitution Party, the America First Party, and the Christian Nationalist Party. But at the last minute Hunt, a Texas delegate to the Republican convention, switched his vote to Eisenhower.

Hunt is also a strong supporter of Texas' nominally Democratic governor, Allan Shivers, who supported Eisenhower, largely on the basis of the latter's promise to return oil-rich tidelands to the states. Recently Governor Shivers awarded tidelands leases in the largest transfer of such oil properties in history. The biggest single awardee was H. L. Hunt, who got more than 100,000 acres at an average of $6 an acre. Others paid averages as high as $400 an acre.

Hunt believes that Shivers is a good possibility for President of the United States. He thinks the same of Senator McCarthy, a friend of his whose name has been linked to Facts Forum. Once Hunt was asked by a reporter if he was one of McCarthy's "angels" and Hunt, grinning, replied, "I think that's stretching it a little."

Recently, Hunt was asked if he were supporting McCarthy for the presidency in 1956. He replied:

"Some day I might be able to answer that better. But I think it is a little too early. It's two years away. I may also be interested in Joe Martin, or Senator Byrd, or Senator Jenner, or Senator Bridges. Or Governor Shivers."

But Hunt avowedly admires McCarthy and McCarthy's methods.

Bought 50,000 Copies Of Jenner's Report

Hunt, as did the Republican National Committee, bought 50,000 copies of Senator Jenner's report of alleged subversive infiltration of the Roosevelt administration. Hunt promoted distribution of the report in the Facts Forum News. During the 1952 campaign the Hunt family in their own name contributed $11,900 to help elect J. Glenn Beall as Republican senator from Maryland and to attempt to elect Zales Ecton senator from Montana and Chapman Revercomb senator from West Virginia.

However, an organization called "Americans for America," spent more than $50,000 for the benefit of utra-conservative Republican candidates all over the country. Honorary chairman of this organization was Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck, a supporter of America First before World War II and of Senator McCarthy afterward. General Wood is a national officer of Facts Forum. The biggest contributor to Americans for America was H. L. Hunt.

Yet, all this was done with a minimum of publicity. It was Facts Forum which put Hunt in the news. Facts Forum is believed to be the most public and at the same time the largest non-profit enterprise in which Hunt has ever indulged.

Facts Forum has existed for 30 months. During the first—and relatively quiet—half of its life Facts Forum spent about $200,000 tax-free dollars, and the Hunts gave Facts Forum $219,000 tax-free dollars. Facts Forum will not say what its current budget is. But in the second 15 months of its operations it has expanded enormously. It has added at least four regional offices with paid organizers (one in Hunt's birthplace, Vandalia, Ill.), and entered network radio and television activities on a coast-to-coast scale. So there is reason to believe that the $200,000 expenditures of the early months of Facts Forum is only a fraction of the current budget. In those early months, the Hunts supplied more than 95 per cent of the listed contributions.

Unanimous Approval For 'Forum' Lacking

With such admirable aims announced by Facts Forum, one would expect unanimous approval. The "town meeting" idea has always been popular in this country. And, indeed, many national figures have expressed publicly their full support of Facts Forum. These include Sen. George Malone, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, and Sen. John W. Bricker.

But there are some startling demurrers. This is odd for a "nonpartisan educational" enterprise. One of Washington's better known Washington correspondents, Carleton Kent, of the Chicago Sun-Times, offered money for merely interviewing a senator on Facts Forum, declared, "I wouldn't touch that organization with a ten-foot pole." Sen. Estes Kefauver who appeared in one of the first Facts Forum television broadcasts, said, "I wish I knew then what I know now about that organization." Sen. Warren Magnuson, who appeared on the first Facts Forum television show with Senator McCarthy, was asked to make another Facts Forum appearance but declined. This is a pattern repeated by others.

Why there should be such unprecedented distrust of a "non partisan educational" organization will be discussed in later articles.

Tomorrow: How Facts Forum Gives "Both Sides."

The Facts About Facts Forum—#2 12-28-53 BY BEN H. BAGDIKIAN

On Giving 'Both Sides' of an Issue

ONE of the most admirable projects a man of wealth could underwrite would be the stimulation of rational debate among Americans on the problems facing them.

With the destruction of civilization a possible penalty for unwise decisions, a calm and judicious citizenry would have a better chance of surviving the perils of the atomic and the totalitarian age.

When H. L. Hunt, the Texas oilman, came out of a lifelong silence to announce such a program—a nonpartisan, non-political educational organization—many persons hoped that this happy occasion had arrived.

Into this organization, Facts Forum, Hunt poured hundreds of thousands of dollars until today it is a nationwide project of 125,000 participants with a number of network radio-television and other public-opinion projects.

The basic coast-to-coast radio program of Facts Forum is a presentation, largely on free time, of "both sides" of national issues as interpreted by the staff of Facts Forum and given over the air by Facts Forum's chief moderator, Dan Smoot.

Dan Smoot

As this basic program progressed the Facts Forum version of "both sides" made many listeners uneasy. They seemed to feel that "both sides" were not equal in emphasis as interpreted by Facts Forum.

In January of 1952, for example, Smoot gave "both sides" of a Facts Forum question, "Should we negotiate whatever peace we can get in Korea?" Of Facts Forum members polled, 85 per cent had voted to stay in Korea, 15 per cent to get out any way we could. To the argument for staying in Korea, Smoot devoted less than 300 words of the broadcast, to the argument for getting out, more than 1,000 words.

A Program on the Death Penalty for Those Who Would Overthrow Government

Some broadcasts also seemed to be not so much "both sides" of a single issue, but merely two versions of the same side.

For example, Facts Forum devoted one program to the question of whether advocating the overthrow of the government by force and violence should be punishable by death. Presumably the two sides of this question would be (1) Yes, the death penalty should be imposed, and (2) No, the death penalty is too severe and present laws should remain.

But as presented by Facts Forum, the pro-death penalty argument was that Communists threaten the security of 150,000,000 Americans and therefore are guilty of a crime worse than murder, which in many states is a capital crime.

Facts Forum's argument against the death penalty was made, in part, in these words:

"The real, subtle, accomplishing influence of communism is achieved not by the card-carrying members of the party or by the publicly known fellow travelers, but by the people in the lunatic fringe which surrounds the party.

It's Not the Commies, but Some Who Think They Are Anti-Communist

"People in this fringe group are never identified as Communist sympathizers and many of them seem to be unaware of it themselves. . . . It is these people and not the Communists who are responsible for all of the first-rate achievements of communism in the United States."

Facts Forum often repeats the thesis that the nation is in danger of complete collapse because of subversion and that this is the doing, not of Communists, but of certain people who think they are anti-Communist. Facts Forum concluded that to kill these people who think they are anti-Communist would be to abridge their civil rights.

A study of Facts Forum presentations of "both sides" shows that there is a consistent approach to national issues and that this approach involves these factors:

1. Facts Forum regards as on one side in one camp, the liberal, moderate and conservative views. The "other side" is the extremist right.

2. In arguing for what it says is the viewpoint of the liberal-moderate-conservative side of an issue, Facts Forum uses dryly rational, subdued style. In arguing for what it says is "the other side"—the extremist right—Facts Forum uses highly emotional, inflammatory language.

3. Facts Forum presents what is often a fair and factual description of the liberal-moderate-conservative side. Then, in presenting its version of "the other side," it devotes much of its time charging the liberal-moderate-conservative element in this country with subversion, betrayal, and treason.

4. On Facts Forum, personalities and name-calling often

'Both Sides' Interpretation Upsets Many

dominate and facts are forgotten.

An example of how the "both sides" technique works is the Facts Forum broadcast of "both sides" of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act. It said of those against the act:

"The gallant fight against the bill was led by Senators Humphrey, Lehman, Kefauver, Moody, Benton and Douglas. These champions of real democracy and international understanding certainly would not have tried to defeat this bill if it had been a good one . . ." The broadcast then listed some of the organizations against the bill which, it said, "include nearly all religious and racial groups, the CIO and most of the AF of L affiliates."

How Facts Forum Presents 'Other Side'

Facts Forum then presented "the other side:"

"Those who want to destroy the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act would throw open the doors of the United States to the Socialist hordes of Europe. They are not worried about the downtrodden people of Europe. They want to flood America with people who have been drenched by the Socialist propaganda of Eastern Europe—people who would swell the tide of Socialist votes in our great industrial centers.

"This is the purpose of those who know what they are doing—the Americans for Democratic Action, whose aims and ideals are almost identical with those of the Socialist Labor Party of Britain; the American Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born, an officially cited Communist organization; the National Lawyers Guild, another known Communist front; and the Communist Party itself.

"And, of course, rallying around these is the usual clique of innocent dupes who don't know what they are doing—the gulliberals—who have always done the work of the Communist Party."

Dan Smoot ended this Facts Forum broadcast with the words:

"I have just given some views of conservatives who look upon the McCarran-Walter Act as one of the best and most generous pieces of legislation ever enacted in America or elsewhere—and of liberals with an opposite point of view."

Another time Facts Forum presented "both sides" of the question, "Should we continue to handle Korea as a limited police action?"

The first part of the program was devoted to the arguments of those who favor American intervention in Korea. It quoted the schoolish terms of Gen. Omar Bradley and the relatively unemotional words of Adlai Stevenson. "Korea," it quoted Stevenson, "is the most remarkable effort the world has ever seen to make collective security work. In choosing to repel the first armed aggression of the Communists, we chose to make bitter sacrifices today to save civilization tomorrow . . ." Thus went in style and tempo the argument for handling Korea as a police action.

Then came, as Facts Forum put it, "the other side":

'It Is a Strange War For a Man Who . . .'

"It is a strange war for a man who has been taught to love the American flag but who now finds himself fighting under a blue flag representing a world organization of which his enemy, the Soviet, is a member.

"He is in a Korean foxhole as the result of a United Nations order, but our Constitution says that only Congress can declare war. It's called a United Nations' police action, but the United Nations' only noticeable contribution is the policy of appeasement which keeps the Americans from winning . . .

"It's cold up here in the winter—sometimes 30 below zero. If a boy cries his tears turn to ice. And then there is the enemy, always the enemy. Joe can feel him out there in the blackness, and sometimes he can hear him. And sometimes when a star shell bursts overhead, he can see him—not one, but thousands, moving relentlessly forward . . .

"Presently, the third assault wave starts, and then the noise—the screaming, eerie unearthly noise of mindless men in a banzai charge. And a boy from Texas starts firing as fast as he can feed clips into his automatic weapon. He fires until the gun is red hot in his hands. The Commies die. They die by the hundreds, and fall in heaps; but there are endless numbers of them. For every one that falls, ten come up to charge over his dead body; and some of them get through—one, ten, or a thousand.

"Then it is the kind of fight that man fought centuries ago; knives and fists, fingers groping for eyes, and teeth seeking a soft spot in the neck. Maybe Joe will die in the slit trench, and maybe he will live—his hands sour and gummy with half-digested rice gruel ripped out of the stomach of a bleeding bundle of rags and bones at his feet . . .

"Korea. Police action or war? A question for all Americans. This is Dan Smoot for Facts Forum."

Tomorrow: Which side is the Facts Forum side?

The Facts About Facts Forum—#3 12-30-53 BY BEN H. BAGDIKIAN

How to Identify a 'Conservative'

IT has been asserted that Facts Forum, the "educational association for the dissemination of information, training and enlightenment," backed by Texas oilman H. L. Hunt, is being used as a vehicle for the sentiments of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

This has been denied by Facts Forum.

The fact that half of its basic program more often than not is devoted to the political philosophy and methods of Senator McCarthy could be coincidental.

This program goes over 222 radio stations, largely on free time, and is Facts Forum's own version of "both sides" of important national issues.

It also could be coincidental that in this basic broadcast Facts Forum usually presents as one side of each issue the sentiments of the extremist, isolationist right.

There is evidence, however, that this extremist, isolationist side is also the side of Facts Forum's backers and officials.

The McCarthy connection will be discussed later.

But some listeners thought that beginning with that point in the 1953 session of Congress when President Eisenhower signed the bill giving tidelands to the states, Facts Forum expressed with increasing frequency direct criticism of the Eisenhower administration. On many such occasions the argument was not what is accepted as the major political argument in this country: a defense of the Eisenhower administration against the point of view that the administration should be more "liberal." In most cases the "both sides" involved a defense of the administration against the McCarthy point of view, that is, that Eisenhower is too leftist.

In describing the two sides of whether Eisenhower was cleaning up the "mess" in Washington, the "no" side appeared to be pure McCarthy:

"The new telephone directory of the State Department," Facts Forum said after reciting a defense of Eisenhower, "shows fewer than 15 names of key men missing from the old Acheson directory . . . the new administration's proposed resolution of these (Yalta and Potsdam) agreements and the appointment of Bohlen, one of the architects of our old policy of Soviet appeasement, completely white-washed the worst errors of the Roosevelt-Truman foreign policy. . . . There is no question about the ability and high-minded integrity of President Eisenhower. But he cannot possibly perform the superhuman task of putting this nation back on the road toward peace and freedom and national solvency with a team distinguished for its dedication to the old policies of Communist appeasement and New Deal Socialism. . . ."

This was in June, 1953.

This kind of argument appeared often as the "conservative" opinion in the United States. "What wasn't to be expected, however," one program concluded, "was that the Eisenhower administration would listen to Stevenson's appeasement recommendations with respect. . . ."

On many other issues conservatives listened with amazement to Facts Forum's presentation of what it called the "conservative" side.

On the issue of compulsory fair employment practices (FEPC), for example, conservatives generally oppose it because they feel it invades states' rights and employers' rights and because they feel education is better than legislation. Only the extremists have claimed that it is a subversive plot. Facts Forum's argument against it included:

"In 1928 international communism started a calculated program to stir up race hatreds in America. Within a few years the campaign began to reflect itself in political agitation for race and class legislation, and in riots and civil strife all over the nation. . . . Before the Communist race agitation began in 1928 we had achieved more harmony and mutual understanding among our racial groups. . . ."

Facts Forum also interposed what it presented as the "conservative" view of Negro anthropology:

"Remember that the Negroes, when first brought to America by Yankee and English merchants, were not free people reduced to slavery. They were merely transferred from a barbaric enslavement by their own people in Africa to a relatively benign enslavement in the Western Hemisphere. . . .

"Think of the condition in 1865. A large, illiterate and economically dependent population—a primitive people only recently removed from savagery with no cultural or racial traditions of their own had to be assimilated into a civilization which it had taken the white man 5,000 years to develop. . . ."

On the issue of modern education and federal aid to education, conservatives generally are opposed to it on the basis that modern education allows the individual too much freedom without teaching him discipline, and that federal aid might place centralized bureaucratic control over local schools. Facts Forum included on its "conservative" argument against federal aid and against modern education:

"Is any child ever taught that America is a constitutional Republic with a central government of limited powers—that it is not, was never intended to be and (God willing) may never become a democracy? . . .

"Unquestionably, much of modern education has had the subversive effect of battering down the safeguards of tradition and undermining American individualism, which is our only real guarantee against tyranny. . . ."

On the matter of whether the United States is a democracy, there is a curious schizophrenia in Facts Forum. Facts Forum's chief moderator, Dan Smoot, and its sponsor, H. L. Hunt, believe we are not a democracy and should not use the word

Facts

'Conservative' Viewpoint Is Extreme One

in connection with the United States—we are a constitutional Republic.

In October, 1953, Smoot declared in a personal speech in Canada, reprinted in the Facts Forum News:

"One of the best indications of how far we in the United States have slipped is the wide contemporary use by practically all of our intellectual and political leaders of the word 'democracy' to designate our system . . .

"The Founding Fathers knew, and Jefferson said in specific terms, that a democracy is the most evil kind of government possible."

Not only had the United States slipped, but so, apparently had Facts Forum. In its early months, when it was just starting as a public organization for enlightenment, Facts Forum broadcast:

"Democracy is a political outgrowth of the teachings of Jesus Christ . . . Christianity was essential to the creation of our democracy."

Again, in a broadcast of Facts Forum's creed, Smoot, in the early, slipping days of Facts Forum, broadcast:

"We in Facts Forum know that American democracy . . . is still the most nearly perfect expression ever made by man in legal and political terms of a basic ideal of Christianity."

Own Activities Cloud Claim of Impartiality

It is possible that a special guest on a Facts Forum broadcast, Arthur Conrad, had, in the meantime, been so persuasive he had reversed Facts Forum's stand on democracy. In arguing that public schools are in the grip of subversion, Conrad told the Facts Forum radio audience that in one textbook he had in mind "the United States is not referred to as a Republic—it is a democracy. Well, you see, Mr. Vishinsky talks about democracy. Mr. Acheson talks about democracy. Mr. Nehru talks about democracy. . ."

There are other evidences of Facts Forum's claims of impartiality being clouded by its own activities. On one broadcast, Smoot devoted the entire time to an uncritical review of the book, "The Key to Peace," by Dean Clarence Manion. This book holds that social developments in this country since 1932 h[illegible] and the result of deliberate subversion and that American society as it exists today is dominated by "alien philosophies."

"I don't know whether Dean Manion is right or wrong," Smoot concluded, "but I believe that a wide exchange of thought in the free market of ideas will produce solutions for the staggering problems of our time."

The transcript added that "The Key to Peace" is available in the Facts Forum free circulating library.

While encouraging "a wide exchange of ideas," Facts Forum, as far as is known, has never devoted a similar program to the opposite—and presumably majority—point of view: that social developments since 1932 were done with the approval of the electorate and are something other than subversive programs sneaked in by foreigners.

But now Facts Forum distributes a recording and transcripts of its own creed, entitled, "America's Promise," in which Smoot declares that in the Twentieth Century "alien philosophies" have been introduced into American society and all but ruined it. He said he drew the political philosophy for this broadcast from Manion's "The Key to Peace," which, in the interim, presumably, Facts Forum had decided was right.

Suggests Inquirer Trying to Interfere

Facts Forum has frequently answered critical questions about itself with the suggestion that the inquirer is merely trying to interfere with the exposure of spies. This, apparently, is based on the fact that Facts Forum declares it is anti-Communist and anyone critical of Facts Forum must therefore be against fighting communism.

Perhaps the first public evidence of a possible link between Senator McCarthy and Facts Forum was disclosed in a column by Frederic W. Collins, Washington correspondent for the Providence Journal-Bulletin. Collins had been approached to interview Senator McCarthy on a Facts Forum program. The approach was made by a former McCarthy aide, Victor Johnston, who is now director of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. Collins quoted Johnston as saying that Hunt was ready to spend some of his fortune electing "our kind of guy." The Collins article was picked up by many of the most respected newspapers in the country, but it was also quoted by the New York Communist paper, "The Worker."

Facts Forum chose the version cited in "The Worker" to photostat and reprint by the thousands. It sent this to its entire mailing list. It could not, it explained "repress a feeling of pride in making this enemy. The attack proves our program for Freedom has been sufficiently effective that instead of continuing to snipe at us through the usual news channels, the Communists' first team has finally come into the open with a direct attack."

Forum Felt Compelled To Remind Listeners

Yet, once in the past, when presenting arguments against Universal Military Training, Facts Forum felt compelled to remind its listeners:

"The Communists . . . have opposed UMT and thereby, some feel, have driven many anti-Communist forces into supporting a bill which they might otherwise oppose . . . The Communists have many times been found supporting measures they don't want and opposing measures they do."

It is interesting to note that some Facts Forum members apparently are responding to the organization's efforts to produce alarm at the word "Communist." Although "The Worker" reprint bore denials printed on the margin by H. L. Hunt and by Facts Forum's president, some members thought Facts Forum had joined the Communist cause. The next issue of the Facts Forum News explained on page one:

"Some who received our last mailing which included a reprint from the Communist newspaper, 'The Worker,' have written us deploring that 'The Worker' and Facts Forum have joined hands. Facts Forum hopes that it is still on the opposite side of the fence for it mailed out the reprint to impress that fact."

The Facts About Facts Forum — #4

How to Identify A Communist

BY BEN H. BAGDIKIAN 12-30-53

FACTS Forum, the tax-free "educational" organization of Dallas oilman H.L. Hunt, has, in addition to a number of radio-television debate programs, a philosophy of its own.

An early broadcast stated the nature of Facts Forum's anti-Communism:

"The people who are most effectively promoting Lenin's program for the destruction of America are, for the most part, people who denounce Russian Communism, many of them quite honestly. . . . They are, in short, people who have lost faith in the traditional American system of free enterprise and who believe that a planned, controlled collectivist economy, in which the state underwrites cradle-to-the-grave security for all, is the only kind which can produce the brand of peace and well-being that people want today.

"These people who believe in collectivism, rather than the Communists themselves, are responsible for all of the first rate achievements of Communism in the United States."

Just What Classes of People Are Against 'the Individual Freedoms'?

In another broadcast of its own creed, Facts Forum declared:

"Writers of textbooks being used to promote the collectivist idea among our youth—like all other spokesmen for this way of life—claim that a majority of the American people want a planned economy and that the will of the people in this instance should be obeyed. . . . Facts Forum believes that an overwhelming majority of the American people want to preserve the individual freedoms which made America great . . ."

It is difficult, sometimes, to be sure just what classes of people, according to Facts Forum, are against "the individual freedoms." Facts Forum's usual method is to place collectivism, planned economy, and social developments like Social Security and Securities and Exchange Commission created under the Roosevelt and Truman administrations in a single camp opposed to "the individual freedoms which made America great."

One must assume from Facts Forum's own words that it regards those who supported such moves as the SEC and other agencies for planning as "responsible for all of the first rate achievements of Communism in the United States."

In addition, Facts Forum in presenting its own views appears to place "intellectuals," universities, artists and educators in a context of treason, betrayal or stupidity.

'. . . the Certified Gentlemen and Scholars Of the Day, Dripping With Degrees . . .'

In its widely distributed The Hope of the World, Facts Forum declared as its own creed:

"The Communist parties of the world, in large part, are led and staffed . . . by middle-class intellectuals. This is particularly true in the United States. . . . By 1940 they had infiltrated the fields of science, art, education, entertainment and communications. Again, it was the middle-class intellectuals who stood by, or were deceived by, Communism. The powerful forces against Whittaker Chambers when he first began to testify were marshalled, not by the Communists themselves, but by Americans, respectables, the certified gentlemen and scholars of the day, dripping with degrees . . ."

On the other hand, Facts Forum has issued specific instructions to members on how to get on the mailing list of Edward A. Rumely's Committee for Constitutional Government, and has announced that Garet Garrett's The People's Pottage, and John T. Flynn's While You Slept are available free from Facts Forum. It has, as its own creed, broadcast many indictments against our universities and has alleged subversion in the public schools. It has printed in its News to members the personal damnation as "pro-Soviet" and "un-American" the period of Roosevelt and Truman and of the present overseas information service. Dan Smoot, the Facts Forum moderator, is quoted in the December, 1953, Facts Forum News, as saying, as his own sentiments:

"For 20 years it was fashionable in the United States to be un-American and pro-Soviet. When something like this happens, it is very late in the night of history and in the life of nations."

He also said as his own sentiments, reprinted by Facts Forum for its mailing list: "Today it is humiliating that we have something called a Voice of America, a governmental propaganda system trying to sell America to other people . . ."

Smoot went on:

"I think that the great villain of the 20th century is neither Mussolini, nor Hitler, nor Stalin, nor Malenkov nor the hydrogen bomb. The 20th century threat to civilization is an idea—the idea of collectivism. . . . Some of the best people of good will in our time are right out in front, trying to lead the world toward the uniform conformity and idiocy of collectivism. Witness, Dr. James Conant, America's High Commissioner in Germany, formerly president of Harvard, criticizing the idea of private schools. . . ."

But, Smoot added, all of these ideas of the last 20 years in America will go when "the winds of freedom" will "sweep across our land."

(This recalled the words of another Facts Forum moderator, Hardy Burt, who said that Facts Forum would cause people to make decisions that would lead to "the ultimate American political philosophy.")

Smoot told his audience:

"The best evidence I have that the cause of freedom in America is picking up tremendous impetus is, if you will pardon me, the organization which I myself represent: Facts Forum."

Facts Forum Presents 'Bookburning' Defense

Considering such pronouncements of Facts Forum as its own creed, what is the listener to suppose is Facts Forum's opinion in the "both sides" arguments it presents?

In one such "debate" Facts Forum presented, as one side, a defense of "bookburning":

"A hundred Dr. William A. Wirts can be hounded to death for trying to expose Communist conspiracy in American life; a score of Dr. Edward A. Rumely's can be persecuted by left-wing Congressional committees and dragged through the courts for refusing to furnish the names of people who buy anti-Communist and anti-Socialist literature; a thousand learned men can be excluded from academic posts because of their stand against New Deal Socialism—and the great liberal press of the nation is silent.

"Those bleating about the banning of pro - Communist books from our overseas libraries have never said a word about the banning of anti-Communist books . . .

"Your government has been compelling you to buy and circulate books that you do not approve of . . .

"If you spent your own money to send books abroad, you might elect to send a copy of John T. Flynn's 'While You Slept,' or of Garet Garrett's 'The People's Pottage,' in order to show how a great free Republic can be debauched, betrayed and possibly destroyed by an international criminal conspiracy working among power-hungry politicians, subversives, apathetic ignoramuses, and soft-headed do-gooders at home . . .

"Operating propaganda libraries is not a valid function of our government. When America was America, we didn't need any Voice of America or Overseas Library or any other fancy experiments in propaganda to sell the world on America . . ."

Opinions Reflect Those Of Own Spokesmen

This is just one side of an issue which Facts Forum presented "impartially." Is it not precisely the opinion of Facts Forum's own spokesmen whose own opinions were publicized through the facilities of Facts Forum?

While Facts Forum has implied that critics of it are obstructing the exposure of treason, it is not beyond the realm of possibility that a careful listener of Facts Forum's own creeds would assume after awhile:

That "the other side" — the isolationist, McCarthyite side—is the Facts Forum side;

That when Facts Forum refers to "pro-Soviet" and "un-American" it includes the Roosevelt and Truman administrations and the people who supported them;

That when it refers to "American freedom," it means, among other things, a total absence of government regulation in business and a withdrawal from the United Nations.

In fact, a careful listener might go beyond that. In a rare speech in 1951, H. L. Hunt described what he believed would be a struggle to the death in this country between two schools of thought—the far right and the far left. The moderates, or "middle-of-the-roaders" as he called them, would amount to nothing. The fight will be, he said, what he called the Liberals against what he called the Constructives.

A careful listener to the growing voice of Facts Forum in American mass communications might be excused if he wondered if Facts Forum is H. L. Hunt's instrument in the fight for which he is preparing.

The Facts About Facts Forum—#5 12-31-53 BY BEN H. BAGDIKIAN

Literature, Free and Circulating

H. L. Hunt, who may be the richest man in America, has said of his growing organization:

"Facts Forum is a non-profit national educational organization devoted to the study of political science, soil and water conservation and the art of living."

As such, Facts Forum has obtained a federal tax exemption, acquired over a million dollars worth of free radio-television time a year, and is becoming an increasingly powerful voice in expression of political opinion.

When it began in June, 1951, it stated that one of its purposes was to combat Communism. It was natural that it should have in its first free circulating library four books, some by ex-Communists, exposing the operations of the Communist Party.

However, the remaining two books, which presumably expressed Facts Forum's range of ideas on American society, were The Key to Peace by Dean Clarence Manion, and Joseph Kamp's, We Must Abolish the United States.

Manion's book is an ultra-conservative tract denouncing social developments in this country since 1932 and objecting to the use of "democracy" as a description of the United States.

Joseph Kamp operates the Constitutional Education League. He has been indicted, convicted and jailed for contempt of Congress when he refused to say who are the League's officers and contributors. He is the author, among other things, of Hitler Was a Liberal and Behind the Lace Curtains of the YWCA, the latter charging the YWCA with being a Communist-front organization. He has had contractual relations with some of the most noted racial and religious agitators in the country, having advised one, "I pull no punches in exposing the Jewish Gestapo or any Jew who happens to be a Jew." In another work, Open Letter to Congress, he attacks what he calls "the Jewish Gestapo and the Smear Bund" and "the Jewish Ku Klux Klan."

LIBRARY LISTS 55 BOOKS NOW BEING CIRCULATED

Fifty-five late books by famous authors and celebrities—some 2,500 copies of them—are available just for the asking at Facts Forum's free circulating library.

Now on the list are:

CHINA STORY, THE NEW SOVIET EMPIRE, THE COMMUNIST TRAIL IN AMERICA, RED MASQUERADE, KEY TO PEACE, YOU CAN CHANGE THE WORLD, SEEDS OF TREASON, CRISIS IN EDUCATION, BEHIND CLOSED DOORS, AMERICA'S SECOND CRUSADE, YOUR RUGGED CONSTITUTION, FIFTY BILLION DOLLARS, GOD AND MAN AT YALE, PUT FREEDOM FIRST, OUT OF BONDAGE, ANIMAL FARM, ROAD TO SURVIVAL, CRIME IN AMERICA, UNDERMINING THE CONSTITUTION, and BASIC HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

Also THE COURT AND THE CONSTITUTION, LENIN, THIS DECEPTION, SOVIET GOLD, THREE WHO MADE A REVOLUTION, FORCED LABOR IN SOVIET RUSSIA, ONE WHO SURVIVED, STALIN, I SPIED FOR STALIN, THE RED PRUSSIAN, THE REAL SOVIET RUSSIA, and TEN DAYS THAT SHOOK THE WORLD.

U.S.A.—THE PERMANENT REVOLUTION, DARKNESS AT NOON, THE WHOLE OF THEIR LIVES, VERDICT OF THREE DECADES, COMES THE COMRADE, MEN WITHOUT FACES, THE YOGI AND THE COMMISSAR, TELL THE WEST, LOST ILLUSION, AMERICA'S RETREAT FROM VICTORY, I BELIEVED, MY THREE YEARS IN MOSCOW, 11 YEARS IN SOVIET PRISON CAMPS, THIS IS MY STORY, I CHOSE FREEDOM, THE GREAT GLOBE ITSELF, THE FORRESTAL DIARIES, MASTER PLAN U.S.A., WHILE YOU SLEPT, I LED THREE LIVES, A FOREIGN POLICY FOR AMERICANS, THE RED PLOT AGAINST AMERICA, and GOVERNMENT IS YOUR BUSINESS.

The librarians constantly are looking for new books and appreciate suggestions for additions.

New books are first submitted to the Reading Committee which is a group of men and women headed by D. F. Cassidy of Dallas, chairman. Their duty is to read the books and prepare a written report. Each book is given to two members of the committee and, in order for a book to become part of the library, two favorable reports are necessary.

The circulating system is simple. Anyone can check out a book whether he actually belongs to Facts Forum or not. Each book contains a sheet of instructions and six self-addressed, stamped cards. Each reader should fill out one of these cards and send it in to the office, so that an up-to-date record can be kept on the exact location of the book. At the end of seven days, the book should either be passed on to another reader or returned to the Facts Forum office. When six readers have had the book, the last reader may contact the office and additional cards will be sent so that the book may be continued in circulation.

Under Pressure of Formal Protest, Two Books Came Off the Shelf

Facts Forum began its basic library, circulated free to members and used as source material for its broadcasts, with more than 100 copies of Joseph Kamp's, We Must Abolish the United States, a violently anti-United Nations work.

Later, Facts Forum added another book to its free circulating library. This was John O. Beaty's, Iron Curtain Over America. The highly respected Protestant magazine, Zions Herald, had this to say of the author and this book, "Beaty is a recent 'intellectual' addition to the lengthening list of outspoken bigots across the country, and his volume appears to be the most extensive piece of racist propaganda in the history of the anti-Semitic movement in America."

Under pressure of formal protest by the Anti-Defamation League, Facts Forum removed these two books from its library.

Several months ago a new Facts Forum unit was formed in Westchester County, New York. Its leader used Facts Forum meetings for open anti-Semitic agitation. After another formal protest, Facts Forum got a new leader for the unit.

U.N. . . . a Device to Permit the Colored Races to Rule the White Races

Both the Kamp and Beaty books have been highly praised by Allen A. Zoll, whose anti-Semitic and racial agitation goes back before World War II. His American Patriots, Inc., is on the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations and he was indicted, although the charge was nolle prossed, for allegedly trying to extort $7,500 from a New York radio station in payment for withdrawal of a Christian Front picket line.

Early this year when a new Facts Forum unit was formed in the New York City church of a national adviser to Facts Forum, Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, the first speaker to address the group was Allen A. Zoll. Zoll attacked the United Nations as a device to permit the colored races to rule the white races and charged that UNESCO is an alien conspiracy to teach sex delinquency to American school children. A protest to Dr. Peale from a parishioner brought no disapproval of Zoll but praise for Facts Forum.

The appearance of known racial and religious bigots under the sponsorship of Facts Forum has disturbed many groups seeking to eliminate religious bigotry in America. Where such groups have lodged formal protests against known professional racist propagandists, Facts Forum has removed them or their works.

It is possible that many such professional propagandists would be attracted to Facts Forum by the organization's super-nationalist tone, if for no other reason.

Printed with transcripts of most of its "both sides" broadcasts, for example, Facts Forum lists the works from which it drew its material. Generally, this covers works ranging politically from the slightly left-of-center to the extreme right. But after some of these works Facts Forum also issues specific instructions to members on how to get the literature, how much to pay, etc.

Literature Offered, Free and Circulating

Of those works for which specific instructions for acquisition are issued, 85 per cent express the isolationist, pro-McCarthy, or laissez-faire economic point of view. Of the remaining 15 per cent, most are government bulletins.

Some examples of the 85 per cent as printed in Facts Forum's literature:

"'America's Retreat from Victory,' the story of George Catlett Marshall, by Senator Joseph McCarthy, available in Facts Forum library."

(It is the senator's contention that General Marshall is "steeped in blood," and a man "whose every important act for years has contributed to the prosperity of the enemy.")

"'Spotlight Bulletins . . . These bulletins can be ordered direct from the Committee for Constitutional Government, Inc., 205 East Street, New York 17, New York. No charge for single copies."

Instructions Given For Getting on Lists

Other groups for which Facts Forum issues specific instructions to members for getting on mailing lists and acquiring literature are Merwin K. Hart's National Economic Council (the Buchanan Lobbying Committee of the 81st Congress said of the NEC that it attempts "to disparage those who oppose its objectives by appeals to religious prejudice, often an ill-concealed anti-Semitism." The Illinois American Legion also has warned against Hart.); Garet Garrett's "The People's Pottage" (circulated by Facts Forum and used for broadcasts, it interprets the Roosevelt administration as unconstitutional, subversive and a traitorous maneuver which needlessly involved the United States in war against Hitler, ending with a call to arms and an appeal for "a leader").

As a source for its discussion, "Communism in Religion," Facts Forum listed and gave specific instructions on how to get Kenneth Goff's, "Traitors in the Pulpit." The Anti-Defamation League lists Goff as "a well-known bigot." Goff has worked and traveled with Gerald L. K. Smith, the country's best-known anti-Catholic, anti-Semitic and anti-Negro agitator.

In some cases Facts Forum not only uses a book to prepare its broadcasts, and gives instructions to members for buying it, and offers it free for the reading, but it even gives its own personal recommendation of the work. An example is the book, "Wings for Peace," by retired General Bonner Fellers, which calls for a drastic cut in ground forces, a buildup of air power, withdrawal from NATO and the atom bombing of China. The New York Times said of it: "This book has the faults of special pleading and opinion is sometimes tinted with prejudice." Facts Forum told those who get its News or wrote for a transcript of its broadcast: "This book should be read soberly and thoughtfully by every American interested in the defense of the free world."

Curious Provision In Basic Regulations

The isolationist, anti-United Nations tone of Facts Forum appears especially significant in the light of a curious provision in the basic regulations of Facts Forum:

"No part of its (Facts Forum's) earnings shall ever inure to or for the use of the United Nations."

When asked the reason for this provision, Facts Forum said it was necessary in order to get a federal tax exemption.

The chief of the tax-exempt organization division of the United States Internal Revenue Service says this is not necessary.

Mrs. Cordye Hall, of Dallas, who is active in many civic enterprises in her city, approached the leaders of Facts Forum in its early days to ask why Facts Forum distributed only anti-United Nations works. She made a formal request that it also put in their library some pro-United Nations works. She suggested, "Let's Join the Human Race," by Stringfellow Barr; "Plan for Peace," by Grenville Clark; "The United Nations World," and "The United Nations Bulletin." Facts Forum informed Mrs. Hall that it was not interested in that type of literature.

In recent months Facts Forum has added some pro-United Nations and middle-of-the-road literature to its library.

But Facts Forum continues to exhibit a sympathy for extremist views and religious propagandists. Recently in two successive issues of its Facts Forum News the organization told its members, under the headline, "Counter-Subversives":

"Only unquestioned patriotism can save America.

Recommendations Given On Loyalty Experts

"The names of the following have been given Facts Forum as having devoted much of their lives and means toward gaining an understanding of subversion and keeping files on un-American activities. Facts Forum does not know if they welcome applications for reports, nor what charges, if any, they make.

"Should you have a favorable report from any of them as to the unquestionable loyalty to America of any publication, association or person, you may assume it is the result of careful consideration and diligent research."

Among those listed is Carl McIntire, an unfrocked Presbyterian minister. He has accused the leadership of the National Council of Churches, which embraces all the major Protestant denominations, of pro-Communism. Of the "unquestioned loyalty" of Roman Catholics, McIntire has said:

"The strengthening of the Roman Catholic Church throughout the world only involves the fostering of a false religion which enslaves human souls in darkness and superstition. . . . Rome will sell her secret confessional system for political world power. But actually the Roman Catholic Church becomes a 'spy system' through the priests, with the priests' first loyalty to the Vatican. . . Are not the Roman Catholics in the United States committed to a foreign power?"

As far as is known, Facts Forum has never withdrawn its recommendation of McIntire and its other loyalty experts.

The Facts About Facts Forum—#6 1-1-54 BY BEN H. BAGDIKIAN

The Letters, Polls and Cartoons

ONE of the most democratic institutions in America is the "letter to the editor." Here, usually, any citizen can express his opinion in public print—barring obscenity, libel or commercialism.

Newspaper readers in the vicinity of Dallas, Texas, have had many opportunities to read letters by a "J. McCarthy, 1348 Highland Road, Dallas" (presumably no blood relation to J. McCarthy, of Appleton, Wis.).

Once Mr. McCarthy wrote against Truman's having intervened in Korea, another time against Social Security, another time against all New Dealers and Fair Dealers, another time accusing Truman of promoting socialism and Communism, another time pleading for an end of "international giveaways," another time attacking then-Secretary of State Dean Acheson, another time charging the United Nations with being "a rabble of nations," another time urging a low legal limit to all income taxes.

These happen to coincide with the opinions of H. L. Hunt, the multimillionaire Dallas oilman who has created a nationwide "voter education" program called Facts Forum. Presumably, however, Mr. McCarthy held these opinions sincerely, as he has a right to do.

For Letters and a Song, $594 and a Blanket

But what most readers of Mr. McCarthy's letters in the newspapers do not know is that Facts Forum paid Mr. McCarthy for writing these letters.

Mr. McCarthy received, as a result of writing these letters and other promotional efforts for Facts Forum, close to $600 in the first 15 months of Facts Forum's operations. To be precise, during this period Facts Forum gave Mr. McCarthy $594 and an electric blanket, including $300 for a song to the tune of "Buckle Down Winsocki" ("Wake Us Up, Facts Forum, Wake Us Up; We Can Win, Facts Forum, If You'll Wake Us Up").

In addition, Mr. McCarthy formed a Facts Forum unit in his neighborhood which then received an additional $200 in cash from Facts Forum's headquarters.

Facts Forum has paid thousands of dollars for such activities. But it has not been limited to letters to editors. The Nebraska Business News once carried a news article praising Facts Forum. The readers did not know that the author, Owen E. Cotton, later received $64 from Facts Forum for this. Students at Southern Methodist University once read in their campus newspaper a news story urging support of Facts Forum. They did not know that the author, Richard Vann, later received $32 from Facts Forum for this. As far as is known, Facts Forum has never paid for a news article or editorial contrary to the views of its backer.

The Dollars Encourage The Letter Writers

The payment for letters to the editor is made by Facts Forum on the basis that it encourages citizen participation in public issues. Facts Forum has paid for some letters contrary to the views of its backers. But the cash payments show a pattern which is something less than impartial.

A tabulation was made of all letters to the editor for which Facts Forum paid and whose texts are available. (In some cases, Facts Forum did not reprint the texts so no judgment as to political content was possible. Also, there may be gaps in available texts as reprinted by Facts Forum.)

Of 193 letters to the editor for which Facts Forum paid and whose texts are known, the overwhelming majority express isolationist, anti-United Nations, pro-McCarthy, uncontrolled-economy views.

After eliminating about 12 per cent of the letters which were on non-political subjects, there was left payment of $4,069, of which $3,630 was for isolationist, or anti-United Nations, or pro-McCarthy, or uncontrolled-economy views, and $439 for opposing views.

The Money Was Split On a 9-to-1 Basis

Thus, out of every $10 paid to persons who got letters on political issues printed in the newspapers and then sent to Facts Forum for "judging," $9 went to letter-writers expressing the views of H. L. Hunt and $1 to those with opposing views.

At one time the one-sidedness of these payments attracted attention and Facts Forum announced that from then on the payment would be equally divided between what Facts Forum called "Liberal" letters and "Constructive" letters, presumably meaning what others have called "Liberal" and "Conservative."

"Should the U. S. continue in the United Nations?"

FACTS FORUM NEWS printed this cartoon in November to show result of poll on U.N.

It Conducts Poll of 'Informed' Opinion

But this, apparently, was soon abandoned. In November, 1953, Facts Forum announced payments of $295 for ten letters, all of them expressing Hunt's opinions. In December, 1953, it announced payments of $360 for 11 letters, $275 for nine pro-Hunt letters, $75 for one anti-Hunt letter, and $10 for one non-political letter.

The letters follow closely the Facts Forum political thought in another respect. The letters sent to newspapers are, at Facts Forum's request, on subjects current in the Facts Forum "public opinion poll."

Each month Facts Forum mails out 120,000 postcards with poll questions on them. It says it gets about 12,000 back. All signed cards are counted in the poll. Facts Forum suggests that members fill out the cards together at their meetings.

The results are then incorporated into a news release which goes to 1,800 newspapers all over the country, 500 radio stations and to all members of Congress. The news release refers to it only as a "public opinion poll."

It's Called a Poll Of 'Informed' Opinion

However, in its own publication, the Facts Forum News, it is described not as a cross-section poll — which most editors, radio newsmen and Congressmen would assume a "public opinion poll" to be — but as a poll of "informed" (that is, Facts Forum membership) opinion.

On a special radio program early this year, the chief Facts Forum moderator, Dan Smoot, an ex-FBI agent, interviewed for the second time on a Facts Forum program, Robert Stripling, former investigator for the House un-American Activities Committee. The broadcast began:

Smoot: "Mr. Stripling, I've noticed the last few days that many people who are interested in the Communist conspiracy in America have been speaking with great jubilation about the appointment of Scott McLeod to be the new boss of security in the State Department. Scott, as I remember, was for 10 years an FBI agent. Do you attach much significance to that appointment?"

Stripling: "Yes, I think it is very important . . . I know Mr. McLeod not too well—but I am familiar with his record, and I have every confidence that he will do a magnificent job for the American people."

There was currently a controversy in Washington over McLeod's appointment since McLeod was regarded by some as the hand-picked candidate of the McCarthy group which would thus pass on the employment of every member of the State Department from ambassador down.

McLeod Appointment Gets 91 % Support

But for Facts Forum members there was little controversy. In the same issue of the Facts Forum News in which the transcript of the Smoot-Stripling broadcast was printed there were the results of a Facts Forum poll. One question:

"Was Ike's appointment of former FBI man R. Scott McLeod as 'boss of security' in the State Department wise?"

Answer: 91 per cent, "Yes."

Apparently, "news releases" about Facts Forum "public opinion polls" have not been universally accepted as news by American newspapers. In instructions printed for members, Facts Forum has repeatedly said such things as:

"Some newspapers may not consider the results of Facts Forum polls to be news. They will know of your interest if you call or write them for results."

Some of the Facts Forum poll questions appear matter-of-fact. Many do not. Many appear to be of the have-you-stopped-beating-your-wife type. Once, for example, Facts Forum asked:

"Are internationalists less tolerant of Communism than the average citizen?"

This places "internationalists" in some questionable relationship to Communism. What is more important, it is impossible to answer this question either yes or no without agreeing that "internationalists" are different from "the average citizen."

Or, another Facts Forum question:

"Would destruction of Christianity from within be worst of all treason?"

But Facts Forum sometimes uses an even more provocative kind of question, described perhaps as the have-you-stopped-beating - your - wife - or - do - you - continue - to - torture - little-children type. One example:

"Is the inroad of Communism in Latin America more dangerous to us than our tolerance of Communists in the United States?"

Acceptance of Both Premises Is Required

Answering this by either yes or no requires acceptance of both premises of inroads of Communism in Latin America as a danger to the United States and of the idea that Americans are tolerant of Communists in the United States.

There is another significant quality to many Facts Forum questions. In 1946 Elmo Roper, who also conducts polls, experimented to see how much he could change the response to the same basic question by using emotional words. In one question, asked of identical cross-section groups, he substituted in one case the slightly emotional word, "propaganda" for the term, "our point of view." He changed the result by 50 per cent.

Some Facts Forum questions where emotional words automatically suggest a particular answer:

"Were military supplies to China held up by Hisslings?"

"Is Congress inadvisably abdicating its Constitutional powers?"

"Are 40 per cent or more business executives deceived into supporting organizations undermining freedom?"

"Are subversive movements gaining in the public schools?"

"Are the large foundations now doing more harm than good for freedom?"

"Are the pink segments of the press losing their power?"

"Can pinks filch the word FREEDOM as they have others of fine U.S. tradition?"

"Did pro-Communists in the U.S. bring about the Korean War?"

The answer to all these questions must be either "yes" or "no."

When reporting the results of these polls Facts Forum sometimes uses illustrations, cartoons signed by "Welch."

One such cartoon illustrated the results of the Facts Forum poll question, "Should the U.S. continue in the United Nations?" It showed an ox-cart marked "U.N." The poor "ox" is Uncle Sam, haggard and dying, trying to pull the vehicle alone. In the ox-cart, led by a brute with a hammer-and-sickle sweater and lashing Uncle Sam with a whip snapping "Veto, Veto," are a band of grinning foreigners.

This cartoon was run by Facts Forum to illustrate the results of its question. The results: the majority of those polled had voted to stay in the United Nations.

Despite the nature of Facts Forum questions and the context in which they are asked, they are represented to organs of public opinion as "public opinion." Some of the members of Congress who get the results regularly insert them into the Congressional Record as "public opinion."

Yet, in its own literature—but not to editors and Congressmen—Facts Forum says it is not a poll at all:

Purpose of Poll: To Focus Attention

"The purpose of the poll is to focus the attention of large numbers of people in all walks of life and in all parts of the nation on a carefully selected group of important questions. By thus causing thousands of people to consider the same group of questions at the same time, the poll may be invoking a powerful psychological force for good."

Then Facts Forum in its News (which carries the results) instructs members:

"Call your newspaper for poll results. . . . Ask your friends to write letters to the editor on poll questions. . . . Call the results of Facts Forum polls to the attention of public officials. They will pay more attention to them as they appear in the Congressional Record. . . Write your members of Congress the results of poll questions you wish them to remember. . . . Explain to friends that when they vote a poll card it takes the place in some measure of writing every member of Congress a letter. . ."

The League of Women Voters of the United States has been unable to obtain a clear tax exemption because it takes a stand on national issues, though never on candidates.

Facts Forum—which annually spends more than the national organization of the League of Women Voters—subsidizes letters to the editor at the rate of 9-to-1 in favor of the opinions of isolationism, pro-McCarthyism, and laissez-faire economics. It operates what it calls "a powerful psychological force for good" in the form of mailing 120,000 sets of questions a month, the results of which it then presses by direct "news release" and membership pressure on organs of public opinion and on every member of Congress.

Facts Forum, unlike the League of Women Voters, has been able to obtain a tax exemption not only for itself but for its contributors because its regulations read, in part:

"No substantial part of the activities of Facts Forum shall ever be carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

Sunday: The rumors of Senator McCarthy-and-Facts Forum and how they grew.

The Facts About Facts Forum—#7 1-3-54 BY BEN H. BAGDIKIAN

The Forum and Joe McCarthy

THE most persistent rumor heard about Facts Forum, the increasingly powerful "non-partisan" organization, is that it is a tax-exempt device to use free radio and television time to promote the political fortunes of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy and his bloc in Congress.

This has been denied by officers of Facts Forum and by the man who created the organization, H. L. Hunt, multi-millionaire Dallas oil man.

Hunt has said, "I have never subscribed a dollar to Senator McCarthy in my life, nor has he ever solicited me for a dollar in his life. I have no connection with Senator McCarthy whatsoever."

McCarthy Presented in Person Only Once. However . . .

Robert H. Dedman, Hunt's lawyer, who has been president of Facts Forum from its beginning, has said, "Senator Joseph McCarthy, whose only appearance on a Facts Forum program was in a debate with Senator Magnuson, has no managerial, financial or policy-making connection with Facts Forum."

It is true that in 30 months of operations, Facts Forum has presented Senator McCarthy in person only once. Also, there is no evidence of a direct financial connection between Facts Forum and the senator.

However:

1. McCarthy aides were instrumental in setting up a Facts Forum coast-to-coast television project;

2. There are personal ties between Senator McCarthy and Facts Forum's sponsor, H. L. Hunt; and

3. There is evidence that Senator McCarthy is a special beneficiary of the facilities of Facts Forum's nationwide, tax-free operations.

Facts Forum has said that "over-active imaginations" caused news stories linking Hunt and McCarthy. This apparently was a reference to speculation last spring that when McCarthy met another Texas oil millionaire, Clint Murchison, he also talked with Hunt. "Actually," says Dedman, "Mr. Hunt was in Washington when the senator allegedly came to Texas to see him."

However, the spring before that, in April, 1952, in the crucial days of pre-convention

Senator McCarthy

maneuvers for presidential support in Texas, Senator McCarthy was brought to Dallas for a speech by the American Legion and the "Citizens Non-Partisan League of Dallas."

A few days before the speech, Facts Forum devoted part of its radio time to a buildup of the speech.

"Facts Forum is pleased to announce," it said over the air, "that everybody in the Dallas-Fort Worth area now has an easy opportunity to hear Senator McCarthy in person and make his own evaluation of him. . . ."

Mr. Hunt Asks Reporters To Give Joe Publicity

Before the speech, Senator McCarthy was in the Dallas Athletic Club where he was interviewed by reporters. Newspapermen were astonished when H. L. Hunt, the man who almost never consented to publicity, personally asked reporters to stress the time and place of the McCarthy speech.

The night of the big speech, with H. L. Hunt in the audience, Senator McCarthy was introduced for the "Citizens Non-Partisan League" by the chief moderator of Facts Forum, Dan Smoot.

About a year ago, Senator McCarthy and Hunt had another meeting, this time for dinner. They discussed the senator's political situation and they discussed Facts Forum.

Shortly afterward, Miss Jean Kerr, then Senator McCarthy's research assistant and now his wife, and Robert E. Lee, a close personal and political friend of McCarthy, went to work for Facts Forum. Their job was to set up the Facts Forum television project.

There has been considerable circumspection on the part of most Facts Forum officials about the work of Lee and the present Mrs. McCarthy.

Mrs. McCarthy and Mr. Lee Worked On Early TV Programs

President Dedman, asked when Lee and Miss Kerr worked for Facts Forum and if they were paid, replied without mentioning their names:

"Facts Forum is indebted to loyal Americans who assist in its crusade to stimulate thinking on public affairs and does not ask their political affiliations nor question their motives. The question whether or not they were paid for their services is a personal question and unless their loyalty to the United States is in question Facts Forum would prefer not to answer."

Asked if Jean Kerr ever worked for him while he was with Facts Forum, Lee at first said, "No, Jeannie never worked for us." Pressed, Lee concluded, "I'm pretty sure she didn't."

Two other Facts Forum officials were more positive in their recollection. Mrs. Meredith Hollis, who followed Miss Kerr in making contacts for the program, said that Miss Kerr worked under Lee for Facts Forum.

H. L. Hunt said of the present Mrs. McCarthy, "She had done a great many things for Facts Forum." He said she was not on the Facts Forum payroll at the time.

"She and Robert E. Lee," Hunt said, "were instrumental in getting together the

8 Small Points and the BIG One

WHEN Haroldson Lafayette Hunt, of Dallas, Texas, announced in 1951 that the assets of one of the greatest personal fortunes in America would be devoted to the impartial stimulation of public debate, the idea was greeted as a noble contribution to the country's political intelligence.

Hunt said he was interested only in dispelling public apathy about public affairs. He said the new organization, Facts Forum, would use every non-partisan means to bring information to Americans on the issues facing them.

This seemed to answer a plea made by Lewis Mumford several years ago:

"For what are all our fine instruments of rapid communication, if we do not use them to communicate intelligence and to unite and equip the civilized?"

Aims Stated, Then Came Federal Tax Exemption

Into this organization Hunt has poured large amounts of his money. Facts Forum has grown until it has its own basic radio program going over 222 stations coast-to-coast, largely on free time; it pays for the production of two network radio shows, one a TV simulcast, for which it gets free network time; it is considering a third well-known network radio show.

It sends a constant flow of material to newspapers, radio stations and members of Congress. It has, according to its own figures, 125,000 participants in all parts of the country. A former moderator is now a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

On the basis of Facts Forum's stated aims, it was granted a federal tax exemption on its expenditures and for its contributors.

For an impartial, non-partisan educational organization this was proper.

Presentation of 'Both Sides' Appears Heavily Biased

Yet, as Facts Forum grew in power and scope, many persons—and not just Communists as Facts Forum freely implies—have grown gravely concerned with the net effect of this program on American political climate.

There have been criticisms which, in the light of a more basic one, can be classified as "minor":

1. Facts Forum's presentation of "both sides" of national issues for purposes of educating the voter appears to be heavily biased on the side of isolationism, ultra-conservatism and McCarthyism.

2. Facts Forum uses its powerful facilities of free radio time and the 60,000 circulation of its News, plus news releases to newspapers, radio stations and every member of Congress, to express the personal political philosophy of H. L. Hunt and the chief Facts Forum moderator, Dan Smoot.

3. Despite its rule declaring that "no substantial part of the activities of Facts Forum shall ever be carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation," the facilities of Facts Forum are used to conduct a "public opinion poll" which it admits is not a cross-section poll but merely a device to "exert a powerful psychological force" which is then applied through news releases and membership pressure on organs of public opinion and on Congress.

4. Despite this same rule, the funds of Facts Forum are used to subsidize expressions in newspapers which are ostensibly merely individual opinions but for which Facts Forum pays, with a 9-to-1 preponderance of the rewards going to those expressing isolationist, ultra-conservative and McCarthyist views.

Appreciation and Friendship Asked for Sears, Roebuck

5. The activities of Facts Forum have attracted known race-hate agitators who have led and addressed local Facts Forum meetings. The works of known religious agitators have been distributed by Facts Forum as "voter education."

6. Despite a regulation stating of Facts Forum that "none of its property or earnings shall ever inure to the benefit of any private individual," Facts Forum has used its public relations machinery for the unusual promotion of the company of one of its national officers, Gen. Robert E. Wood. Besides being on the board of Facts Forum, General Wood is chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck. A page one article of the Facts Forum News, a tax-free publication sent to 60,000 persons including all members of Congress, declared in part:

"It is very appropriate that Sears, Roebuck should be sponsoring Facts Forum. For Sears, Roebuck and its mail order business is as American as the town hall meeting itself.

"Since Sears, Roebuck is helping us in our fight to overcome apathy and indifference, it might behoove us to express our appreciation and friendship for Sears whenever possible."

McCarthy Associates Are Active in Forum Program

This was printed as the recommendation of the president of Facts Forum, Robert H. Dedman.

Sears, Roebuck has used the commercial facilities of its organization to distribute the literature of Facts Forum, notably in Washington, D. C., but also in other localities.

7. There has been participation by associates of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in the planning and operations of Facts Forum which surpasses the realm of coincidence. Senator McCarthy also has been the beneficiary of unusual treatment in the basic programs of Facts Forum.

The YMCA-YWCA Debate on UNESCO in Dallas

8. The grass roots operations of Facts Forum have often exhibited a spirit which is the opposite of free debate in good faith.

In Dallas a few months ago, the YMCA-YWCA at Southern Methodist University held an open debate on the subject, "UNESCO Under Fire." From a pro-United Nations organization it obtained a speaker to defend UNESCO. The students applied to the headquarters of Facts Forum for an anti-United Nations speaker and Facts Forum supplied one. The results of this student meeting were commented upon by an editorial in the student newspaper, "The S.M.U. Campus." Speaking of sup-first Facts Forum programs, the television programs."

Some Connections Between Forum and McCarthy

The first Facts Forum television program went on the air from the nation's capitol under the direction of Robert E. Lee and Miss Kerr. It began:

"Hello there! This is Robert E. Lee, your Facts Forum moderator, speaking to you from our office in Washington, D.C. . . ."

The first program was a debate between Senator McCarthy and Sen. Warren Magnuson, of Washington.

Mrs. Hollis has said, "You know, McCarthy appeared on the same program with Senator Magnuson and everyone talks about Senator McCarthy and nobody mentions poor Senator Magnuson."

Fans of Senator Magnuson agree ruefully that this is so. They say it was quite easy to forget that Senator Magnuson was on the television screen. After run-offs of the TV film of the McCarthy-Magnuson debate it was discovered that somehow there were almost no closeups of Senator Magnuson and the screen seemed to be filled with Senator McCarthy. This was so plain that the producers asked Senator Magnuson to pose for some extra shots to be spliced into the film. But the senator declined, as he did later Facts Forum invitations.

Miss Kerr and Lee went about arranging future Facts Forum programs. But among politicians in Washington, notably willing to get free television time, a chill began to set in. The combination of Robert E. Lee and Jean Kerr is not unknown in senatorial politics.

She Helped to Write The Housing Brochure

Miss Kerr had gone to work for McCarthy early in his senatorial career. She helped write the housing brochure for which Lustron paid the senator $10,000, she helped write speeches which have later been published in book form (the publisher is a permanent panel member of a Facts Forum network program). And she helped put together the senator's famous presentation of "205 Communists" in the State Department in 1950 which catapulted McCarthy to fame. In subsequent speeches, McCarthy changed the figure and ended with 81 "cases" with no names.

All 81 cases were found also in a list compiled for the House Appropriations Committee in 1947 with the help of Robert E. Lee, a former F.B.I. agent. It is generally believed in Washington that this is where McCarthy got his names.

McCarthy's charges about the State Department brought him against the firmest opposition he had ever met in the form of Millard Tydings, a conservative Democrat who headed the committee investigating McCarthy's charges. Tydings dismissed McCarthy's charges after stormy hearings. Tydings then went on to run for re-election from Maryland where in 1938 even Franklin D. Roosevelt's opposition had been unable to unseat him. It is this election campaign which most Congressmen recall when they hear the names Lee and Kerr.

A senatorial investigation of the Maryland election, in which Republican John Marshall Butler defeated Tydings, called the campaign a "despicable, back street' type of campaign . . . conducted by non-Maryland outsiders."

The committee found financial irregularities, largely in the form of unreported contributions exceeding $27,000 and used in officially unreported ways; that a tabloid 'From the Record' used a faked photograph of Tydings and Communist Earl Browder and otherwise attempted to destroy the reputation of Tydings; that this tabloid was apparently the idea of Senator McCarthy; that the outside contributions and expenditures were supervised by Miss Kerr and Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Lee.

The committee found that McCarthy's entire staff was put to work on the Maryland campaign. Miss Kerr, it reported, held a dinner in Washington to start the "outside" campaign going. A few days later, the committee report stated, a check for $5,000 was delivered to Robert E. Lee for the Butler campaign, which started a Washington, D. C., bank account. "The account was opened in the name of Mrs. Rex Lee, wife of Robert E. Lee. . . . A substantial portion of the funds was disbursed in connection with a postcard project. . . an activity originated and handled primarily by employes of Senator McCarthy and supervised by Mrs. Lee." (Mrs. Lee was matron-of-honor at the McCarthy wedding.)

Committee Reported She Defended Tabloid

The committee reported that Miss Kerr defended the tabloid as "the type of literature that should go out in campaigns."

The campaign manager, a Chicago public relations man brought in on the recommendation of Mrs. Ruth McCormick Tanksersly, then editor of the Washington Times-Herald, was indicted, pleaded guilty and was sentenced in Maryland for "failure to properly report contributions and expenditures in the Butler campaign."

This apparently explains the hesitation on the part of anti-McCarthy senators to accept the invitation of Miss Kerr and Lee to participate in a program which they were arranging and editing.

Mrs. Hollis says, "When some people thought there might be some Facts Forum connection with McCarthy, they (Lee and Miss Kerr) were both dropped."

Facts Forum also started presenting a single member of Congress interviewed on TV film by a Washington correspondent and by Facts Forun moderator Dan Smoot.

The man who started recruiting correspondents for this show was another former McCarthy aide, Victor Johnston, now director of the National Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. Johnston had first come to Washington as administrative assistant to the new junior senator from Wisconsin, Joseph R. McCarthy.

In one of the early programs of this type, Richard Wilson, of Look magazine, interviewed Sen. William Jenner. Johnston recruited Wilson for this. But even though Johnston was authorized by Facts Forum to offer the top price for this interviewing job, $125, he began to run into resistance among correspondents who were uneasy about Facts Forum and its McCarthy connections. One such correspondent who declined to appear asked Johnston whether he was acting on behalf of the GOP campaign committee, McCarthy or Facts Forum. But Johnston was noncommittal.

Johnston then asked a free lance correspondent, J. Lacey Reynolds to recruit political talent for the Facts Forum television shows. Reynolds says this was supported by an offer of $200 a month made by H. L. Hunt. Reynolds says that after he ran into some rather bitter commentary by other correspondents, he declined the offer.

Mrs. Hollis, in the meantime, had been appointed full time arranger in Washington. She had advantages over the previous three persons, all of whom are close to McCarthy, since she is the wife of a former, well-liked Democratic Congressman from Oklahoma.

Television is not the only medium Facts Forum has attempted to use for the special benefit of Senator McCarthy. Facts Forum has a free circulating library. Members may write for books which they then get free. Last month persons on the Facts Forum mailing list got a book from the Facts Forum library whether they asked for it or not: "McCarthyism, The Fight for America," by Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Inside the McCarthy book is pasted Facts Forum literature, including, "You may wish to broaden the use of the information in this book by selecting as the next reader some friend who reaches the public through speaking or writing. . . ."

How much of its tax-free dollars Facts Forum is spending for the free circulation of Senator McCarthy's book is not known. It has, it says, 125,000 participants. It mails its house organ to 60,000 persons. Postage alone on the Facts Forum mailing of the McCarthy book is eight cents per person. The book ordinarily sells for 50 cents.

Facts Forum ends its notices inside the McCarthy book with the reminder to recipients that it is tax-exempt and that, "The Treasury Department has ruled that contributions to Facts Forum are deductible from adjusted gross income. . . ."

McCarthy Gets High Praise on Program

If Senator McCarthy's television opportunities on Facts Forum have been somewhat jaundiced by unfavorable publicity, his treatment on the basic Facts Forum program is still interesting to study.

In this basic show, Dan Smoot presents "both sides" of important issues. This basic program is sometimes interrupted for the appearance of special guests. Guests on this program have praised Senator McCarthy highly. As far as is known, no one on this basic radio program has ever criticized the most controversial figure in American politics. Adolphe Menjou, during his Facts Forum appearance, for example, said of Senator McCarthy, "I think he is one of the greatest Americans who ever lived and I place him right alongside of Paul Revere, and the day will come when he will be completely justified and the word 'McCarthyism' will be a word of honor instead of opprobrium."

When Smoot presents "both sides" of an issue there is frequently interposed, with no apparent relevance, praise of McCarthy or attacks on his critics, as part of one of the two sides of the question. In a discussion of "Civil Service," for example, there appeared:

"Even while Secretary Dulles was announcing that he welcomed McCarthy's probe, the ruling Acheson clique in the State Department planned a counterattack. With the help of newsmen who have supported them for years, Acheson people publicized McCarthy's investigation as an 'inquisition' which had so 'demoralized' the State Department that routine duties could not be performed. Actually, only the hold-over Acheson crowd was demoralized. The others were delighted . . ."

In June, in a discussion of "Germany," the McCarthy fight against Harvard and Dr. James Conant was interposed with the statement that Conant had so little understanding of Communism that he could say in 1953 when he left Harvard "that there were no open or disguised Communists at Harvard . . . Dr. Conant . . . has a long and eminent record of supporting New Deal Socialism."

Discussion of the Case Of Jessup Recalled

It is sometimes hard to remember during the anti-McCarthy side of the Facts Forum presentation that you are actually hearing arguments against the senator. In the discussion of the case of Phillip Jessup, for example, the defense of Jessup, as presented by Facts Forum, contained Jessup's charge that McCarthy had accused him of being a sponsor of a 1946 American-Russian Institute dinner without publicly naming 99 other well-known Americans on the sponsor list. Facts Forum, in defense of Jessup, added, "It should be noted, however, that the document which McCarthy introduced does show the names of all of these people."

In a "both sides" presentation Facts Forum argued McCarthy's case against the administration. Then it presented Eisenhower's defense against McCarthy charges. As part of Eisenhower's defense it declared:

"There is no need for the President to get into a brawl with Joe McCarthy."

The question has been asked if Facts Forum and H. L. Hunt are grooming McCarthy for the presidency in 1956. Hunt was asked if he wanted McCarthy for president. Hunt replied:

"Some day I might be able to answer that better. But I think it is a little too early. It's two years away. I may be interested in Joe Martin, or Senator Byrd, or Senator Jenner, or Senator Bridges, or Governor Shivers."

Well over a million dollars of free radio and television time are given Facts Forum each year because it says it is a "non-partisan" educational organization doing "a public service."

If the question as to the propriety of free time going to an organization showing evidence of conducting partisan propaganda should be asked the Federal Communications Commission, which controls all American broadcasting, it would come before seven commissioners, one of whom was saying several months ago:

"Hello there! This is Robert E. Lee, your Facts Forum moderator. . ."

Second Wisconsin Man to Be Appointed

Lee is one of the last two appointees to the FCC in 1953. In both appointments Sen. McCarthy was directly involved. The first, John Doerfer, is from Wisconsin and had been active in politics there. He was appointed with the approval of both Wisconsin Senators, as is the custom with such appointments. Lee, whose only radio-television experience has been on Facts Forum, is a personal friend of Sen. McCarthy's and was appointed reportedly with the help of Sen. Styles Bridges and Vice President Richard Nixon. Lee has yet to be confirmed by the Senate.

When former President Truman recently made a passing remark about "McCarthyism" in a television speech, Senator McCarthy demanded free television time to reply. NBC offered him 15 minutes, which ordinarily is considered a generous offer of evening television time. McCarthy said this was not enough. "McCarthy has scare value and we're scared," an NBC executive admitted, asking that his name not be used. McCarthy was then offered a half hour by the networks. McCarthy then said that if any local station which had carried Truman did not carry him he would complain to the FCC. To the general public which saw this printed in the newspapers, this may have sounded like a routine threat. To operators of radio and television stations, however, whose license must be renewed by the FCC each year and whose commercial life is in the hands of that agency, this had real meaning in terms of Commissioner Lee.

Recently, Facts Forum's sponsor, H. L. Hunt, made a personal application in competition with others for a television channel in Corpus Christi. He was permitted to change his application and then get an uncontested channel by the FCC, with the supporting vote of Robert E. Lee, once "your Facts Forum moderator."

porters who accompanied the Facts Forum speaker, the editorial declared:

"Using fascist tactics, a group of adults invaded and gained control of the student meeting and endeavored to turn the tide for the speaker they supported. " 'UNESCO Under Fire', a highly controversial topic, was being debated by two Dallas citizens. A theology student moderated. Before the debate started, around 30 adults entered the meeting, and scattered themselves through the audience.

"They tried to twist opinion to their side by loud applause of their speaker and in some cases by laughing at the opposing speaker. They monopolized the question and answer period, reading from material they brought, made character assassinations, and used guilt by association as their most powerful weapon.

"Although the meeting was not closed to outsiders, the members of the 'Y' were surprised that the organization asked to furnish one of the speakers had also supplied an audience and some additional speakers.

"As the question and answer period became more heated a young woman who had been sitting on the front row jumped up and viciously attacked one of the speakers. The 'Y' members who had gathered for Christian fellowship and information about an important topic were a bit shocked.

"The sentiments of the audience were best expressed the next day by a student who before the discussion had taken no side in the matter: 'I couldn't sleep last night for thinking I had been in a meeting of the German-American Bund.' "

Major Criticism That Can Be Made of Forum

But, the major criticism that can be made of Facts Forum is that its net effect is to disseminate fear, suspicion and divisive propaganda.

The consistent pattern of its "both sides" broadcasts is to reduce all national issues to:

Isolationism, ultra-conservatism and McCarthyism—versus —treason or stupidity.

The results of this, if carried into the entire field of mass communications, could be to increase the pressures dividing segments of American society, to increase group hatreds, and to implant suspicions which did not exist before.

On Dec. 28, 1951, Facts Forum broadcast, as part of its own creed, a warning to Americans. Facts Forum's moderator, Dan Smoot, read what he said were the words of Lenin uttered 30 years ago:

"We will win the Western World for Communism without shedding a drop of a single Russian soldier's blood. How? We will bankrupt the Western World. We will create fear, suspicion. We will work inside by creating national hatreds, religious antagonisms. We will pit father against son, wife against husband. We will inaugurate campaigns to hate Jews and hate Catholics and hate Negroes . . . We will break their spirit. We will frighten them. We will create political chicanery. We will confuse international diplomacy. We will do these things."

ON-THE-SPOT MURROW

Who'd think news reporting could be made as fascinating as Ed Murrow's two stimulating TV programs, See It Now, which is usually filmed overseas, and Person-To-Person, the show that gives viewers an intimate peek into the homes and private lives of famous personalities.

Even a hard-bitten foreign correspondent has to have a make-up treatment before his TV show. Murrow's "See It Now" for CBS-ALCOA has won countless merit awards.

Six universities have conferred honorary doctorates on him. His office is cluttered with more than 50 major awards for excellence as a news analyst. He has been cited, time and again, as one of the world's greatest reporters.

He is Ed Murrow, 45, son of a Greensboro, North Carolina, farmer, who today probably knows more great men by their first names than any other radio-TV reporter in the world.

His "See It Now" on CBS-TV has been hailed by the critics, and he has emerged as a top reporter without ever having worked on a newspaper. He is, in fact, CBS' highest-paid newsman and a member of the CBS board of directors.

He would have the right to be a bit pompous. But the truth is that he is a friendly, shirt-sleeved worker who slaves hard to turn out the words you hear him utter on TV.

He is what other newsmen call a "bleeder." That is, he sweats out writing his commentary. He labors over the right word. "There are not many writers who are slower than I am," he says. "And the more experienced I get, the slower I get."

He appears calm on your TV screen, but the fact is that he's nervous, and after a 15-minute commentary, he is wringing wet from perspiration.

He works very hard, and spends much time using the trans-Atlantic phone, calling high-up friends in Europe to verify tips. He spent the war years in London for CBS, where his voice became famous, and he is an expert on governmental affairs and military strategy.

In New York, he maintains a hectic pace. He tries to calm down by lunching at private clubs or by sitting in on a really competitive hand of poker.

As often as he can, he commutes to his big house in Dutchess County, near his friend, Lowell Thomas. Here he goes in for wood chopping (he once was a lumberjack) but his principal hobby is golf. He is right-handed, but he plays golf left-handed. When there's company in the house, he enjoys telling tall tales of unlikely happenings to famous people.

He looks the way a famous war correspondent always looks in the movies: tall (six-foot-one), lean and slender (170 pounds), with black wavy hair, bushy eyebrows

Many famous people have given him advice but, he says, "The best advice I ever got came from Judge John Bassett Moore of the World Court. He told me, 'No young man ever takes advice from an older man. But try to remember this: When you meet men of great reputation, your judgment of them will be greatly improved if you view them as though they were in their underwear.'

But how about people who are generally underestimated?

"Mrs. Winston Churchill, who has never sought recognition, has ability, balance and judgment. She's a remarkable woman! Gen. Omar Bradley is the most underestimated military man. He has a lot of intellectual furniture in his mind. And don't forget the court clerks in the U. S. State Department who work long hours for low salaries, without publicity or recognition."

He has a high regard for Chaim Weizmann and Thomas Masaryk: "They are the only two moderns who created a nation with their bare hands."

As for Hitler: "I heard him for the first time in 1932. For the first 10 minutes, he was horribly dull. After that, he had them in the palm of his hand. I was stunned by his magnetic hold on his audience, even though he violated every rule of oratory."

Murrow's full name is Egbert Roscoe Murrow, but at an early age, he changed Egbert to Edward. His dad was a farmer, who brought the family to the Puget Sound area of Washington when Ed was six. The father, who became a locomotive engineer for a logging company, still lives there with Mrs. Murrow. Ed Murrow has two brothers: Dewey, a successful contractor in Spokane, and Lacey, an Air Force brigadier general.

Murrow likes to recall his father's lack of enthusiasm about his son's radio job: "My father always thought there was something doubtful about making a living merely by talking."

And he explains modestly that: "The mechanics of television which make it possible for a man to be seen and heard through the land do not automatically confer wisdom or infallibility on that individual."

He is careful to explain to friends that, just because he has been everywhere and seen everything of world consequence, it doesn't mean he knows everything.

"All of us," he once said, "would like to do something to get the world out of the mess it's in; but we just don't know how to help. I feel even more frustrated than most people because, for some reason, I'm expected to have the answers. Well, I don't."

He adds that today the two most powerful forces in the world are equipped with the most devastating weapons the world has ever known. "And what do we do? I just don't know. And it's that uncertainty that makes me feel absolutely helpless."

He usually reads his script while standing at a reading stand. When he does sit at his uncluttered desk, he often leans back in his swivel chair and puts his feet up on the desk.

On his desk is a picture of his wife and son, whom he hates to leave so often when he must cover assignments abroad.

His wife is the former Janet Huntington Brewster, and they married on Oct. 27, 1934. But they did not have a child until November 6, 1945, when they were in London. It was just before the war ended. His wife was British director for Bundles for Britain and was doing educational broadcasts for the British Broadcasting Corporation.

His son was named Charles Casey, but his dad calls him simply Casey.

"We called him our peace-time bonus. And he's normal in every way except that he likes to go to school. I've tried, but I can't remember liking school."

His telecasts and broadcasts and three volumes of "I Can Hear It Now" for Columbia Records combine to bring him a tremendous fan mail. Although Murrow calls himself a news analyst rather than a commentator, and although he tries to be impartial, his fans have their own ideas of his viewpoint.

Murrow smiles as he says, "I am too radical, and too conservative. At the same time, I am a reactionary, a socialist, anti-Democratic and anti-Republican . . . and I have the letters to prove it!"

McCarthy ducks Murrow charges

The nation had a superb example of mccarthyism in action when Senator Joseph McCarthy appeared on Edward R. Murrow's "See It Now" Tuesday (KNXT 7:30 p.m.)

Joltin' Joe, who evidently wanted to duck a personal appearance and sent along his rebuttal on film, was given the time to answer charges against him made by Murrow on the March 9 telecast.

Murrow dealt with facts in his indictment.

He used McCarthy's own words and film clips of the senator in action to discredit McCarthy, mccarthyism and the tactics that are identified with the man and the philosophy. He charged the senator with using the smear and the half-truth and blasted hard at his high-handed often unfair methods of investigation.

McCARTHY answered as McCarthy would.

On Tuesday's "See It Now" the senator did not offer one defense to the charges made by Murrow. He did not deny them, refer to them in any way or attempt to explain away the recordings and film clips that made him look so bad.

MURROW

Instead, he fell back on mccarthyism — the smear, the half-truth and the outright false statement.

McCarthy, as is his practice with anybody who has the guts to run up against him, tried to link Murrow with the Communists—although he stopped short of actually calling the commentator a party member. This time he could not fall back on congressional immunity.

"MURROW is a symbol, a leader," said McCarthy, "and the cleverest of the jackal pack which is always found at the throat of anyone who dares to expose Communists and traitors."

This is the subtlest sort of mccarthyism. The implication is that McCarthy is untouchable because he is making a headline career of policing the Communist front and that anybody who disagrees with him is a threat to the country.

He makes no allowances for the fact that many persons consider his tactics and his "guilt by association" beliefs serious threats to the American principles and institutions that many of us hold dear.

UNWITTINGLY or not, Senator McCarthy dealt in false statements.

In attempting to impugn Murrow's loyalty, he said the respected commentator once was a member of the International Workers of the World.

"That is false," said Murrow.

IN REFERENCE to the Institute for International Education, of which Murrow is a trustee, McCarthy claimed it was chosen by a Soviet agency "to do a job which normally would be done by the secret police."

"That is false," said Murrow.

HERE ARE some examples of the half-truth or "guilt by association" technique.

McCarthy made much of the fact that Owen Lattimore praised Murrow in his book "Ordeal by Slander." The impression one would get from watching the senator's telecast was that Murrow did everything but plead to the jury in the Lattimore case.

Murrow explains the full story as follows:

"At Page 211 occurs the reference to me. After paying tribute to a number of newspaper and radio reporters who knew him personally and whose reporting and editorial work were, to quote Lattimore, 'Clearly based upon the ancient principle that I was guilty until proven innocent,' Lattimore goes on to express appreciation to reporters whom he had never met before the hearing and to reporters whom, like me, he has never met."

REFERRING once more to the Institute of International Education, McCarthy did his best to smear the organization and Murrow because of his association with it.

He neglected to mention that in addition to Murrow, others associated with the institute are John Foster Dulles, Philip Reed, Ralph J. Bunche, Virginia Gildersleeve and Milton Eisenhower, brother of the president.

THE SMEAR, of course, was evident all through the telecast. It was another typical McCarthy example of trying to link with communism anybody who doesn't see in him another Caesar or, at the very least, a new Napoleon.

But the interesting point still was his complete refusal to answer or acknowledge Murrow's charges on the March 9 telecast.

On that date Murrow tossed the gauntlet and slapped McCarthy's face.

The senator let the gauntlet lay and turned the other cheek.

PUBLIC REACTION throughout the country was solidly behind Ed Murrow. The pattern was set in Los Angeles—3711 to 617 — and was running in the same ratio in other key cities.

It also is interesting that the Newspaper Guild in New York yesterday voted its annual Page One award in public affairs to Ed Murrow.

The presentation was made "for Edward R. Murrow's distinguished contributions to the adult and responsible use of broadcasting as a major medium of information and enlightenment for the American people and for the many timely, incisive documentations on 'See It Now,' and for the vivid, live television portrait gallery of outstanding Americans on 'Person to Person'."

PRICE TAG: Congratulations, Murrow—on both counts.

LAST week TV GUIDE presented one of its three Gold Medal Awards to CBS-TV's See It Now for "its success in bringing new standards of news coverage and interpretation into the television field." See It Now, of course, is presided over by Edward R. Murrow.

This writer, for one, is proud to be associated in the same field with Edward R. Murrow and proud to be associated with a magazine which has had the vision to single him out as a man who has made—and continues to make—a major contribution to the growing stature of television.

For those who find it intellectually satisfying to look down on TV as a medium of claptrap for something called the "masses," we recommend a twice-weekly dose of Ed Murrow, whose See It Now on Tuesdays and Person to Person on Fridays are perhaps two of the most informative, enlightening and entertaining programs on the air. Murrow has had the courage to speak the truth on many subjects, particularly on the subject of Senator Joseph McCarthy —and it is a sad measure of the hysteria of our times that a simple expression of the truth must be called courageous.

It is our belief that the medium of television can do much to dispel hysteria. It is difficult to become hysterical while sitting alone in one's living room watching calmly, without "benefit" of crowd reaction, while one man or another presents one side or another of a vital issue. It is even more difficult to become hysterical while watching a man of Murrow's stature and integrity quietly putting the finger of truth in a spouting dyke.

McCarthy Proves that Murrow Was Right

Tuesday night Senator McCarthy was supposed to reply to the charges made four weeks previously by Edward R. Murrow, news commentator, that he dealth in half-truths and exaggeration and overstepped the bounds between investigation and persecution in his Communist-scourging activities.

McCarthy did not refute these charges. On the contrary, his broadcast served to confirm their correctness.

McCarthy made it clearer than he ever has before that his so-called logic is based on the following proposition:

"Communists criticize me; therefore, everyone who criticizes me is a Communist."

That kind of phony logic was the only basis for McCarthy's accusation that Murrow's March 9 broadcast "followed implicitly the Communist line." He had 25 minutes in which to produce evidence, if he had any, that Murrow had ever said or done anything to promote communism or to defend Communists. He did not cite a single instance of that kind.

Instead, he told a half, or perhaps a quarter truth about Murrow's connection with the Institute of International Education, accused Murrow of having been a member of the International Workers of the World, a charge which Murrow said was false, and attempted to impute some kind of guilt to Murrow because at one time Owen Lattimore and the late Harold Laski wrote complimentary things about him.

Another example of McCarthy's skill in the art of distortion was his reference to the fall of China which, he said, was delivered into slavery "by the jackal pack of Communist lying propagandists—including the friends of Mr. Edward R. Murrow,—who day after day shouted to the world that the Chinese Communists were agrarian reformers," etc.

Notice that he didn't say Murrow was a member of the "jackal pack." He did not accuse Murrow of having said that the Chinese Communists were agrarian reformers. It was "friends" of Murrow who did this, he contended, but he did not name them. Obviously his intention was to throw a cloud of suspicion on Murrow, without offering any proof.

And why did McCarthy save for this telecast his insinuation, unsupported by evidence, that Communists in our government delayed research on the hydrogen bomb for 18 months? He didn't even mention Murrow in this connection, but in the context of his remarks the charge was clearly intended to convey the impresssion that Murrow was somehow responsible for the delay.

Thus, McCarthy himself has supplied the evidence that Murrow was right.

McCarthy Fighter Tar Heel

NEW YORK—One of the most talked about personalities in all of politics and entertainment these days is a native North Carolinian who doesn't hold office and who isn't known as a singer, dancer or teller of jokes.

He is Edward R. Murrow—born Egbert Roscoe Murrow, which was allowed to become Edward R. at an early age—a native of Guilford County, N. C.

Already a noted newsman and commentator for his outstanding programs on CBS radio and television, Murrow this year became an important figure in political matters and as a subject of the news when he locked horns with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy.

Murrow's special report on McCarthy on his "See It Now" television program on Tuesday, March 9, brought a blistering denunciation from the senator and an overwhelming flood of press and public response. In a little more than two weeks after the broadcast, 22,000 letters had reached CBS, containing an almost 10-to-1 endorsement of Murrow.

Origin Told.

Throughout the great debate that raged afterwards and especially when Senator McCarthy leveled his charges linking the commentator with the Communists, little attention naturally was given to the fact that Murrow is a Tar Heel by birth.

But when the George Foster Peabody Awards committee, voting Murrow a special award, drew up its citation, great emphasis was given to the state of his origin. Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly magazine and a frequent visitor to Chapel Hill and other North Carolina communities, wrote the citation:

"A Tarheel—he was born on a small farm in North Carolina—Edward R. Murrow brings to radio and television those qualities which are summed up in that ringing phrase, 'a fighting Southerner.' He is a believer and he believes passionately in the capacity of this country to do the right thing. He is fair-minded and a fighter for justice. He is courageous with the courage that has compelled him again to take on assignments 'above and beyond the call of duty' . . ."

Accepts Award.

Murrow accepted the award in concise, full of modesty and graciousness:

"I think it was Shakespeare who said, 'Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks.' It was generous, gracious, and in keeping with his New England conscience and sense of fair play, for Mr. Weeks to offer me time to reply immediately. It is true that I was born in North Carolina, but I left there at a tender age—voluntarily—and southerners should not be held responsible for what I may have said or done. . . .

"To one charge I plead guilty, and with pride. I do believe passionately in the capacity of this country to do the right thing. I believe in what Will Rogers used to call 'the big, normal majority.' Somehow in a manner that is to me mysterious, they wonder, worry and sometimes fear. But in the end of the day, when the evidence is in, when prejudices have been readjusted, the national mind is made up. But except on fundamental issues, imbedded in our basic documents, the mind is not made up permanently. There is always the possibility of persuasion, argument and contention bringing about a change by consent. . . ."

Opinion On News.

On one question which has nagged the broadcasting industry for a long while—the objectivity of its news and commentary — Murrow has said:

"I would contend that a program dealing with hard news should attempt to be as objective as humanly possible—and I would be the first to admit that I never have known a completely objective, impartial reporter.

"On a program such as 'See It Now,' which does not deal with hard news, I feel that when an editorial position is taken on a controversial issue, as with Sen. McCarthy, the statement should be made in advance that opportunity to reply would be afforded."

Murrow-McCarthy

Editor:

I feel compelled to forward some comment on the column, Televiews, in your edition of Apr. 17. The writer, William H. Mooring, presents in my opinion a completely biased account of the Murrow-McCarthy controversy. In the second paragraph, the columnist states the theme, in my opinion, of the pro-McCarthyites. This is, to answer all criticism by an attack on the integrity or loyalty of the critic.

Mr. Mooring fails to state explicitly that the Senator did not comment on Mr. Murrow's original charges. Instead, the Senator proceeded to tie up the commentator in a sinister plot to deliver this nation into the hands of the communists.

To satisfy Mr. Mooring's wonder, I would like to remind him that Mr. Murrow has produced an account of a Soviet blast at the U. in which he (Murrow) was terme a reactionary. This title was give to the commentator as a result his work in arranging for exchang students to learn more about fo eign lands. This work McCarth has used as his No. 1 case agains Mr. Murrow.

If Mr. Mooring wishes to ente the Murrow-McCarthy fracas, I be lieve he should act in a mor decent manner by printing at leas part of Mr. Murrow's answer. But such a course of action has been, up to now, completely forbidden by the pro-McCarthyites.

Senator McCarthy has done more than any other man in recent political history to sow the seeds of doubt, distrust, fear, and disunity in this country. If this does not give aid and comfort to our enemies, internal and external, then nothing ever will.

Peter Murray,
Newark.

HA! HA!

BROCKPORT REPUBLIC 4/29/54

Sen. Joseph McCarthy of television and headline fame, has long been a source of irritation to perfectly loyal, non-Red Americans who are not susceptible to double or triple talk or just plain bullying dished up as "Americanism". Nor are these same people taken down the garden path by the efforts of a federal legislator to intrude himself and his precocious staff into the seperate, Executive branch of the government. (We wonder where the Supreme Court is on the Cohn-McCarthy & Carr schedule?)

The point of this Editorial is not to contribute in our small measure to the circulation of publicity for the "Terror Trio" (no doubt, operating on the theory that there is no such thing as bad publicity), but to call your attention to this fact:

McCarthy has in the past and is now showing an aversion to LAUGHTER. The big man can dish it out but apparently can't take it.

Since this seems to be the case, therefore, we recommend for your joint participation, a simple expression of sentiment for the Senator. If you feel that your opinion is worth two cents, invest the two pennies in a postal card, addressing it to

Sen. Joseph McCarthy
S. O. B.
(Senate Office Building, that is.)
Washington, D. C.

On the back of said card simply inscribe -in pen, pencil or in blood if you wish- the two interjections "HA, HA"

This effort is designed to provide the Senator with a mass expression of a sentiment he can understand and, incidently, should the Laugh Crusade gain national momentum, provide a tidy income to the Post Office Dept. — a happening we're sure the conscientious legislator will find "American".

SEND YOUR CARD TODAY. The Senator will be dying to see those full mail bags in his office every day!

The People Speak

A WEE BIT CONSERVATIVE

To the Sun: Re McCarthy controversy: You were conservative with your remarks about slanted news stories. I have noticed that otherwise dependable western news-casters take up the slant to some extent. But there was yet enough prudence to bear out the truth if we skip the insinuations and implications and search out the reality. The hot-shots have now gotten the Senator's work mixed up with prosecution.

It was the press that built the Senator up; for what purpose other than to stop him? It is but a sample of the brain-wash that has been going on here at home for years.

Your Murrieta correspondent (Mrs. Raymond Thompson, writing in last week's Sun), a person not interested in the new-worldism, shows the results from that constant flow of propaganda. Leaving the false impressions, insinuations and implications aside, can that writer cite one actual volation by the Senator?

He has been accused, tried and judged; by whom? Maybe he is just too smart for the one-worlders to have near when they gain power over the people. Neophytism will be wobbly; the shrewdest and hardest is so likely to take on from there. — W. C. VERNON, Perris.

BISHOP SHIEL ON TAP

To the Sun: To very many it seems that Chicago's Bishop Shiel's attack on Senator McCarthy was very much uncalled for. We believe that David Lawrence in "U. S. News and World Report" was perfetly correct in saying that clergymen lose respect of their congregations when they mount the political soap boxes.

In this case, left wingers and anti-McCarthy news reporters — such as Edward Murrow—can now trot out Bishop Shiel to give sanction to their tirades against the senator.

Nowadays when a person's loyalty is questioned in any manner, the person rages back: "You cannot do that to me—I'm an AMERICAN!"

"If," as the Lake Elsinore Valley Sun says, "the senator from Wisconsin or his co-workers come through unscathed and able to continue the battle, it will be a miracle. It's never been done before."

Senator McCarthy will come through because wrong doers nowadays are being "scared out of their very pants." But the rest of us should keep our shirts on—including Bishop Shiel.—REV. PAT. MALONE, Blessed Sacrament Church, Alberhill.

SMEAR CHAMP

To the Sun: I was getting ready to answer Mrs. Raymond Thompson of Murrieta who wrote in last week's Sun when I ran across this letter in the Los Angeles Times written by Dan LeFevre of Whittier. It was just about what I intended to say:

"When Senator McCarthy has received a complaint he calls X to a secret meeting where X may bring his attorney and evidence if he wishes.

"Three courses are open to X. If he is innocent he has only to say so, submit his evidence and go back with no publicity.

"If he is guilty, he may offer to resign his government position and look for another job. But if he is guilty and wants to defy the committee and keep his juicy job he must plead the Fifth Amendment and appear at a public hearing.

"This is the distasteful publicity that he could so easily have avoided. This is not a criminal case. X is neither cleared nor incriminated; he must remain under suspicion just as he was before the hearing.

"Neither Senator McCarthy nor the committee nor the whole Senate can clear or incliminate him. That is for the Justice department.

"When X takes his place behind the Fifth Amendment is the time when Americans for Democratic Action take over. They never say a word or make a move to clear X. Instead they attack Senator McCarthy and the committee."

—Frank D. Foreman, Elsinore

But by and large we are in the one-dimensional news stage now, in newspapers, radio, and television. This is real progress, and cause for rejoicing. There are newspapers people can read and commentators they can listen to who do a good job of reporting the "flat" news without any attempt to color it, interpret it, or analyze it. It is possible to put little bumps in this flatness by shades of emphasis, by special selection, and by placement in order or prominence, but we have at least reached agreement that whoever puts bumps in the flatness is not as reliable as one who does not.

Now something new comes into the picture, and that is that the one-dimensional flatness is not enough. People can look at an event and see it with their own eyes (like the McCarthy-Army hearings) and not know what it is all about. There are questions of background, definitions, truthfulness, evaluation, and the attempts of the various people involved in the news to arouse emotions and prejudices.

When I say the public is demanding a change from the one-dimension news policy I mean that while there are no petitions out on the subject, and very few people shouting from rooftops, there are confusion and disagreement as to the meaning of events which call for responsible presentation of the event in 3-D style, including background, possible motives, and a general enlargement of the field of sight and sound so that the public will have a maximum understanding of the news and will be able to act on it accordingly.

The tremendous rise in the circulation of "interpretive" magazines and the popularity of commentators who try to give news length, breadth, and depth, like Edward R. Murrow, prove that there is public demand for more than one simple dimension in connection with important news in this increasingly complex world.

Divisive Influence

To The Christian Science Monitor:

I feel The Christian Science Monitor should point out to its readers (and it has been doing so in excellent fashion, but I feel more should be done) the divisive nature of this McCarthy situation. Everyone surely notices the vast amount of discussion on the situation. But are we noticing how people are divided violently on the issue? Can a pro- and anti- discuss it calmly? And isn't this violent division just what the totalitarian systems want? "Divide and conquer."

It seems to me that our President should recognize this more clearly and use his vast weight of power and prestige to restore a more normal balance in public opinion.

Edward R. Murrow, a fine, objective reporter and analyst deserves the support of every newspaper in our country and I hope the Monitor will give it to him when the occasion presents itself.

Murrow answers McCarthy smear

Edward R. Murrow dedicated most of his "See It Now" program Tuesday (KNXT 7:30 p. m.) to cleaning up a smear mess left over from the previous week by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

Because there was no advance notice of Murrow's intent, many thousands of local viewers undoubtedly missed the telecast. For their benefit, the text of Murrow's "defense" is reprinted today. Only minor deletions have been made in the interests of space.

Murrow said:

"LAST WEEK Senator McCarthy appeared on this program to correct any errors he thought we might have made on our report of March 9. Since he made no reference to any statements of fact that we made, we must conclude he found no errors of fact. He proved again that anyone who exposes him, anyone who does not share his hysterical disregard for decency and human dignity and the rights guaranteed by the Constitution, must be a Communist or at best a fellow traveler. I fully expected this treatment.

"The senator added this reporter's name to a long list of individuals and institutions he has accused of serving the Communist cause. The proposition is simple. Anyone who criticizes or opposes McCarthy's methods must be a Communist. If that be true, there are an awful lot of Communists in this country.

"For the record, let's consider briefly some of the senator's charges.

"HE CLAIMED, but offered no proof, that I had been a member of the Industrial Workers of the World. That is false. I was never a member of the IWW, never applied for membership. Men that I worked with in the Pacific Northwest in the mid-twenties will attest that I never had affinity or affiliation with that organization.

"The senator charged that Prof. Harold Laski, a British scholar and politician, dedicated a book to me. That is true. He is dead. He was a Socialist. I am not.

"He was one of those civilized individuals who did not insist press and radio as a center of international propaganda for American reaction, and I have been labeled by them a 'reactionary radio commentator.'

"THE SENATOR alleged that we were doing the work of the Russian secret police, training spies. We were in fact conducting normal cultural and educational relations with foreign nations. I believed 20 years ago, and I believe today, that mature Americans can engage in controversy and conversations, and that we can compete, and successfully, not only in the area of bombs but of ideas.

"Senator McCarthy couldn't even get my present relationship with CBS straight. He repeatedly referred to me as the educational director, a position I have not held for 17 years.

"THE SENATOR waved a copy of the Daily Worker saying an article in it has praised me. Here is an example of what Senator McCarthy calls 'praise' by William Z. Foster in the March 17 issue of the Daily Worker:

"'During the past 10 days Senator McCarthy has received a number of resounding belts in the jaw. These came from Adlai Stevenson, E. R. Murrow, Senator Flanders, the Army leadership, broadcasting companies. Even Eisenhower himself had to give McCarthy a slap on the wrist.' That was the sole reference to me.

"ANOTHER charge by Senator McCarthy was that Owen Lattimore mentioned me in a book. What Lattimore, in substance, said was that he had never met me, but that I had done a fair job of reporting his testimony. In short, that I had not presumed his guilt. I hope to continue to present evidence developed before congressional committees as impartially as I am able. And that specifically includes the hearing before which Senator McCarthy will shortly appear.

"I require no lectures from the junior senator from Wisconsin upon the evils of communism. Having watched the aggressive forces at work in Western Europe; having had friends in Eastern Europe butchered or driven into exile; having broadcast from London in 1943 that

"HE CLAIMED, but offered no proof, that I had been a member of the Industrial Workers of the World. That is false. I was never a member of the IWW, never applied for membership. Men that I worked with in the Pacific Northwest in the mid-twenties will attest that I never had affinity or affiliation with that organization.

"The senator charged that Prof. Harold Laski, a British scholar and politician, dedicated a book to me. That is true. He is dead. He was a Socialist. I am not.

"He was one of those civilized individuals who did not insist [illegible] political ideas as a precondition for friendship or conversation. Laski, as he makes clear in the introduction, dedicated the book to me not because of political agreement, but because he held my wartime broadcasts from London in high regard.

"Senator McCarthy's principal attack on me was an attack on the Institute of International Education of which I was assistant director and am now a trustee, together with such people as John Foster Dulles, Milton Eisenhower, Ralph J. Bunche, Virginia Gildersleeve, Philip Reed, to name just a few. That institute sponsored—acted as the registering agent—for summer schools in foreign countries, including England, France and Germany and one in the Soviet Union in 1934. Its work has been praised as recently as 1948 by President Eisenhower. It has been denounced by the Soviet me, but that I had done a fair job of reporting his testimony. In short, that I had not presumed his guilt. I hope to continue to present evidence developed before congressional committees as impartially as I am able. And that specifically includes the hearing before which Senator McCarthy will shortly appear.

"I require no lectures from the junior senator from Wisconsin upon the evils of communism. Having watched the aggressive forces at work in Western Europe; having had friends in Eastern Europe butchered or driven into exile; having broadcast from London in 1943 that the Russians were responsible for the Katyn massacre; having told the story of the Russian refusal to allow allied aircraft to land on Russian fields after dropping supplies to those who rose in Warsaw and were betrayed by the Russians, and having been denounced by the Russian radio for these reports, I cannot feel that I require instructions from the senator in the evils of communism.

"HAVING searched my conscience and my files, I cannot contend that I have always been right or wise. But I have attempted to pursue the truth with some diligence, and to report it, even though as in this case, I had been warned in advance that I would be subjected to the attentions of Senator McCarthy.

"We shall hope to deal with matters of more vital interest to the country on subsequent programs."

Commentators' report

What the commentators said yesterday:

It has remained for an American senator to go to the heart of the French-Indo-China issue. Democratic Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana said in a speech in the Senate that France must speedily grant full independence to the three states of Indo-China. Otherwise, he said, the Geneva conference will head toward unmitigated disaster, perhaps even to World War III. His point is well taken and inescapable that the whole military effort in Indo-China is doomed to eventual failure unless the native peoples there see their independence as the prize for which they are fighting.

—CECIL BROWN
(KHJ, 8 a. m.; 5:55 p. m.)

The only thing that can safely be said of the mess of FHA at this point is that the wrecking crew is firmly entrenched—and they are still able to block any moves to provide decent homes at fair prices.

—FRANK EDWARDS
(KHJ, 10:15 p. m.)

. . . In this day, the scientists with their gadgets, their bombs, their discoveries are playing the major role in shaping our politics . . . our relations with each other . . . and our economies. They have taken on greater responsibilities than they have ever had before and their training in science obviously is not enough to equip them for these responsibilities . . .

CARROLL ALCOTT
(KNX, 10:15 p. m.)

We're now being told that there are signs of a spring upturn in business in Los Angeles, as reflected in the sale of new cars, Easter trade, and so on. But all these economic reports on Los Angeles and Southern California make it plain that this part of the United States has good reason to feel confident of the future, and not because of such things as the Easter trade. Partly because of a steady population growth. Partly because of the aggressive, forward looking spirit that prevails in a part of the nation that has grown so fast during the past decade. It has something to do with a carry over of the old pioneering spirit, with its faith in the future.

—ELMER PETERSON
(KFI 5:45 p. m.)

Murrow, McCarthy and th

THE HIGHLIGHT of Senator McCarthy's attack on Edward R. Murrow was the statement that "our nation may well die because of that 18-month deliberate delay" in producing the hydrogen bomb.

This, of course, has nothing to do with Murrow, but never think it was futile; on the contrary, it probably scared the pants off five million boobs, and scaring the boobs is the heart and soul of the McCarthy political technique.

This is perhaps the most masterly exhibition of that technique as yet presented. The cheapest kind of joker can scare the dimwits by poking a hideous false-face at them, but it takes a master to set them sweating and quaking without even a false-face, without anything at all. Probably McCarthy is the only political contortionist in the country who could do it.

Note that the nation may die because of the delay in producing the bomb. The bomb has since been produced, but that isn't the point. There were 18 months, according to McCarthy, when we didn't have it and that vacuum is the fatality; in other words, we are to be blown up by the bomb that didn't exist.

RADIO AND TELEVISION

By JOHN CROSBY

In Defense of the Cameras

This is in the nature of a progress report on television in politics. Virtually the first television program I ever saw was in 1940 when NBC experimentally telecast from the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia. There were almost no sets available and just about the only way you could see the telecast was to go over to NBC and watch it on a couple of experimental sets.

John Crosby

There wasn't much to see either. Ben Grauer had one camera, a table and a couple of chairs and not much else. He would go on the convention floor, bag a reluctant Senator and drag him back to his table-and-chair arrangement for an interview. The reluctance to appear was understandable. Television had an audience of just about nobody and Senators don't like to waste time on such a small crowd.

Well, time passed. The Kefauver hearings were held before an audience of millions. Then the 1952 conventions, crawling with TV technicians and reporters. This time, far from being reluctant, the Senators practically had to be swept away from the cameras with baseball bats. They'd show up, statement in hand, in full make-up all ready to go on.

Well, sir, more time passed. There came the McCarthy hearings before another audience of millions. Then just the other day Sen. Watkins, R., Utah, ruled that radio and television would be barred from the McCarthy censure hearings. Again we find the Senator reluctant. We seem to have come full circle.

But, of course, this new Senatorial reluctance stems from entirely different reasons. Now it is not because the audience is so small but because it is so large. Television, it is feared, might turn the McCarthy hearings into another circus and the Senate has had enough of circuses for the time being.

There's no doubt in my mind that the McCarthy hearing was a circus all right or that it did grave damage to the prestige of the United States Senate and to the personal prestige of many of the individual Senators involved. But I cling to the belief that it was the Senators who made it a circus and that television simply recorded the circus. That the presence of TV influenced the behavior of the Senators, and particularly the duration of the hearings, there can be no doubt.

No doubt TV will always influence the behavior of Senators but not necessarily always for the bad. As a matter of fact, it may already have had a salutary effect. The Senate committee investigating the charges against McCarthy has already decreed that this hearing will follow rules of evidence and maintain the decorum of a court of law. Television, of course, can't claim all the credit for bringing about this welcome shift in the behavior of Congressional committees, but it surely can claim some of it.

When Sen. McCarthy, for example, smirkingly told Secretary Stevens that he couldn't be expected to know about "the dirty politics we play down here," the remark may not have caused a tremor among the case-hardened reporters and politicians in the hearing, but it certainly caused some tremors in millions of citizens who were as unaware as Secretary Stevens that "dirty politics" was such a joking matter. As a medium of education—not necessarily pleasant education—TV has no equal and in this way it can't fail to do some good.

The Watkins ruling barring TV and radio has aroused a storm of what I consider justifiable protest among networks and stations. Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, has called the ruling "grossly discriminatory" since the press will be allowed and TV and radio won't. Actually CBS didn't carry any of the large coverage of the McCarthy hearing. In this case, I believe, Dr. Stanton is not necessarily trying to get CBS cameras into the hearing, but is rather endeavoring to win for the network the right to determine for itself whether it will or will not cover the hearing. I believe they're entitled to that right.

The circus aspect of televised Congressional hearings is, I am convinced, a passing phase anyhow. Long before TV came along, the press, after all, turned the Scopes trial into a circus, too. Since that time, both press and public have grown a lot more sophisticated. In time a televised Congressional hearing will attract exactly as much attention as it deserves—and not one bit more or less.

THE OPEN FORUM

"There Is No Hope for the Satisfied Man"
—Frederick G. Bonfils

Self-Respecting Man

I WOULD like to ask Lois Colby who recently attacked pensioners in a Forum letter if she has any assurance when she reaches the retiring age, she won't have to ask for the pension? I worked hard all of my life as a forge blacksmith, but was not able to save because my work only lasted through the summer and in the fall and winter we had to use up what little we saved till spring again. I was born in this state and I worked until I was past 68. I think I am entitled to get the pension.

What is paying on the pension? I don't think a little 2 pct sales tax will ever break anybody.

The governor is a great man about education, look at the crime in Denver (youths and girls ranging from 13 to 19 years old) is that what you want more money for, to teach them to be bigger crooks? M. B. C.
Denver.

H-Bombing—Never!

I AGREE with Forum Writer Neil C. Smith concerning the careless suggestion of Mr. Gustin and others that we should drop H bombs here and there on anyone some of us do not happen to like. While such witless remarks sometimes do no harm except to the user, some people will come to tolerate the idea the oftener it is repeated. Hearing no protest of such inhuman thoughts, those in authority are more apt to do such rash acts.

The result could be the implacable hatred of the survivors if any. At the very least it would cause a moral shock to cultured people, probably most non-Christian, that would take generations to heal which would be of great disadvantage to our children. Without doubt it would be the trigger to set off WW III.

Is the object of such asinine comments to brutalize our sensibilities? M. T.
Denver.

Another Jolt to a Shaky Marriage

WHAT a relief it must be to have the Open Forum, the Denver Post and the Old Age Pension to blame off steam on when one gets up with a "dark brown" taste.

I refer to Mathalde Jones and Lois Colby and others who are always writing in their gripes about pensioners. If it will ease their harassed souls any good, they might remember that the oldsters help pay their pensions by taxes on every penny they earn.

Most every pensioner is someone's mother or father. The young people should remember if their parents did not get a pension, they would have to take care of them, making today's shaky marriages shake even more.

I worked until I was 65 years old and was no longer able to hold a position, then I applied for and got the pension. Every day of my life I am thankful that I live in a state that does take care of its oldsters. MRS. ADA NALLERY.
Englewood.

Katy's Bewildered Fans

I WISH to thank Bob Bowie publicly for his splendid radio column concerning the raw deal that was handed Katy Ellen of KTLN radio station.

After nearly four years of heartfelt, painstaking interest in the job she had created for herself, and endearing herself to thousands of followers, to whom the name "Katy Ellen" really stood for something, to suddenly and without a word of warning have her job literally snatched from under her feet, not only left "Katy" bewildered but her listeners, too.

It smacks of Pearl Harbor methods, a "blow in the dark." Her program was one of the few that was beamed directly to the homemaker, and it gave many of us an outside contact that we would not have had otherwise.
MRS. E. A. KEHN.

1880 Sandstorm

WILL the dust storms of today transform all eastern Colorado into a giant sand dune area?

Did you ever hear of the creeping sand dunes in northeastern New Mexico? At the eastern edge of the dunes there is a volcano pit several hundred feet deep. When the wind strikes there, it starts a whirling cloud of sand in the pit and that flour-like sand whips on over eastern Colorado.

In the eighties, as I walked in the dunes, I saw something moving down in the pit. I started to go down—I couldn't stop. A squirrel couldn't climb in such flour-like sand. Something snagged my overalls and stopped me. Where that Indian came from, I don't know. He motioned me to lie down and be still. He was gone about half an hour and came back with a cedar post and rope. He showed me how to straddle the post and lean back. He pulled me to the top.

If you dig into some of those sand hills in eastern Colorado and New Mexico you will find the remains of soldiers and pioneers covered many years ago. Will all the eastern Colorado land we have taken from the grass eventually be a sandy grave? H. E. HAMILTON.
Denver.

TV Star Leashed?

THE Unite Against Dogs plan presented by L. A. in the Open Forum I would like to answer. I will agree that some dogs bark and howl and keep people awake, but dogs can be taught to be nice, the same as some people can be just as noisy as animals.

Why do so many companies use pictures of dogs to help sell their products? I wish this L. C. would look in The Post of 4-16 and see the most wonderfully touching picture a dear little sick child with his faithful pet dog. How can a person hate a dog so bad?

The dog owner is a lot to blame. They have dogs but don't half feed or water them or train them. Right now I am looking at a well-trained dog on TV. He's plenty smart.
Wheat Ridge. G. G.

54's Political Spanking

WELCOME home, Senator Ed! While there are a great many issues on which you and I and many others do not agree, I will say in all fairness, you can and do express your opinions freely, right or wrong.

Your years in the U. S. senate have given you a world of experience which will be of great help to you in solving many of Colorado's problems.

I am quite sure you will win the governorship.

If our present governor accepts the call to run for office, we will take a trip to the woodshed and we are confident the spanking will be given.
Littleton. G. G.

Tough Tactics Okeh

BELIEVE it or not, I am Democrat politically but in regards to Communism I am for McCarthy all the way. I only think he should be rougher and tougher with the ones that refuse to answer question, regardless who they are. If they are really Americans they should be proud to admit it; and if not, mark them down Communists and no friend of ours as they are very dangerous and can't be trusted any place. Anybody who is against trying to weed such people out of our government, like McCarthy is doing, is disloyal to our nation. It is fake loyalty to not get behind McCarthy and help him instead of ridiculing and insulting him.
Edgewater, Colo. E. S. H.

McCarthy Critic Wins High Praise By Rockefeller

By ED OLSEN
Denver Post Staff Writer

David Rockefeller, grandson of one of the world's most successful capitalists, had a good word here Thursday for an associate attacked by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R) of Wis., as a "left-winger" who had "abetted the Communists."

The senator recently hurled that charge at Edward R. Murrow, famed CBS news commentator, after Murrow devoted a full television program to a documentary report on McCarthy. One of the "accusations" stemmed from Murrow's work with the Institute for International Education.

Rockefeller told members of the Rocky Mountain advisory committee to IIE, at a Denver meeting at the University Club, that all those active with IIE have "every reason to feel proud of our association with Mr. Murrow — despite the attacks of the younger senator from Wisconsin."

MURROW DEFENDED

The Rockefeller family has long supported the IIE financially. David, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, and several of his relatives have assisted the organization in its "exchange of persons" program for building better international relations.

In his defense of Murrow, who is a member of the IIE board of trustees, Rockefeller was joined by Robert S. McCollum of Denver, chairman of the advisory group.

Exchange of persons is more important to America than ever before, Rockefeller told the group. Anti-American feeling in the world has grown since World War II, he said, at the very time America needs most to be understood to fill its role as a world leader.

He cited "very effective" Communist propaganda as one cause of growing dislike for the U. S.

NOT ALWAYS WISE

"We must admit that to some extent it has also been caused by our own ineptness at handling relations abroad. We have not always acted wisely—which is not surprising for a nation new to world leadership.

"It must also be admitted," Rockefeller said, "that the person or country with less of the world's goods and power is apt to be jealous and resentful of one with more."

He said he had "every faith" in the value of bringing persons from other countries to the U. S.—and sending American students abroad—in "getting the U. S. understood abroad and in improving the chances for world peace."

DRAW FINE LINE

Rockefeller stressed the importance of selecting students or other persons who will visit the U. S. But he argued that the opportunity shouldn't be restricted only to those who have no criticism of Americans.

"We must exclude those people who have expressed themselves unequivocally as bitter enemies of the U. S. But it is equally important that we do not exclude a person because he may be prejudiced or is unfriendly to the U. S.

"Probably those are the people who need to come and learn about us. We must draw a fine line between those who are positively hostile, and those who are simply not friendly," he said.

Dr. Kenneth Holland of New York, president of the Institute for International Education, also addressed the group reviewing the growth of the "exchange of persons" program, which he compared with the laying of cables for a great suspension bridge.

Eviction-If-Baptized Charge Denied Here

By WALT LINDSTROM
Denver Post Staff Writer

A report that Sands House sanatorium, 5261 W. 26th Ave., would "evict" Mrs. Florence Hawkins, dying cancer patient who wants to be baptized by total immersion, was vigorously denied Friday by Mrs. Evelyn Braun, superintendent of the nursing home.

Dr. William L. Blessing, president of the House of Prayer for All Peoples, 160 Irving St., said that Karl Hawkins, the woman's husband, had been told Wednesday that he must find another place for his wife by Saturday. Hawkins could not be reached immediately for comment.

Dr. Blessing and his son, William L. Blessing Jr., associate pastor at the House of Prayer, want to baptize Mrs. Hawkins as, they say, she has requested. The nursing home has refused to allow the ceremony to take place on its premises, saying it has no suitable facilities for total immersion.

Mrs. Braun flatly denied having told Hawkins that he must find another place for his wife. She also said that Hawkins had told her Wednesday that it was not his desire to have his wife immersed.

MUST SIGN RELEASE

The superintendent said that, in a separate conversation on Wednesday, she had told the younger Blessing that he was welcome to baptize Mrs. Hawkins if she were first removed from the nursing home. As in all cases where a patient is removed from the home, she said, both Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins would have to sign a release and her doctor would probably have to sign, too.

It was her understanding, Mrs. Braun said, that the younger Blessing was making plans to perform the baptismal ceremony next Wednesday. Mrs. Hawkins has received word her daughter will arrive in Denver from California that day, she added, and the dying woman wants the daughter to be present.

Hawkins could not be located to confirm the charges made against the nursing home by the Blessings. His latest permanent address was 380 S. Sheridan Blvd. He is reported to have been staying with friends since Mrs. Hawkins went into Sands House.

National Salute Saturday to Launch KIMN

Station KIMN, a new name for an old friend of Denver radio fans, will go on the air Saturday with a salute from Mutual Broadcasting System across the nation.

The new call letters for station KFEL will be used for the first time during the station's signon at 5:30 a. m. Saturday. At 10:30 a. m., the station will salute the Intermountain Network with a 30-minute program, including all KIMN personalities. At 6 p. m., the Mutual network will join the salute.

KIMN is the key station for the Intermountain Network which includes outlets in nine western states.

Police Seek Man Who 'Jumps' 2 $500 Bonds

Police Friday were searching for Robert A. Mutch, 25, "police character" wanted for jumping two bonds of $500 each.

Mutch, whose last address was 1065 Emerson St., was to appear in police court last week to face traffic charges stemming from arrests March 15 and April 12. He has a police record dating back to 1948.

Colorado 1953 Income Averaged $1,630 a Person

Total income for Colorado residents was a record $2,375,000,000 in 1953, a per capita average of $1,630, the department of commerce said here Friday.

The national average was $1,700.

As in most parts of the country, farm income in Colorado slumped from the 1952 figure, but other sources boosted the total to the new record. The total Colorado income in 1952 was $2,316,000,000.

Income figures also set new records in New Mexico and Arizona.

The New Mexico total was $1,020,000,000, up 5 pct. over 1952, and in Arizona income totaled $1,380,000,000, an increase of 7 pct.

Clay to Handle Publicity for Denver Library

John T. Eastlick, Denver librarian, announced Friday the appointment of Robert Clay, 31, as director of public relations and displays with the library.

Clay, a graduate of Ohio State University, has been with the library since September as exhibition and display specialist. Clay is married, has one son, and lives at 1757 Kingston St. in Aurora.

At Ohio State he majored in fine arts and history. For a time after graduation he was an artist with the Julian Krupnik advertising agency in Columbus, O., and also with the bureau of education research at Ohio State. Later he was assistant art director of the Ohio State museum.

Navy Mothers Slate Tag Day Event Saturday

Veterans at Fitzsimons Army Hospital and the Veterans Administration Hospital Saturday will benefit from "tag day" sponsored by the Rocky Mountain Navy Mothers of America, Club 462.

Mrs. Florence McKenzie, 1349 Fillmore St., tag day chairman, said about 100 mothers and members of other civic groups will participate. They will exchange tags bearing the mother's slogan, "Recuperation, Rehabilitation and Recreation" for contributions of any size.

Mrs. McKenzie said proceeds from the one-day drive will benefit all veterans.

VIEWING TV

With HAL HUMPHREY

HOLLYWOOD.—I think it's only fair to warn the country's female population that along about next fall a sexy, voluptuous honey blond is going to crash their homes via the TV screen and extend a general invitation to their husbands and boy friends to "C'mon up and see me sometime."

Mae West

Some of you younger gals may try to laugh off this direct approach technique as being obsolete. But I can assure you that when employed by its inventor, Mae West, the results will be every bit as devastating to the male animal today as they were in the Roaring Twenties, when Miss West first began plying her wares.

Right after I heard that she was planning a TV series, I called up to get a confirmation. "Why doncha c'mon up and see me, and we'll talk it over," Mae suggested.

For the life of me, I couldn't think of a single reason why I shouldn't.

"Howja do!" was Mae's greeting, as she led me into her Hollywood apartment. Everything was in pure white and gold-trimmed except Mae. She was wearing a pale pink negligee.

I guess she could see that I was finding it a little difficult to become acclimatized to this dazzling environment.

"You wanted to know about my TV plans?" she asked, in a silky baritone.

"Yup," I said, without hesitation, and with a new respect for Gary Cooper as a brilliant conversationalist.

"Well, it's true. I'm going to begin filming a half-hour TV series with Producer Bill LeBaron right after an engagement at the Sahara hotel in Las Vegas next month.

"Doncha think TV is a perfect medium for me? After all, I've always entertained the masses—all ages and mentality," said Mae, confidently.

I had to agree that her appeal was universal, and certainly had not diminished any, as I could plainly see while watching her pace across the room with that famous strut, which is sort of a cross between a walk and a roll. Mae had a copyright on this "look-me-over-kid" glide before Marilyn Monroe had graduated from all fours.

"What about the censors?" I asked. "Do you think they'll give you any trouble?"

"I don't see why!" she exclaimed, fluttering her heavy lashes innocently. "If they don't censor some of the things I see on my TV set now, then why me?

"I have never resorted to nudity, but things have changed. Why, I see these ballet things on TV, and lots of them are regular orgies.

"My show will be just a little of this and that—entertainment for the whole family. We'll have some comedy, and in one part I'll portray famous women of history, like Cleopatra maybe. Then I'll do some modern songs."

It was an ungentlemanly thing to do, but I reminded Mae that she once appeared with Charlie McCarthy in a Garden of Eden scene on radio that created more havoc than Orson Welles' famous "Martian Invasion" broadcast.

"I was a victim of circumstances that time," she replied. "I didn't want to do that show, but they offered me $5,000 which was unheard of in those days (circa 1939). Anyway, all I said was "C'mon up some time, and I'll let you play in my woodpile.

"Since Charlie is a wooden dummy, I thought that was a funny line. I think some people just got excited because it was on a Sunday."

With that, Mae strolled over to her white-and-gold baby grand piano, sat down, and began beating out a boogie-woogie tune she'd written herself.

After she had finished it, I reluctantly decided to leave.

"I don't think my public would want me to change, even for TV, do you?"

"No, I'm sure they wouldn't," I said.

"Goodbye, and c'mon up again, wontcha," Mae called.

I'm tellin' you gals, you'd better get the ol' man to turn in that TV set on a nice radio before it's too late.

'54 Upturn Predicted By Banker

An upturn in the national economy that will bring the last quarter of 1954 up to the record level of 1953 was predicted Friday by David Rockefeller, senior vice president of the Chase National bank of New York, on a Denver visit.

Rockefeller said in an interview that the decline in the gross national production this year has so far amounted to only 3½ pct. from 1953. The difference, he said, can primarily be accounted for by the fact that inventories rose steadily in 1953—so that this year dealers bought less from the manufacturers.

By July, he estimated, most jobbers will have reduced their inventories to the point where they must begin re-ordering to keep up with sales.

FAVORABLE FACTORS

Favorable factors in the economy "far outweigh" the negative signs, Rockefeller said. Among the favorable signs he listed:

Housing construction, which in terms of new starts is "better than expected."

Construction of major public works, roads and schools by city and state governments.

Continuing high demand for services and for rental housing.

The reduction in income taxes, which will free money for buying more consumer goods.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Against these promising signs for a growing economy Rockefeller said the slump in textiles and in consumer durables (automobiles, television sets, etc.) must be balanced.

Rockefeller said he believed the Eisenhower administration has "taken the necessary steps" to bolster the economy against effects of the drop in post-Korean defense spending.

The government moved "positively and effectively," he said, in reversing the "tight money" policy, and in liberalizing credit through lowered federal reserve interest rates, lower reserve requirements to banks, and open market bond purchases.

Six Rio Grande Railroaders Retired

Six more Denver & Rio Grande Western railroad employes have been granted annuities under provisions of the Railroad Retirement Act, it was announced Friday.

They are: Ernest R. Wall, 950 S. Josephine St.; Harvey W. Carey, 643 Osceola St.; Loreto De Julio, 4557 Bryant St

'STRANGE SILENCE' FROM NBC ON McCARTHY IMBROGLIO RILES CBS

The CBS high command feels that NBC has backed away from the McCarthy vs. networks controversy and has left Columbia pretty much to shift for itself in carrying on the battle. It's known that Ed Murrow and the CBS high level are more than a little miffed over the "strange silence" from the NBC camp in its tv treatment —or lack of it—in carrying the anti-McCarthy torch.

What particularly distresses CBS is the fear of a "divide and conquer" McCarthy technique which could well bring defeat to the cause of "free" broadcasting. The web realizes all too well the need for a united stand in the issue. As one exec put it: "Certainly NBC should know that if McCarthy licks CBS he'll ride herd on all the networks and all of broadcasting so fast that they won't know what hit them."

While CBS gave extended coverage to Chi Catholic Bishop Sheil's scrathing attack on McCarthy last week, it was more than mildly chagrined over the virtual tv brushoff given the pickup by NBC. Whether Murrow's dining last week with NBC-RCA board chairman David Sarnoff turned on this subject or was related to recurring reports that Gen. Sarnoff continues the drive to swing the commentator over to his network, is still being kicked around by those in the trade who are cognizant of the behind-scenes activities.

Carl Byoir Issue

What brings the CBS "versus" NBC topic to the fore in a rather odd way is Carl Byoir (& Associates), the veteran public relations consultant who coincidentally is adviser to NBC. His name and those of Hollywood producer Louis B. Mayer and Hearst columnist George Sokolsky, as well as several advertising agencies, had figured as aides in last week's film of the McCarthy "answer" to Murrow on "See It Now." Byoir denied that he had advised the Senator, saying that the latter had merely asked him to furnish material relating to the 1917 Russian revolution for incorporation into "See It Now." Byoir is also understood to have repudiated widely distributed reports that he was given a fee for his work. Nevertheless, what struck home was Byoir's official link with NBC and that

Murrow-McC Score

As of the latest CBS compilation, Edward R. Murrow was running ahead of Senator McCarthy by better than 2½ to 1. Exact count is 15,443 for the commentator via phone calls, wires and mail, and 6,018 for McCarthy. New York tally on calls is 5,749 for Murrow, 3,918 for the Senator; Chicago, 1,621 and 288; Los Angeles, 3,391 and 558; Philly, 458 and 175. On wires, Murrow drew 2,043 in his favor, against McCarthy's 657; mail, 2,181 for the CBS'er, 422 for McCarthy.

Meantime, Mutual commentator Fulton Lewis Jr. accused CBS of "rigging" the mail in Murrow's favor via a form postcard returnable to the web at N. Y. headquarters and mailed from Boston and environs. Web said it knows nothing of the one-way postcard campaign, has not included the returns (about 70) in the Murrow column, and would gladly tally them for McCarthy should he need the "extra points."

Weekend Ratings

Liberace, guestarring on the Jimmie Durante "Comedy Hour" Sunday (11) over NBC-TV, drew a 31.2 Trendex against 24.2 for Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" on CBS. ABC-TV's "The Mask" hit 5.1.

Eddie Mayehoff, preeming with "That's My Boy" on CBS Saturday at 10 p. m., rated a 19.4, considered a substantial score against last segment of NBC "Show of Shows," which rang up 29.2.

Directors Still In Chi Deadlock

Chicago, April 13.

Although the Radio-Television Directors Guild has come to terms with the networks in New York on a new two-year pact which will formally be signed when local negotiations are completed here and at other production centres, Chi RTDG bargainers and ABC, NBC and CBS are still deadlocked over wage scales.

Chief stumbling block besides the wrangling over weekly wage minimums in the Guild's attempt to install a fee schedule for local commercial shows. RTDG pact has a fee setup for network shows.

Seven Chi NBC radio directors who two years ankled the Guild to tie up with National Assn. of Broadcast Engineers and Technicians (CIO) are doing a switch and returning to the RTDG fold.

Status of News Writers in TV?

Washington, April 13.

Dispute between Television Writers of America and Authors League of America over inclusion of news writers in the same unit with script writers at ABC, CBS and NBC radio and tv networks will be settled by elections directed last week by the National Labor Relations Board.

Ballots will be taken to determine whether news and script writers at ABC and CBS desire representation by TWA or ALA and its affiliated Radio Writers Guild. Writers at NBC will vote for TWA, ALA and RWG or ALA and Screen Writers Guild.

Board excluded reporters in the public affairs department at CBS from the news and script writers' units. These reporters, it found, obtain tape recordings of interviews for various shows and are listed on the talent payroll.

Army Screens NBC-TV Guatemala Red Rule News Documentary

Army Air Force held a screening yesterday (Tues.) with another skedded tomorrow (Thurs.) on "Guatemala—Red Rule On Our Doorstep," NBC news documentary covering Communist infiltration of the Guatemalan government. HQ Squadron Section of the First Air Force at Mitchell Air Base, N. Y., is employing the 30-minuter, telecast originally on NBC-TV Feb. 14, as part of its information and education program.

Vidpix traces the economic and political factors which swung Guatemala over to the Commie camp. Marshall F. Bannell, web's correspondent there who was expelled with the N. Y. Times' Sydney Gruson, is the narrator and NBC's Joseph C. Harsch the commentator. Pic has been shown to employees by a number of corporations doing business in Latin America.

Another of the net's documentaries, "Berlin, Window on Fear," was supplied to U. S. Army HQ in the German city for orientation of GI's.

Also on the military front is the Army's pacting of Tele-Q Corp.'s prompting system for training films to be made at Camp Gordon, Ga., for Signal Corps use. First to be instructed on its operation for training was Cpl. Robert Jones, who underwent a period of orientation. Tele-Q gives filmakers an on-camera cuer enabling announcer or instructor to look directly into the lens while reading from the device.

web wasn't making any statements on the subject.

McCarthy's "reply" last Tuesday was a combination Commie-linked attack on the man (Murrow) who furnished the time as offered on the original Murrow telecast of March 9 and an unrelated pitch on the Red-hot question, including an allegation that there had been an 18-month "deliberate delay" by the U. S. in the development of the H-bomb. This quickly took the play away from McCarthy vs. Murrow as such and got into the realm of Administration and global affairs, with bigwigs from President Eisenhower down, and major newspapers across the country, giving the lie to the "delay" statement.

Murrow's reply to the Senator was ready at 11 p.m. Tuesday and was put on the air immediately after the Badger legislator's denunciation of the analyst. Said Murrow in a seven-page statement: "Senator McCarthy's reckless and unfounded attempt to impugn my loyalty is just one more example of his typical tactic of attempting to tie up to Communism anyone who disagrees with him." H said that he now joins the "distinguished list" (of bigleague newspapers and General George C. Marshall) under McCarthy's attack. He then answered the Senator point by point, including Murrow's alleged membership in the IWW, which he denied, and the favorable appearance of his name in books and the leftwing press (especially the Daily Worker).

Murrow concluded: "With his massive research on me the Senator could not even get my relationship with CBS straight. He repeadedly referred to me as the Educational Director of the Columbia Broadcasting System, a position I have not held for 17 years."

CBS itself issued a 200-word statement making no reference to McCarthy and championing its No. 1 commentator merely by citing the record of his achievements. "CBS subscribes fully to the integrity and responsibility of Mr. Murrow as a broadcaster and as a loyal American," it declared.

Murrow had only one answer above all others: "I went into this thing consciously."

For the Record

Edward R. Murrow is about to "taint" cadets of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, with the Government's consent. On April 25 he'll lecture at the Academy as the fourth and final talk in a series on national security sponsored by the Cadet Forum and Lecture Committee. Other speakers in the series were Bernard M. Baruch (Nov. 22), former Ambassador Chester Bowles (April 11) and coming up is Gen. Lucius Clay (April 24). Not exploited in the announcement is that April 25 is the CBS commentator's birthday—his 46th.

Before his historic March "See It Now" versus Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, Murrow had received five honorary degrees: LL.D., Washington State College, U. of North Carolina, and Muhlenberg; Doctor of Humanities, Rollins College and Temple U. Alfred I. DuPont Award—twice.

Before his anti-McCarthy stand, Murrow was recipient of the Overseas Press Club Award five times and the George Foster Peabody citation four times. Overseas Press made it six after March 9 and Peabody made it five today (Wed.). There were a number of other awards before last month, including Sidney Hillman Foundation Prize, announced Feb. 24 and ritualized March 31, for his Lt. Milo J. Radulovich and Indianapolis "stories" on "See It Now."

The post-"See It" accolades for Murrow:

Russwurm Award for "outstanding achievement in making possible a richer conception of democratic principles and in tribute for upholding those highest traditions considered as the ideals of the American way of life" (American Newspaper Publishers Assn.).

National Award of the Philadelphia Fellowship Commission: "His penetrating and objective reports on the universal human quest for security with dignity and freedom inspire countless people to work for social justice, with a quickened hope of achieving it in their time. Who upholds America's traditions of full and impartial investigation, fair play and innocence until proved guilty; and courageously presents controversial issues without fomenting personal animosities, without confusing evil with evil-doers. Who articulates the prayers of faithful Americans that in this insecure world we shall hold fast to the ideals of human dignity, equality and freedom by which America has grown to greatness."

Newspaper Guild: A second award, this time the highest in the field of public affairs, for "distinguished contributions to the adult and responsible use of broadcasting as a major medium of information and enlightenment for the American people." (Also includes "Person to Person.")

Tau Kappa Alpha, national college honor society in speech: "Speaker of the Year."

N.Y. State Speech Assn: "Outstanding excellence in the preparation and oral presentation of news events and special features through the media of radio and television during the year 1953."

Announced just before the "See" telecast; Doctor of Humane Letters from Hamilton College: "For the intelligence, honesty and clarity with which he has been broadcasting the news since 1938 and for the programs with which he has made history a living and personal thing" (to be awarded June 6).

Advertising Club of N.Y. (April 21).

Federation of Jewish Philanthropies: Special award for "splendid achievement in radio and television during 1953."

Student Council Award of College of the City of N.Y. (next month).

Current citations from publications: Radio-TV Mirror; TV Guide —to "See It Now," one of three Gold Medal Awards; TV-Radio Life—for "This Is Berlin" on "See It."

Honorary membership (with David Sarnoff and Andrew White) in Tau Alpha Sigma, frat of tv arts and sciences.

ABC YANKS 4 STRIPS, SUBS JACK GREGSON

In an allout effort to get its weekly 8-9 p.m. strip out of the sustaining doldrums, ABC Radio is junking its entire schedule of four quarter-hour strips and is substituting a musical variety show, featuring Jack Gregson for the hour-long five-a-week period. Switch takes place May 3.

Involved in the revamp are "Three-City Byline," "Sammy Kaye," Hollywood Starway and "Mike Malloy," with Kaye the only show ever hitting the black column via a shortterm sponsorship by Bur lington Mills some time back: AB charted the quarter-hour setup las fall with hopes of bringing i smaller advertisers and as a co tiguous rate attraction, but nothin came of it.

New program, "The Jack Gre son Show," has Peggy Ann Ellis a femme vocalist and a combo hea ed by Bobby Hackett. Show wil use other ABC staffers for specia features. Same show was on th web in the afternoons last fall a the "warmup" segment for Marti Block before he moved over fro WNEW, N. Y. Gregson also ha dles an early morning deejay sho on WABC, the web's N. McCarthy's Logic

The junior senator from Wisconsin was in his usual form Tuesday night in his reply to CBS Broadcaster Edward R. Murrow. Mr. Murrow had charged that Senator McCarthy's actions had "given considerable comfort to the enemy."

Mr. McCarthy did not discuss those actions which included his attacks on the State Department, the U. S. Army and our allies, but he came back with an offensive-defense, accusing Mr. Murrow of following the Communist line by attacking McCarthy. Since Mr. McCarthy did not make this discovery until after Mr. Murrow had criticized him, it appears that the McCarthy thesis is that since the Communists attack him, anybody who dares speak critically of him must be a Communist or a Communist sympathizer.

The McCarthy logic as revealed in his speech runs in a short, clear line from an incontestible premise to an absurd conclusion, as follows:

(1) Communism is a bad and dangerous thing; (2) it has made its greatest gains by infiltrating other governments; (3) it has infiltrated the U. S. government, and this infiltration has caused us to lose China, delay preparations to manufacture the H-bomb and brought on our heads the grave difficulties in which we find ourselves, that is to say, treason at home rather than aggression abroad is responsible for our present, painful situation; (4) one man has stood up manfully against this treason and his name is Joseph McCarthy; (5) he has, while saving the nation, been attacked by Communist organs; (6) therefore anybody who criticizes the savior of their country is either a Communist or is playing the Communist game, and (7) this includes Edward R. Murrow.

The lapse in this logic is not difficult to discern. Because McCarthy is anti-Communist, it does not follow that anyone who attacks him is pro-Communist. A great many people in the United States believe that McCarthy by his irresponsible and indiscriminate attacks on patriotic personages is doing more harm than good, and they are critical of him for it, but that does not make them pro-Communist.

Senator McCarthy's logic is reminiscent of the brand used by Mussolini and Hitler to ward off attacks on themselves in their rise to power. It is its own reductio ad absurdum. If most of the people in the country are critical of the junior senator from Wisconsin, as the polls indicate, then the majority of the American people must be in favor of Communism. If this logic applies to newspapers and politicians, then what must be said of the Washington Post, the New York Times, Secretary of State Dulles, Vice President Nixon and President Eisenhower? Both parties and almost everybody must be tainted with treason. Such is the absurd end of the McCarthy logic.

To quite a few Americans McCarthy looks more and more like a watchdog which has gotten so he can't tell a burglar from a member of the family, and so goes around biting everybody who happens to get in his way.

Secretary of Defense Wilson says the H-bomb is "unbelievable." But somebody in Alice in Wonderland said you could believe anything if you only practiced believing a few minutes a day.

Reiterated Welcome

It is good news that plans for P. Lorillard Co.'s multimillion dollar plant in Greensboro have assumed definite shape, that actual construction work will be started within a relatively few weeks and that it will likely be in operation within 18 months.

It develops too that the facility will cost more than originally revealed. As we recall original estimate was for $7,000,000. But figures given by Board Chairman Herbert A. Kent at his company's annual stockholders' meeting in New York raised that figure to $10,000,000 with $3,000,000 more to be spent on equipment.

This new total emphasized the size, efficiency, modernness and meaning of the new plant to Greensboro and surrounding territory. Obviously it will give employment to hundreds of persons, feed a large pay roll into our business and economic stream and add to Greensboro's undergirding of diversified industry. Primary results, needless to say, will be to make this city a real tobacco center and to have an immediate influence upon the Greensboro tobacco market.

The Daily News, highly pleased over the outlook, merely wishes again to tell Lorillard officials how happy the community is over its selection for their expansion activities and to assure them that they are particularly gratified over the prospect of greeting them in the very near future as friends, neighbors and fellow Greensboroughers.

'Dirty Politics'

Senatorial Candidate W. Kerr Scott spoke some words here the other night that we would like to call to the attention of citizens who profess a low opinion of politics or who are indifferent about voting.

The former Governor was talking to the Hamilton Lakes Civitan Club. Before he got into what was called a "price and alarm" campaign speech, he had some words about "dirty politics technique." The part of Scott's reported remarks which interested us most dealt, not with "dirty politics," but with what the people can do about it.

Contrary to what some may think, to use Scott's own quoted words, "politics in itself is not dirty." The fault is not with politics as an abstract proposition but with those who practice it on a low, rather than high, level. We have dirty politics when individuals get away with an attitude that any means justify the end. And the more complacement the citizenship is about such practices, the easier it is for such politicians to get away with it. By the same token, the extent of "dirty politics" is in direct proportion to the active interest of citizens generally in political affairs.

All too many citizens, we fear, share the attitude reflected by a frequently expressed opinion. It goes something like this: Politics is a dirty business and, therefore, I'll have nothing to do with it. Such an attitude ignores the fact that "dirty politics" thrives on the apathy and indifference of informed and intelligent citizens. It gives the green light to questionable, as well as unscrupulous, political activity.

Politics is defined as the science and art of government. Whether it is good or bad depends in the final analysis upon the interest and participation of citizens. Let's remember that when we talk about "dirty politics."

Civilization's Gain

The reader may be surprised to know that imports of castor oil into the United States are running at record high levels, despite the fact that only a few sticklers for the remedies of the past take the stuff any more.

Penicillin and the other wonder drugs notwithstanding, the Department of Agriculture reports 63,569 tons of castor oil, about 205,248,000 teaspoonful (ugh!), imported in 1953, or 14 per cent more than was imported in 1952. Comparatively little of the stuff nowadays is used medicinally, however. Most of it goes for lubricating machinery and for other industrial uses.

As between castor oil and penicillin to cure what ails you, we find it hard to choose. The former, true enough, blends all the evil tastes of this world into one horrible concentrate. But the latter, in its method of being administered, always reminds one of the time he sat down on a bumble bee.

Taking everything into consideration, however, we're glad castor oil is not the cure-all today that it was when we were growing up. Certainly the abandonment of castor oil as the sure fire remedy for whatever ills of the flesh overtook folks must go down as one of the great advances of civilization. And if you don't think so, you must never have had to take the stuff.

A Letter To Joe

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Senator:

We are pleased to see in the newspapers that Roman Catholic Bishop Bernard J. Sheil of Chicago spoke out very strongly against you in a speech at the international education conference of the United Auto Workers Union, and we wonder what you are going to do about it.

May we suggest that you not forget that consistency is a virtue. And inasmuch as it is your practice to "prove" that anyone who doesn't like you or your methods is a Communist, as you sought to do in your recent hassle with Edward R. Murrow, you should be true to your tactics and start digging up the dirt on the bishop.

After all, the bishop used some pretty strong words when he said that you are "undermining" American freedoms, that you are playing a "shell game" with the American people and that "although the church takes no position, and will not, on such matters of public controversy, the church does take a position in lies, calumny, the absence of charity and calculated deceit."

Moreover, that was a thrust hard to ignore when the bishop said: "If someone were to tell me that the masters of the Kremlin inspired this burlesque to distract us from our real dangers and keep us from taking effective anti-Communist measures, I'd have half a mind to believe him."

So there's your challenge, senator. In deciding what to do about it, you are up against a problem of sizable proportions.

On the one hand you must consider the fact that the Roman Catholic Church, your own church, is absolutely uncompromising in its opposition to communism, and that the bishop, although he was not speaking for the church but as an individual, must have been reflecting something of the church's own attitude because his whole outlook is necessarily influenced by the ecclesiastical atmosphere in which he has been trained and in which he lives.

On the other hand, you must consider your own basic premise that (1) McCarthy opposes communism; (2) Therefore, anyone who opposes McCarthy is a Communist.

Naturally, we don't know what you'll do about it, but on second thought may we suggest that perhaps the best thing to do would be for you to remain absolutely quiet about it in the hope that people will forget what a predicament it puts you in? To hasten their forgetfulness, you might start a new investigation to divert their attention, such as "proving" that the Boy Scouts, for instance, are really young Commies in disguise.

Sincerely,

The Greensboro Record.

Voice Of The People

Case For The Officers

Editor, The Record:

Reading The Record of April 5, I find the article headed: "Matter for Investigation." I wonder if this Greensboro citizen who was provoked by the stopping of a teen-age speeder has ever been a witness to the overtaking and apprehension of a car that is being driven at a very high rate of speed in a reckless and careless manner.

To overtake a car that is being driven at the admitted rate of 75 miles per hour, the pursuing officers would have to drive their car closer to 100 miles an hour than 75 m.p.h., I understand this was stated in said article "A Merry Chase," of which lasted for quite a few miles. In driving this fast rate of speed plus the time element involved, without a doubt these officers were in a very highly nervous state of mind when the person in question was finally overtaken and apprehended.

These men that work day and night in all kinds of weather, under all kinds of conditions, that we call law enforcement officers have a life to lose and a family to make fatherless just the same as any other person does. We as citizens are so quick to criticize when, and if, one of them make a so-called mistake.

But we never give these men a slap on the back and thank them for the wonderful things they all do for each of us. It seems that the father of this boy and the proper officials should be the proper ones to settle this issue. If there is an issue involved.

So often we as people should keep our personal thoughts to ourselves instead of trying to make a public issue of something that does not concern us in the least.

This article also states that publicity given the trial reported that Judge James B. Wolfe made no comment about the officers' conduct. I think that Judge Wolfe did exactly right. Wouldn't you think after hearing the evidence given in this case, that if these officers had not been justified in this act the judge would have had some comment?

As to the silence of the officials concerned so far as the community itself is concerned That too is as it should be. Why, may I ask should Chief Jeter Williamson make publi any statement concerning this matter? The things should be handled by the proper of cials and surely not by the general public

The article also states—and I quote, "L enforcement officers are expected to exer restraint regardless of provocation; and t have the responsibility to use only such f as is necessary."

It seems that according to the evid given, that is exactly what they did.

After an admitted rate of 75 mile hour, running through a road-block, and several miles of careless and reckless d he was finally stopped.

Then after making a gesture of th up his arms, he was slapped. How, ask, did this officer know whether he was about to be struck down; bodily harm inflicted upon him.

I say a good job has been done. They should be thanked for appr such a speed law violator.

So I say, Mr. Provoked Citizen these officers of the law on a few they make in the line of duty. Se self the kind of people they ha with, the dangers they encounte or night they are on duty.

If you will, I don't think yo easily provoked after you yo these dangers.

Pro-Communist Study:

'Seminar' in Russia

By E. F. TOMPKINS

HERE lie two brochures issued by or for the Soviet Government to drum up student trade for the Communist "American Summer School in Moscow" in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

One pamphlet advertises the 1933 session. The other is devoted to the 1935 Seminar. In both years, Edward R. Murrow—Columbia Broadcasting System's anti-McCarthyite—is officially listed as a member of an American "Advisory" group. More will be heard of this, as the McCarthy Committee has original and authentic copies of the documents, and Mr. Murrow himself has compelled the Committee to make proper use of them.

Seminar's Goals

These booklets—to which Mr. Murrow obviously gave his personal sponsorship—contain some interesting texts. The 1933 issue, titled "The First Russian Seminar," has a passage headed "Seminar Aims." It says:

"The Russian Revolution has brought on one of the greatest social upheavals of all times. Socialism has been given microscopic trials before, but never on such a Gargantuan scale. Now, in our own times and under our own eyes, the world's most important experiment in Communism is taking place. The inspirational opportunities for study and observation are unlimited.

"Would you like to have been an observer during the French Revolution? The present opportunity in Russia is of equal significance. The First Russian Seminar will take advantage of this opportunity. . . .

"To the thoughtful American citizen, anxious to learn the utmost possible about the ways and means of improving our present civic-economic organization, the First Russian Seminar will make a strong appeal.

"The itinerary is comprehensive."

That ballyhoo contained a little lie along with the big ones.

The "comprehensive" itinerary in Russia was only a few side-trips under the leadership of Intourist, the official Soviet travel agency, to some tourist show-off places.

And what would Americans have learned about improving our "civic-economic organization"?

Would they have learned how "brainwashing" is done and purges are executed? Would they have learned how to starve five million farmers and how to condemn fifteen million political opponents to hard labor and slow death in slave camps?

If not that, what would American students and educators have learned at Mr. Murrow's First Russian Seminar?

Advisory Committee

In any event, the American dupes had American as well as Russian guidance. The 1933 brochure said:

"Leaders chosen for the most part from the Advisory Committee . . . will accompany the Seminar and supplement the general sight-seeing programs with special lectures, talks and informal discussions."

Following are the names of the American "Advisory Committee" in 1933:

Stuart Chase, New York City; Kenneth Conant, Associate Professor of Architecture, Harvard University; Samuel H. Cross, Assistant Professor of Slavic Languages and Literature, Harvard University; Henry W. L. Dana, Cambridge; George M. Day, Professor of Economics and Sociology, Occidental College; Samuel N. Harper, Professor of Russian Language and Institutions, The University of Chicago; Henry I. Harriman, President, United States Chamber of Commerce; Bruce C. Hopper, Assistant Professor of Government, Harvard University; Walter W. Hyde, Professor of Greek and Ancient History, University of Pennsylvana; Edward R. Murrow, Assistant Director, Institute of International Education, Inc., New York City Frank Nowak, Professor of Slavic History Boston University; Grove Patterson, Editor of the Toledo Blade, Toledo; D. C. Poole School of Public and International Affairs Princeton University; Geroid T. Robinson, Associate Professor of History, Columbia University; Tredwill Smith, New York City; Whiting Williams, Cleveland.

Congress Due to Pass Anti-Communist Law

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

WASHINGTON: The enactment of legislation outlawing Communism in the United States, before the mid-Summer adjournment of Congress, will knock from under the New Deal one of the main campaign issues on which it has been depending to divide the Republican Party in the Congressional elections.

With Communism made a statutory crime the 20-year bi-partisan battle to expose the menace of Red Fascism in this country will automatically pass from the realm of raucous controversy into the calm field of official law-enforcement by the Federal Government.

From the date of the enactment of a statute putting any form of totalitarianism preaching the overthrow of the American form of government outside the protection of American law, the political issue of "McCarthyism," as the left-wingers and parlor pinks call it—meaning the provocative personality of the Wisconsin Senator—will vanish into thin air.

Time for Legislation

So far as the Communist conspiracy is concerned, the period of Congressional investigation is clearly nearing an end. The case against it has been proved up to the hilt. The period of constructive legislation is at hand.

The American people are thoroughly convinced of the existence of the Communist conspiracy. The question with them is no longer "McCarthyism," but effective legal measures to deal with that conspiracy.

The great political issue of the coming campaign for Congress will then become President Eisenhower's foreign and domestic policies to protect the United States from Communism at home and abroad, and safeguard the economic welfare of the people in the transition period that began with the end of the Korean war.

Did Dulles Tell The Truth On Indo-China?

The drift toward war is taking on momentum. The straw at which the hopeful grasp is the President's statement that we will not go it alone. But only a few weeks ago he was saying that we would not intervene altogether. The Secretary of State and not Mr. Eisenhower seems to be at the helm, and Mr. Dulles is building up support for unilateral intervention if necessary. His statement to the House Foreign Affairs Committee was inflammatory and may have been unreliable. Our authority for casting doubt on his word is the curious and little noticed contradiction between what he said on Monday and what Senator Kennedy (D., Mass.) next day told the Senate. The difference between their versions of what is happening in Indo-China is crucial.

Mr. Dulles said the Chinese "are coming awfully close" to active intervention in China. He claimed to have an intelligence report which said that Chinese officers were advising the Viet Minh attackers at Dien Bien Phu and Chinese soldiers manning the radar and anti-aircraft guns. It would be interesting to know whether the Pentagon considers this report reliable, and whether the source is our own intelligence or Chiang Kai-shek's. Obviously Kennedy, who is remarkably well informed on Indo-China, does not believe this because he told the Senate next day, "I think the Senate should know whether the call by the United States for united action is due to the fact that the Vietminh forces are perhaps now stronger than the Vietnam forces, or whether it is due to the extent of the Chinese assistance to the Vietminh."

Kennedy Disagrees With Dulles

If Secretary Dulles is to be believed, the strength of the Vietminh is due to greater Chinese assistance. Senator Kennedy disagreed. "I believe," he told the Senate, "it is the former. I believe it is because the forces of the Vietminh have become so powerful that they are pressing hard on the French, and therefore it is to assist in a civil war that the call for united action has been made." This power, as was noted in the Senate debate, is a power of spirit and not of numbers. Senator Mansfield (D., Ohio), who also knows Indo-China at first hand, pointed out that the rebels are winning though outnumbered almost two to one; they have 291,000 men, as against the 591,000 men marshalled by the French.

Senator Kennedy's reply to this was a grave warning few if any papers reported. These were his words. "If the United States intervenes," he said, "in order to save the present situation, prior to a massive intervention by the Chinese from the North—and it appears that such intervention may be necessary on the present basis because the Vietminh seem to be winning—the Chinese will send in additional manpower, and our intervention would be useless."

The choice would then be between another bloody repetition of the Korean struggle or "massive retaliation" against China, the open door to World War III. Yet aside from Stennis (D., Miss.) and Dirksen (R., Ill.) there were no voices raised against intervention. The Democrats are if anything more ready to line up for it than the Republicans, except for Knowland (R., Cal.) and the other China Lobby Senators. The only newspaper of importance which has spoken up against intervention is the Chicago Tribune.

Bi-Partisanship for Repression, Too

The gravity of the international situation is matched by that of the domestic. No one who heard the President speak last Monday night and the McCarthy answer to Murrow Wednesday night could fail to be struck by the contrast between the well-meaning but intellectually feeble weakling who is President and the evil genius who is struggling to wrest from him control of the party and the country. The synthetic soft-soap of Mr. Eisenhower's well-drilled recitation is a poor substitute for leadership. While he somewhat disparaged talk of a Red menace at home his Attorney General was preparing a quite different sort of speech and is rushing through Congress a program of repressive legislation which must endanger every citizen who has ever been active in social protest or reform. The celerity with which the House moved toward passage of the wire-tap bill is indicative. The Republicans are out to make a record of "anti-Communist" legislation and the Democratic leadership is as anxious to be "bipartisan" for repression as for war.

The developing atmosphere is conducive to the panic and paranoia on which McCarthy fattens. Had it not been for a question by Miss May Craig of the Guy Gannett newspapers and the quick reaction of the Boston press, his own adherent, Sears, might have been chosen to investigate his row with the Army. A reactionary lawyer from Tennessee has been substituted, but McCarthy himself is off to fresh fields and pastures new, as in his extraordinarily mendacious charge of an 18-month delay on the H bomb. This seems to be a lie made up out of whole cloth, like his assertion that Murrow was once a Wobbly; its audacity is breath-taking. This ill-shaven man with the veiled eyes is on his way to fresh triumphs; the possibility of his some day coming to power must be taken very seriously; the hierarchy of the Catholic Church, as indicated by Cardinal Spellman's approving presence at his address to the New York police Holy Name Society, is more openly lining up behind this unscrupulous adventurer. Besprinkled with a little holy water, he may be an American Franco, another devoted son of the Church, ready to make America unsafe for heretics.

. . . An Addled Week In Our Addled Congress

was considerably annoyed when Mr. McCormack slipped into a stump speech on the evils of Communism before a single Republican could say Karl Marx. Mr. McCormack testified that he had been trying to outlaw Communists as far back as 1934. "As you remember," Mr. McCormack reminisced, "the activities of a gentleman named Hitler were very prominent in those years. Hiding behind them were the activities of atheistic communism." In a passage which would have delighted Cotton Mather, Mr. McCormack warned of the Communists, "We are not dealing with ordinary human beings." It was a little disappointing that he did not bring with him any stereopticon slides showing Elizabeth Gurley Flynn flying over Foley Square on a broomstick during the last full moon.

A SUBVERSIVE NAMED NORMAN THOMAS appearing on behalf of the notorious Americain Civil Liberties Union followed Mr. McCormack on the witness stand and tried hard, but without success, to confuse the committee. Mr. Thomas said he had been fighting Communism long before that became fashionable, but urged the committee not to outlaw the Communist party. He said that while the Communist movement is "indeed conspiratorial," outlawry would merely eliminate "that part of the communist movement which holds conventions, adopts platforms, nominates or endorses candidates, is engaged in a legitimate and essential feature of our democratic way of life." Thomas said that in the Fort Monmouth inquiry one scientific worker had been suspended because he had been a member of the Young People's Socialist League between 1936 and 1939. "In view of such circumstances as these," Thomas declared, with a flash of his old-time fire, "I should expect our reactionaries and neo-fascists to do their utmost to stretch a bill outlawing the Communist party into the outlawry of any party which might believe that waterpower belongs to the nation and should not be turned over to private utility companies."

The committee members sat there with the furrowed brows of men confronting a profound problem. But they could not understand how the witness could brand the Communist party as bad and yet plead for its right to live. It was obvious from their questions that Jefferson has been dead a long time. If a man was a burglar, one committee member suggested, should he not be outlawed? Thomas objected to "oversimplified analogies in dealing with complex problems." If a man committed burglary, he countered, arrest him for burglary, but do not pass a law forbidding him to be good to his mother. This was another reference to the legitimate activities of the Communist party, but some committee members seemed startled at the thought that a man could be a Communist and still be good to his mother. Thomas had objected in the course of his testimony to those ads which show Communism and Socialism as two twins, but by the time he had finished it was clear that most committee members felt that Thomas was just like that with the Kremlin.

ONE BIT OF THAT TESTIMONY should have disturbed them. Communism's oldest political antagonist in this country said that he could testify "from my own personal contacts that within recent months there is not more but less understanding of the real evils of communism in the United States, not less but more sympathy with it." Thomas predicted, "The outlawry of the party will strengthen this movement of sympathy among thousands of persons who doubtless will not voice it openly, but whose secret sympathy would, nonetheless, be hurtful to the growth of sound understanding of communism and its threat to freedom."

To most committee members this probably made it seem all the more urgent to pass a law punishing Communism; intellectually the Congress of the United States seems to be full of Romanoffs. The bills would make that task easy; they would enable the government to send people to jail not only for mere ideas but on suspicion that they had the wrong ones. In a time when charges of communism are made as loosely as they are today, the dangers should be obvious.

One bill would make it a crime to collaborate with an "adherent" of a foreign nation to "weaken" the government of the United States and Thomas wanted to know what happened if he had a talk with the French Ambassador and then made a statement opposing EDC. Would he be guilty of a crime? Had there been a roll call, there would have been a majority for conviction.

IT WAS A BAD WEEK FOR HAROLD LASKI. Tuesday morning there was a tantalizing item on the ticker. The Jenner committee (of which Mr. Thomas' colleagues on the ACLU executive think so highly) was about to interrogate Jonathan Mitchell, once on the New Republic and New York World, about Harry Dexter White and Henry Morgenthau. It looked like hot stuff coming up. What came up was this: In 1939 Mitchell wrote some speeches for Morgenthau on the need for venture capital. The speeches were not delivered. In 1944 Mitchell went to the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton where he stayed for four years. There he heard that White had undue influence over Morgenthau and began to suspect that maybe White's influence had blocked those speeches. In 1945 he arranged to have lunch with White. The speeches were not discussed, but Laski's Faith, Reason and Civilization was. Mitchell said White became overwrought and tried to hit him when Mitchell spoke disparagingly of the book. Charles Grimes, the Jenner committee's new Deweyite counsel, depicted the Laski book in cross-examination as a work which held that capitalism and Christianity were dying faiths, to be replaced by Bolshevism (a jazzed up version which would make Laski turn over in his grave). Mitchell was led on to the question: Had not White by his attitude toward the book shown 100 percent acceptance of communism? The witness said the word communism had never figured in the conversation. This was a disappointing denouement to this inquiry ten years later into one dead man's remarks about another dead man's books.

Thereupon while Mitchell sat there looking more and more uncomfortable the committee's research director, Benjamin Mandel, once business manager of the Daily Worker, read a collection of thrice used "documents" into the record. There were selections from Hull's memoirs saying that White had been "emotionally upset" by Hitler's persecution of the Jews and had authored the Morgenthau plan to cripple Germany. The Jenner committee was back on a favorite theme: to rewrite the history of World War II. The outlines of an American Hitler myth were visible. Laski, a Jew, wrote that Christianity and capitalism were finished; White, another Jew, admired him and tried to ruin our main bulwark against Bolshevism. Der Fuehrer was the victim of a plot. The committee seemed to have contacted Goebbels on its ouija board. One document, a translation from an article in War and the Working Class in Moscow showed that at Bretton Woods White was passionate about beating the Russians at volley ball!

THAT SAME NIGHT on the Ed Murrow program, Laski came up again when McCarthy "revealed" that Laski dedicated one of his books to Murrow. If Laski were not dead, there would be a demand for his extradition. This is the mood of our Mad Hatter Congress.

Editorial

Better Go Easy, Joe!

We have delayed deliberately any comment on the Murrow-McCarthy feud until our emotional reaction had been supplanted by a logical, realistic point of view. The charges by Senator McCarthy that Edward R. Murrow was a tool of the Communists and tended to bring aid and comfort to the (enemy) Russians seemed absurd and ridiculous on the face of it. Notwithstanding McCarthy's convincing arguments which seemed to be supported by facts or half-truths, the immediate reaction of many of us was that McCarthy now is assailing everyone who disagrees with him, by calling him a Communist.

Let us not be too quick in assuming that McCarthy's arguments will fall under their own dead weight, and that Murrow will receive a quick acquittal in the eyes of all Americans. The junior senator from the Badger state is shrewd, wily and often seems to know where he is going. Too often he comes out on top as the result of the sheer confusion he creates. There are millions, maybe, who are ready to believe him because he has set himself up as the anti-Red Crusader, self-styled leader of the cause. Those who attack him become vulnerable at once, because the attack can be interpreted as easing pressure on the Communists. President Eisenhower as well as the Columbia Broadcasting system, naturally, have come out in full support of Murrow. Probably the commentator's position can be distorted and twisted by the fact that he has been recognized to some extent in Communist publications. Why? Because he has followed his policy, consistently, to treat all news impartially and impersonally. And he has criticized McCarthy, who of course is one of the Red's chief targets. McCarthy is becoming increasingly dangerous, because it seems he is starting to utilize the theory of "the big lie" supported by "the half truth."

The more his political enemies criticize him, no matter how honestly, the more he becomes martyrized in the eyes of millions who tend to argue with the things he is trying to do.

There are McCarthy's in most every government. The best way to handle them, as a rule, is to give them all the rope they can use. Intoxicated with partial success and lots of publicity, Joe probably will go farther and farther until public opinion falls away completely. Meanwhile, because of his so-called crusade, those who have tended to pooh-pooh the communist threat from within may have been stirred into action BECAUSE of McCarthy's bitter fight. Certainly he has "gone off the deep end" with regard to Murrow and many others he has attacked, but certainly he is more than half-right in his opinion that there still are entirely too many Communists in high places. And they're harder to remove than ulcers, something, incidentally, that surely will start bothering Joe if he keeps getting into hot water.

Three Top Commentators

Edward R. Murrow, who conducts a th outstanding radio commentary in "See It N over CBS, fully deserves the honor that has b given him by the Philadelphia Fellowship C mission. Almost everyone who has heard Morrow's recent discussions of McCarthyism the responsibility of both officials and rank-a file citizens for that malady will surely agree t he has produced "penetrating and objective ports on the universal quest for security w dignity and freedom."

Not long ago Elmer Davis, who broadca over the ABC network, was given the seco annual Lauterbach award by the Authors Gu of America. The award said of Mr. Davis:

He was fearless in his treatment of news He risked the hysteria and passion of the day by speaking on the unpopular side o important public issues. He took his stand in the tradition of Elijah Lovejoy and would not bend to any wind, no matter how strong In a dark day of intolerance he spoke for the bright conscience of America and helped keep alive the American idea of equal jus tice for all irrespective of race, creed or political ideology.

Still another courageous radio newsman a commentator who has held up to highest stan ards is John W. Vandercook, heard over A under auspices of the CIO. Radio and televisi have their ranters and ravers who would r know the country's best interests in bright daylight, but it also has men who recognize fu their responsibility for helping produce an formed public opinion. Edward Murrow, Elm Davis and John Vandercook are three who sta out.

import of cheese from Europe. This has been for the real benefit of only a few hundred cheese processors, and to the disadvantage of hundreds of thousands of farmers. Other special protective devices have been set up for many small fragmentary producer groups at the expense of the major part of our farm population.

Tariff barriers are not purely a one-sided affair. Many other countries within our normal circle of customers are among the grave offenders. There can be no universal reduction, however, unless we take affirmative leadership in pushing for reduction through effective use of programs like the reciprocal trade agreements.

The Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act will come up for extension again in this session of Congress. The extension, without crippling amendments, can be made only with a hard fight. Unless farmers take the lead in arousing congressional opinion, they are likely to receive another blow in the pocketbook. Any single concession of Congress to the protectionist idea will, in the long run, prove costly to agriculture.

The trade issue is, however, bigger by far than a matter of economic benefits to the American farmer. It must be resolved successfully if our overall foreign trade policy is to succeed in the effort to keep the free world mobilized and unified against Communist aggression. Soviet rulers have made it clear that one of the basic tenets of Soviet policy will be to stir up dissension in the free world through trade rivalry. The Communists have already made great progress along that line.

The current disputes over trade with Communist countries are proof. The issue will become even more acute as countries like Japan attempt to establish a self-sufficient economy without American subsidy. The Japanese have traditionally had a large export market in Asia. American policy today is to deny this market where it benefits Communist China or other areas dominated by Soviet Russia. If we deny this traditional trade to Japan, we must either offer them the opportunity for American markets or pay for the difference out of our pockets.

The situation in Japan is typical of that of many other countries that we are working to keep outside the Soviet orbit. Only if these nations are able to earn their own way through competitive business under a free enterprise market can we expect to reduce the cost of American security. Until that reduction in cost comes, the American people can expect to be faced with high military expenditures, high taxes, and unbalanced budgets.

The crucial decision as to whether effective American leadership will be provided in the battle to eliminate world trade barriers must actually be made by the Congress this year. President Eisenhower's Commission to study the trade issue has made its report. The southern farmer who has more at stake in this fight than any citizen from any other American group should make his position clear.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. ABRAHAM J. MULTER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 8, 1954

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, the following editorial entitled "A Poison in Our Affairs," which appeared in the New York Herald Tribune of April 8, 1954, speaks volumes:

A POISON IN OUR AFFAIRS

Many who heard and saw Senator McCarthy's reply to Edward R. Murrow on their TV sets Tuesday evening felt themselves almost physically in the presence of something so hostile to our normal freedoms of thought and debate as to constitute a far greater peril than any from which McCarthy's efforts have ever in fact preserved us.

The Senator did not attempt to reply to the Murrow criticisms; instead, he turned to crush the man who had criticized and disagreed with him under an insinuation that the critic is a Communist, has acted from pro-Communist motives, and in the service of Communist conspiracy, is the "leader of the jackal pack." But it is not the charge alone which was appalling. It was the fact that it was delivered without any substantiation whatever; it was built up by a skillful process of outrageous insinuation, emotional juxtapositions, frequently obvious misrepresentations, and what, in some cases, would seem to have been simple fabrication, as in the unsupported statement that the H-bomb was held up for 18 months, which is something of which no one, not even the President of the United States, had ever heard before.

The entire effort was a demonstration of why McCarthyism has seemed to so many so dangerous a poison in our affairs. These are the means whereby the Senator has terrorized men in high places and low, including the now frightened and fumbling Senators and their committees; these are the means whereby he "proves" his reckless charges and tramples over the rights and dignity of everyone, whether Communist or not, whose victimization will serve his interests. These are the concepts of reason, fairness, and justice which he has introduced into the sufficiently difficult problem of dealing with the real (as opposed to the imaginary) dangers of domestic communism. After that vivid demonstration it was not surprising that the President should declare without hesitation that Mr. Murrow was his friend.

Congressman Doyle Urges Colleagues To Encourage Citizens To Exercise Voting Privilege and Responsibility in Coming Elections

OF

HON. CLYDE DOYLE

OF CALIFORNIA

Monday, March 15, 1954

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Speaker, by reason of unanimous consent heretofore granted me so to do, I make these few extemporaneous remarks about the privilege and duty of participation in American voting processes, and the danger to our beloved Nation if the majority of American citizens do not perform that duty. We as Congressmen can render a fine service in this regard.

Just so long as the majority of the American adulthood become informed and stay well informed, about the affairs of our Nation and in their respective local communities "from the grassroots up," just that long, will our great Nation be strengthening its sinews from day to day. Mr. Speaker, only so long as an increasing majority of the American people participate in shaping their own destiny and the destiny of this Nation by exercising their choice of men and measures at the ballot box, only that long will our constitutional form of government endure. For, it appears as clear as crystal to me that the secret of strength to our American way of life and living is that the clear thinking, patriotic, humble folks of our beloved Nation shall participate individually in making our democracy work at the grassroots of American citizenship.

It is self-evident, therefore, that the voting habits of Americans must be conscientiously shaped by Americans so as to assume the responsibilities of American citizenship. And this very American citizenship assumes the obligation to register for voting and then to actually vote in local, State, and National elections. We Americans must stop being careless in this regard. We must stop being slothful about this voting business. We must systematically work to destroy the citizen apathy toward our election processes which apathy, if extended very much more, will permanently weaken the very foundations of our American constitutional way of life. Truly a minority of the American people must never be charged with the responsibility of determining the destiny of America.

So, I vigorously urge that you and I as United States Congressmen, do our dead-level best to systematically and very determinedly urge every possible qualified person to register to vote—and then to vote at primary elections in their respective States and then later at the November general election.

Looking back at the 1952 elections the record indicates that only 1 out of 2 persons of voting age took time to cast a ballot for President of the United States, while in 1940 nearly 2 voters out of every 3 voted in said election.

I do not now have the time to give statistics. In fact, that is not the purpose of these informal comments. If there is a higher privilege in our American citizenship than the right to vote in a free election, what is it? And, where is there a higher obligation of American citizenship than to vote in our free elections? Is it not a fact that upon our American right to vote at free elections the very foundation of our system of self-government exists?

Mr. Speaker, in these few words I again urge every Member of this great legislative body to be more diligent than ever, in encouraging and informing our electorate, regardless of political party, of the privilege and duty of the American free vote.

In closing, I incorporate a letter, dated March 26, 1954, from the Library of Congress on this subect. Some day later I hope to make further comment, including the matter of making sure that Americans abroad in the military or civilian service also vote. All States should make it so they can do so. There is need of fundamental correction of some of our State election laws in this connection.

The letter follows:

A Timely Look at 35 Years Of Student-Exchange Plan

Tributes of U. S. Leaders Testify to Value Of Institute of International Education

By Fred M. Hechinger

The Institute of International Education this year is celebrating its thirty-fifth birthday. When Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy last week, in passing, tried to apply his brush to the I. I. E., some sinister images may have been conjured up. The truth is that the institute's record points to thirty-five years of constant and invaluable work in international education. This is a good time to review that record and the institute's achievements in the service of the country and the world.

Founded in 1919, with the late Nicholas Murray Butler, then president of Columbia University, as one of its main godfathers, the institute's stated purposes were:

To further international understanding through the two-way exchange of students, technicians, professors and specialists between the United States and "any country of the world wishing to co-operate"; (Quotation is from the official "blueprint.")

To include all fields of study and all areas of the world in such exchanges;

To get scholarships for students who might otherwise not be able to study abroad.

A Good Neighbor

In accordance with its original charter, the institute cannot "create or finance courses, scholarships or educational opportunities." It acts as a clearing house. But, by its very presence, it draws out opportunities and encourages those who can provide the funds. Among its "co-operating contractors" through the years were such government agencies as the Department of State, the Department of the Army and the Marshall Plan administration as well as such corporations as Pan American World Airways, Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), Anaconda Copper, Shell Chemical, General Electric and International Business Machines. Among the messages that acknowledged a job well done are those from Gov. Dewey, Gen. Eisenhower, philosopher Arnold Toynbee and Harry S. Truman.

The I. I. E. record includes many "firsts." Without waiting for governments to act, the institute brought Latin-American students to the United States ahead of the official "Good Neighbor Policy."

Meeting of Minds

Knowing that students are often short of funds, the institute helped establish low fares on ships. Later this led to the now popular "tourist class."

The institute published the first comprehensive list of scholarship opportunities for foreign students in the United States and for Americans abroad.

After the war, the institute co-operated with the Department of the Army to bring to the United States the first large groups of students from Germany, Japan, Austria and the Ryukus, and since the passage of the Fulbright act it has helped in selecting students eligible for those grants.

By 1923 the institute was assisting American colleges to fill teaching vacancies with qualified scholars from abroad; it was the first institution to arrange for debating teams from British universities to meet American teams; as early as 1922 it helped change the immigration rules so that students could enter the country on special visas, outside the regular quotas.

Without Approval

Those who believe that the meeting of men leads to the meeting of minds considered these vital achievements. Sharing this view were such advisers as Henry L. Stimson, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Charles Evans Hughes and John Foster Dulles. Among present board members, under the chairmanship of Arthur A. Houghton jr., president of Steuben Glass, Inc., are such distinguished Americans as Edward R. Murrow, of the Columbia Broadcasting System; Arthur S. Adams, president of the American Council of Education; Juan Trippe, president of Pan American World Airways; Ralph J. Bunche, director of the department of trusteeship, United Nations; Mrs. Millicent C. McIntosh, president of Barnard College.

The institute need not defend any of its past actions in international exchange. Sponsorship of academic and cultural co-operation with any country did not at any time constitute political approval of that country's policy. If co-operation with the summer session at Moscow University in 1934 can now be construed as pro-Communism, then the I. I. E. must at the same time have been pro-Nazi and pro-Fascist, for that year it also exchanged students with Germany and Italy. (Exchanges with Italy and Germany continued until 1941.)

That the Soviets did not consider the summer school a useful instrument of propaganda seemed clear when they unilaterally canceled the 1935 summer course after the students had arrived, giving as their reason that teaching staffs had more important work to do and could not be spared. As a result, according to its 1935 annual report, the institute "severed its connections with the Moscow summer school."

Rapid Growth

In 1930, the institute helped 191 Americans to study abroad in exchange for 170 students from other countries who were placed in American colleges. This year the institute has made similar arrangements for 4,373 persons—3,000 from abroad, the rest Americans going overseas, largely through the good offices of the Fulbright and the Smith-Mundt acts.

In 1928 the I. I. E. began to train foreign students and experts in American business and industrial practices and, by 1929, more than 200 trainees from seven European countries were here under that plan. In 1950 the Army, with I. I. E. help, brought over Japanese leaders and specialists. The State Department was aided in a program for British engineers.

Success Story

In addition to exchange programs, the institute's Information and Counseling Division answers more than 100,000 requests a year, issues pamphlets about education in other countries and circulates its "News Bulletin" magazine to 8,500 subscribers. Regional I. I. E. offices are in Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Houston and Chicago.

Last year the institute agreed to assist in the development of the new Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship program, a plan set up by private sponsors in honor of the President. A new program to bring Spanish students and specialists to the United States is also under way. Altogether the I. I. E. now works with eighty-one countries. All over the world the institute has more than 20,000 "alumni." The Secretary of the High Authority of the European Coal and Steel Community is a Dutch alumnus of 1939. A Greek alumnus has written a dramatization of American independence for the Greek National Radio, and the program was successfully produced.

The list could be continued. In thirty-five years of service to the cause of education and international understanding, the I. I. E. has strenghtened America's prestige and helped Americans to understand the world around them. This is patriotic service at its best.

Way to Medical School

Graduates of 4 City Colleges Achieve High Acceptance Rate

By Judith Crist

In the midst of the educational "application" season—when high school students are applying to colleges and college students are applying to graduate schools—New York City's Board of Higher Education was able to issue a cheerful report about a usually cheerless subject—applications to medical schools.

Graduates of the four city colleges, the board reported last week, are achieving a higher rate of acceptance into leading medical schools than are applicants throughout the country and an even higher rate in the Northeast, where competition is stiff.

The Reasons

The success of the city's pre-medical students, the board believes, must be attributed to a system of professional guidance and counseling instituted in the colleges about ten years ago. The pre-medical advisers themselves, who work with students in City, Hunter, Brooklyn and Queens Colleges, credit the high placement rate to several factors. Chief among them is "the co-operation of the medical schools with the efforts the colleges make to send them properly prepared young men and women and to appraise honestly their personal qualifications for the profession."

They also point, perhaps with modesty, to the country-wide decline in the number of medical school applicants since 1949, mainly because of the end of the veterans' rush to professional schools. In the fall of 1949 there were 24,500 applicants for 6,500 places in medical schools. Three years later there were 16,800 applicants and re-applicants for 7,425 openings.

Encouraging Picture

In 1952, 50 per cent of those applying for the first time throughout the country were accepted. In the Northeast, out of 2,704 applicants, a little more than a third, 988 were admitted.

In spite of this national—and regional—ratio, Prof. Leonard G. Worley, head of the pre-medical counseling staff at Brooklyn College, reported, in 1953, out of thirty pre-medical seniors at that college and six graduates or graduate students recommended by the counselors, thirty—or 83 per cent—were accepted by medical schools. In addition, six students applied on their own and were accepted.

This record is particularly encouraging, Prof. Worley noted, because "it is a well known fact that the greater the number of applicants from a given institution, the smaller is the percentage of those who are successful in gaining admission to professional schools."

City College students also refute this "well known fact," for of sixty-five indorsed by the pre-medical advisers, fifty-one, including two young women, were accepted, giving City a rating of 78 per cent. A number of students were accepted at more than one medical school, including several who gained admission to Harvard, Yale, Cornell and Albany but chose to attend schools closer to home.

Honesty Pays

At Queens College, where eighteen or 72 per cent of twenty-five students recommended by the Committee on Relation to Medical Schools were accepted, Prof. Donald E. Lancefield, chairman, attributed success to the committee's frank appraisal of students. "We believe that the policy of complete honesty pays dividends in the long run in getting our recommendations for the better students taken seriously by the professional schools," he said. The committee "attemps to give a true picture of the applicant as regards his ability, character, personality and our best judgment as to the type of physician the applicant will probably be."

The traditional difficulty for women to gain admission to medical schools is, of course, reflected in Hunter College's report. From 1940 through 1952, Dean Marie K. Gallagher, of the Bureau of Educational and Vocational Guidance, reported an average of ten Hunter girls a year gained admission to one or more medical schools, with the annual figures ranging from three in one year to twenty-three another, a fluctuation which, she said, "we are unable to explain."

Related Fields

Over a three-year period, of eighty-eight Hunter girls for whom recommendations were written by the college's Committee on Medical School Recommendations, thirty-five, or 40 per cent, were accepted.

In 1935 twelve Hunter graduates were admitted to medical schools and during that year there were Hunter alumni at seventeen medical schools in all parts of the country.

A major outgrowth of the pre-medical counseling system, the advisers believe, has been a greatly improved service to those students who fail to gain admission to medical schools or who, because of motivation or scholastic record, are advised against applying. Many of these students, they report, have been successfully placed in such related fields as public health, biochemical research and pharmaceutical research.

*The total applicants represented re-applicants as well; 50 per cent of the first-time applicants were accepted.

News Around the Nation's Campuses

Marginal Notes

Consciousness of the world beyond the United States borders is evident on practically every campus. (The exchange aspect of the matter is covered in the report on the Institute of International Education on this page.) Some of that consciousness comes to the surface in aid drives by students for universities abroad, such as in the "Across the Sea" report below. But there are other indications, and here are a few random samples: Hunter College expects over 600 student delegates to the annual conferexce of the Association of International Relations Clubs. A six-day conference, starting April 19, on "Why the United Nations?" The conference will spend its last day at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y. Columbia University will start an extensive program of East European studies next fall. It's imperative to have American experts on the "Iron Curtain" countries, Columbia says. The University of Rochester is going to launch a new "World Look" program for a better understanding of "the realities" of Asia, the Middle East and Africa—"great regions of the world which have been largely ignored by the American undergraduate curriculum," says Cornelis W. de Kiewiet, Rochester's president. Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., is giving a new course called "Developing International Understanding." It's especially for teachers, on the premise that world understanding can and should start in the public schools. The Association for Childhood Education International agrees: it has put out a forty-eight-page book, "Songs Children Like—Folk Songs from Many Lands," for ages five to twelve. (Price: $1; address: 1200 15th St., N. W., Washington 5.) New York University confirms a trend, saying the Modern Language Association of America finds interest in languages rising. Of all accredited liberal arts colleges 85 per cent demand some foreign language knowledge for the B. A. degree: 30 per cent have a foreign language entrance requirement. Since World War II the American Association of University Women has given awards to over 400 women from other countries to study in America. Last week twenty Danish women replied with a "gratitude award" to an American girl to tour Scandinavia and to study in Denmark. And in London the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission approved awards to the first twelve "Marshall Scholars"—American students who are to get study grants at British Universities in British gratitude for Marshall Plan aid.

Another timely note: Hofstra College, in Hempstead, N. Y., begins "Academic Freedom Week" today. It's to be the beginning of recurring discussions on that theme. The idea came from the National Student Association.

Recently Phi Lambda Theta, women's honorary education society at Teachers College, Columbia University, held a conference. The theme: "Man's Right to Knowledge and the Free Use Thereof . . . Without Discrimination as to Sex." Luncheon was served in the Men's Faculty Club. Which seems to score a point. F. M. H.

Across the Sea

Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., announces that its students are conducting a book drive in up-state New York for the benefit of students at Athens College, Greece. Earlier this term the Hamilton College Choir broadcast a musical salute to the college in Greece over the facilities of the Voice of America.

Guidance Meeting

The National Vocational Guidance Association, a division of the American Personnel and Guidance Association, today begins its annual convention at the Hotel Statler in Buffalo to last through Thursday. Theme of the meetings: "Community Teamwork in Guidance."

Another Supporter

Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, announces that Thomas J. Watson, chairman of the Board of Directors of the International Business Machines Corp., has joined the group of American leaders sponsoring the college's ninety-fifth anniversary fund drive for $100,000.

Grants Offered

Pace College is offering ten new full-tuition liberal arts scholarships to majors in English and the social sciences entering the college in fall. The new grants have been established because of growing demand by business and industry for men and women with broad educational background in executive training and development programs. Examinations will be given on April 24. Applications are to be made through high school principals or guidance counselors.

New Degree

Pratt Institute, in Brooklyn, will offer a program leading to the degree of Master of Science in Art Teacher Education, beginning next September.

PRINCE PHILIP'S SHARE IN THE TOUR TRIUMPH

On the left, American broadcaster Ed Murrow. On the right, Senator McCarthy's Senate Investigating Committee. For once, it is McCarthy (second on left), who is under attack, as Murrow exposes his methods in investigating a former State Department official, Reed Harris. Murrow tells viewers: "Senator McCarthy proved only that Harris once wrote a bad book, which Americans proved by not buying it twenty-two years ago. That's what happens eventually to all bad ideas"

HALF AN HOUR THAT ROCKED McCARTHY

Newspaper in hand, Murrow analyses the case made by McCarthy (right) against General Zwicker for not prosecuting an alleged army Communist. After a "rebuke" by President Eisenhower, he says, "Senator McCarthy claimed that only the Left-wing press criticized him on the Zwicker case." Murrow quotes the Milwaukee Journal: "The line must be drawn and defended or McCarthy will become the government." The press is three to one against the senator, claims Murrow

McCarthy (left) is accused by Murrow of using methods that he knows may destroy the Republic. Murrow quotes with approval McCarthy's: "If this fight against Communism is made a fight between the two great political parties, one will be destroyed, and the Republic cannot endure very long as a one-party system." A few months later McCarthy was declaring: "The issue between Republicans and Democrats is clearly drawn . . . twenty years of treason"

THESE pictures tell the story of the thirty-minute television broadcast that called the bluff of the American Communist-hunter Senator Joseph McCarthy. ILLUSTRATED presents them exclusively from the film of the broadcast. Their central figure is a deceptively nonchalant, mild-mannered reporter named Edward Roscoe Murrow.

When Murrow sat before the television cameras of the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York and flayed the Wisconsin senator whose witch-hunting methods in his Senate Investigating Committee are said by many to have dragged down American liberty, he did a brave thing. He sparked off a rebellion. Within twenty-four hours, it was clear that many Americans had had enough of Senator McCarthy's methods. Murrow had raised the flag. Soon it was clear that he was leading an army.

Murrow spoke to an estimated audience of forty million Americans at ten thirty in the evening. With great deliberation, after explaining that he was reading from a script because of the serious issues involved, he scourged McCarthy in words and pictures. No one in America had had the courage to speak out so forthrightly and effectively before.

The first telegrams and calls came in while he was still on his way home. All the next day the avalanche continued and before it stopped thirty thousand letters and twelve thousand calls and telegrams had been counted. They were found to be overwhelmingly in favour of Murrow. This flood of support was regarded by Columbia as quite phenomenal in view of the well-known McCarthy tactic of "packing the post" when key issues are at stake.

Why did Murrow undertake his crusade? Because, he said, McCarthy had repeatedly overstepped the line between investigation and persecution. He had obliterated the distinction between the internal and the external threat of Communism. He used half-truths.

Once before in his life, Murrow undertook a crusade—on Britain's behalf. When Hitler's bombs were raining down on London, he believed in Britain. His on-the-spot broadcasts called "This is London" became a feature of American life. Yet Murrow, the farm boy from North Carolina, now forty-six and the father of

The McCarthy story is brought up to date by a film which Murrow includes in his TV programme. It shows McCarthy with his colleague Roy Cohn, who has been accused of threatening the army authorities. Smoothly insistent, Murrow recalls a senator's charge against McCarthy of perjury and hoaxing the Senate. McCarthy sued, but has now dropped the case, claiming that no one believed the story. Murrow says people do believe it

In his television attack on McCarthyism, Ed Murrow shows the senator with pictures of a dilapidated red barn in Massachusetts. He accuses McCarthy of an attempt to smear the Democrat leader, Adlai Stevenson, by reading into a document found in the barn an association between Stevenson and the traitor Alger Hiss. Murrow says the smear is based on a half-truth. Stevenson's association with the red barn is not closer than that of other leading Americans

Murrow's film presses home his point about the half-truth. It shows pictures of McCarthy with photostats of the red barn document. McCarthy called it a "document which was never supposed to see the light of day." He said it showed that Hiss and another Communist recommended Stevenson for a conference on foreign policy in Asia. Murrow says viewers were not permitted to hear the whole paragraph in question. Then he reads it a son born in the London Clinic in 1945, came to broadcasting by accident. Columbia sent him to Britain in the late 'thirties as an administrator with the job of arranging background effects for other broadcasts. One day a cable was sent to London requesting at short notice a commentary on an important session of the House of Commons and, as nobody else could be found, Murrow did the job himself. His quiet, controlled baritone voice brought in so many inquiries that he was booked for more and more broadcasts.

"The odd thing about Ed is that his voice is naturally so loud," says one of his friends. "If you go to his home and catch him unawares, you hear his words reverberating round the house."

In private, Murrow is a sad man, although on the air he exudes authority and optimism. Early in 1948, he was at lunch in Rome with a group of colleagues and politicians. The world situation was cloudy and Murrow knew that stockpiles of atom bombs were being built up in Britain, America and Russia. When he had finished talking, one of the women in the party was in tears. "You can't mean that a third world war is round the corner, Ed?" she said

"That is exactly what I do think." rejoined Murrow. And he is one of the few "reporters"—which is how he describes himself although he is a vice-president of Columbia—to admit now that he was wrong.

But he was not wrong about McCarthy, and he has not often been wrong about other things. In the early postwar years, he was so often right that the legend grew, among his great following, that Murrow was becoming swollen-headed. Somebody tried to organize a "Murrow Ain't God" group. But the idea received its death-blow when a small, compact man approached the secretary and inquired whether he could join. "Anybody's welcome," said the secretary. "What did you say the name was?" "Ed Murrow," came the reply.

McCarthy's first reaction to Murrow's attack was to try to ignore it. Strictly, according to the laws under which Columbia operates, political commentaries must be impartial, and Murrow was out of line in attacking McCarthy. To safeguard himself he offered McCarthy the same spot in his television programme.

At first McCarthy refused, but Murrow's stand had paid off and liberal-minded Americans, taking courage from his example, were beginning to fight the senator and all that he stood for in the open. McCarthy had second thoughts and agreed to reply to the attack on television this week.

ago I did not realize that I was attempting a defense of book culture against the new media. I can now see that I was trying to bring some of the critical awareness fostered by literary training to bear on the new media of sight and sound. My strategy was wrong, because my obsession with literary values blinded me to much that was actually happening for good and ill. What we have to defend today is not the values developed in any particular culture or by any one mode of communication. Modern technology presumes to attempt a total transformation of man and his environment. This calls in turn for an inspection and defense of all human values. And so far as merely human aid goes, the citadel of this defense must be located in analytical awareness of the nature of the creative process involved in human cognition. For it is in this citadel that science and technology have already established themselves in their manipulation of the new media.

THE PROBLEM OF PARTISANSHIP

News on the Networks

WILLIAM PFAFF

WHEN Samuel F. B. Morse discovered that electric current could be made to actuate a signaling device over long-distance wires, the history of our experiment in democracy was more deeply involved than he could ever have conceived. Communications were revolutionized, and with them, the character of democratic government. Now we can no longer live in contemplative isolation; it is as if we all were on an enormous spider web: when a corner of it is touched, the tension brings all of us poking out of our dens.

A most important trend of our times, produced by the revolution in communications, is a discernible movement away from the constitutional processes of the past. The impact of decisions has moved outward from Congress and the Executive; at the same time the weight of responsibility moves inward as the complexity of issues lessens the number of people qualified to judge them. The President's recent decision to emphasize atomic bombardment in our military strategy was necessarily a decision whose merits could fully be judged only by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the National Security Council, and a limited number of Congressional Committee members and Executive and military planners. But the circle of people whose fate is involved in this decision is so enormous that there was an almost irresistible temptation for responsible officials to placate public concern with a public-relations campaign. The issue seemed too secret, too complex. The temptation is gently to coerce the public. This is no new temptation (Walter Lippmann analyzed it thirty years ago in Public Opinion), yet the developments in communications and public relations techniques make it a more persuasive one.

But government officials cannot make modern crises any less complex than they actually are; they may attempt to turn a logarithmic equation into a slogan, but in reality it remains a logarithmic equation. So the responsibility falls on the news reporter. He has become the public eye without which there is darkness.

The latest media of the news, radio and television reporting, have several special characteristics which include immediacy (the newspaper "extra" has all but disappeared) and impermanency. The consequences are that radio and television news tends to be simple, frequently superficial; it must be interesting, and often, for the sake of firing interest, is emotional, alloyed with entertainment. Radio and television have the advantage that they cannot very well be listened to selectively: a reader indifferent to foreign news can skip the foreign reports in his newspaper but hardly can avoid hearing those items in a newscast.

There are a limited number of radio frequencies and television channels. Allocated to a private corporation, each frequency or channel provides the opportunity for large profit and larger public influence. The power inherent in the ownership of a station is obvious; the government tries to avoid its misuse by requiring that the station be non-partisan in political matters. These inherent and regulatory characteristics have posed a challenge to newsmen which radio has inadequately met, and television has only begun to deal with.

THE great majority of radio newscasts carry nothing but headlines, with interpolated entertainment—"the lighter side of the news." While a minority of newscasts—the summaries from the networks and larger stations, and the correspondents' round-ups—frequently furnish a more balanced report of events than most newspapers, the trouble at the smaller stations is the same trouble as at the smaller newspapers (and some which are not so small): inadequate editing. Editors do not know (or care about) their subjects well enough to discriminate between the trivial and the significant, to look for the details which together form the important story, to pay attention to the continuity of a developing story. They publish the most important wire-service reports, handle foreign news cursorily with little attention to the development of stories over several days, and stuff the remainder of the paper or broadcast with features. They hardly attempt to perform the most serious function of the press, which is to interpret and explain the news without permitting partisanship to move from the editorial to the news columns. (And I am speaking here in terms of national and international news; the influence of the press and radio on local news is a different, if not necessarily a happier, story.)

The need for interpretation is responsible for the success of the newsmagazines, which by virtue of their disadvantage in timeliness, deal heavily (and ambiguously) in the commodity of interpretation. The newsmagazines and the network news programs are the chief national media of serious news reporting on national and international news; frequently they are the only media available to the person who lives outside the areas of the limited number of good newspapers.

No radio or television newscast can, of course, attempt to provide the service done by the small minority of newspapers which might be described as the professional tools of people involved in the making of international policy in government and business. The New York Times and Herald-Tribune, the Christian Science Monitor, the Washington Post, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and a few others continue to hold that responsibility. The responsibility of broadcasting is that of considered popularization and the wide distribution of the news.

And this brings us back to the problem of interpretation. Headlines alone, lead paragraphs off the news wire standing alone, are the tools of demagogues. News makes sense only when it is understood in terms of what preceded and what is likely to follow the headline.

Radio and television's answer to this problem of interpretation has taken three forms, two of them distinctively successful: the panel and the documentary. The former is unique to radio and television and possesses the inherent excitement of any argument; the latter is a wedding of drama and news which does things which cannot so well be done in writing. The third form is the news commentary.

IN commentary, the line was drawn during World War II between two policies, one adopted by the American Broadcasting Company (formerly the Blue Network), and the other by the Columbia Broadcasting System. The Mutual Network has followed the same policy as that of ABC. The National Broadcasting Company, harassed by a lack of consistent internal leadership, has since the war been a negligible force in radio news comment, with a few exceptions such as the brilliant Chicago analyst, Clifton Utley.

The ABC-Mutual policy is to permit a commentator to say what he pleases (within the limits of the laws of libel and obscenity; not always, as it has worked out, within the limits of good taste). He may favor candidates, advocate specific courses of action, and attack public figures. The networks make sure that they have commentators of different points of view, representing the major blocs of opinion, who presumably balance out to network impartiality. The theory might be described as an algebraic one of plus and minus canceling out to network zero.

ABC and Mutual offer a variety of commentators, from Fulton Lewis, Jr., and George Sokolsky to Martin Agronski, Frank Edwards and John W. Vandercook. Broadcasts range from sheer opinion, as with Fulton Lewis (who has such violent convictions that he occasionally becomes incoherent), to news with interpolated opinion, as with Elmer Davis. Prejudices aside, the usefulness of these commentators would seem to hinge largely on how seriously they attempt to avoid bias in reporting the actual facts, and on how willing they may be to report and consider the news which does not fit their particular points of view. In each case the commentator has a partisan viewpoint from which he sees the news. And his audience usually consists of the partisans whose views he reinforces, plus the few who hate his guts but listen out of a compulsive masochism.

The value of these men to the formation of an informed public is real but limited. No one except the telephone company's line-monitor listens to the nicely balanced total of a network's commentators. And by listening to one's favorites only, as a person almost inevitably does, it is possible to live out one's life without hearing a broadcast word which does not prove how right one is.

The second policy on commentary is that of the Columbia Broadcasting System. With a distinctive character and the largest staff in network news, the CBS News organization has been highly successful both in terms of listener popularity and professional achievement. Its history is instructive.

IN the mid-thirties, when radio reporting hardly existed, two men decided that radio news broadcasting had a future. One was William S. Paley, network board chairman, and the other was Edward Klauber, a former editor of the New York Times, then a CBS vice president. Paley initiated a policy of presenting the news, pausing, and then presenting an "analysis" (and the network prefers to call its interpretive broadcasters "analysts" rather than "commentators").

The duty of the analyst was stated by the network in 1939:

> . . . What news analysts are entitled to do and should do is to elucidate and illuminate the news out of common knowledge, or special knowledge possessed by them or made available to them by this organization through its news sources. They should point out the facts on both sides, show contradictions with the known record, and so on. They should bear in mind that in a democracy it is important that people not only should know but should understand, and it is the analyst's function to help the listener to understand, to weigh, and to judge, but not to do the judging for him.
> It is impossible, within any reasonable limits, to define completely this last-mentioned aspect of news analysis. Fairness and temperateness are of its essence.

This policy was summarized by Paul White, CBS' ex-news chief, the most distinguished editor radio news has produced and a principal figure in the development of the network's service. He said of the omniscient brand of commentator, "No one knows that much."

The news was to be illuminated, but there were to be no crusades or polemics. In several disputes, notably that during the war which led to the resignation of correspondent and analyst Cecil Brown, White maintained the principle that no arbitrary judgments or opinions were to be broadcast without at least some such qualification as, "it is the conclusion of this reporter that," or "one opinion is that. . . ." CBS' Edward R. Murrow has remarked, "I sometimes wish for a whistle or bell which I could sound during my program—something which would indicate to the listener: 'you have just heard what is ascertainable fact about today's events; you are about to hear one fallible man's opinion of what those facts mean.' I try to do it without the bell."

Murrow is undoubtedly the best-known of CBS' news broadcasters. The CBS network's European news chief during the war, he returned to the United States to become a vice president of the network. Dissatisfied with administrative work, he resigned his post to become once again an active broadcaster. He still is, however, a member of CBS' board of directors. A featured member of the group of newsmen organized under the title of "CBS News," he prepares his broadcasts with the help of a separate staff. On his nightly radio program he frequently takes very specific stands on national issues, and on his televised documentary, "See It Now," he has made some strong personal judgments, the most celebrated one on the character of Senator McCarthy. The judgments are voiced in tones which have been compared with those which might be expected of the Deity, but they usually have the human disclaimer, "it would seem to this reporter that. . . ."

He has said, "I think it provable that there is no such thing as a wholly objective reporter. Every man sees things through the glass of his own education and experience." This is a considerable understatement, and projects the question of whether the ideal of unbiased news reporting is attainable. The CBS policy statement quoted above lays down a principle, but it is a principle difficult to apply in the highly personal medium of the news broadcast. Larry Lesueur, CBS United Nations correspondent, told this writer: "There is no exact formula which determines what I may or may not say in my broadcasts. An editor reads my script, but I have never been questioned on anything other than slips of fact." (And even if there were strict censorship of scripts, a speaker's emphasis could altogether alter the meaning of a statement. Elmer Davis is a commentator with a notable, and frequently funny, command of the powers of emphasis.)

THE ideal of objectivity would seem to depend on the intent of reporters and analysts. In this, CBS has a good tradition. Beginning with Paley, Klauber and White, through Murrow and current network president Frank Stanton, CBS News has been marked by responsibility and what might be called a humility before the fact. Lesueur went to the heart of the matter when he remarked, "We are newsmen, not pitchmen." Murrow echoed him in speaking of the occasions when he and his wartime colleagues get together: "Down towards the bottom of the bottle, the talk always turns serious." A New Yorker profile of Murrow says that during the war CBS executives were sometimes irked because the newsmen he was hiring in Europe were poor broadcasters. He always replied, "I'm hiring reporters, not announcers."*

*There is one exception to this rule on CBS: Lowell Thomas. Thomas is an old-fashioned practitioner of the resonant vacuity. A featured newscaster, like Murrow, he works separately from the news organization itself. He broadcasts from home, rarely is seen at CBS, and in the eyes of many other CBS newsmen is "an entertainer." The other staff members are reporters or political specialists (such as Alexander Kendrick, Vienna correspondent, an expert on Soviet satellite affairs, or Howard K. Smith, European chief, who is one of the most thoughtful and serious political writers in the news profession). Some, like Eric Sevareid and Edward P. Morgan, are essayists of real distinction who write as entertainingly on the narcissistic delusions of journalism, or Central Park in the spring, as they do informatively on political affairs.

The independence of the news staff has brought pressure to CBS to drop analysts who have offended certain groups. Howard Smith has come in for criticism for his association with The Nation. Kendrick has been listed by Red Channels, the publication which reports the allegedly Communist or Communist-front associations of people in the radio and entertainment industries. As a whole, the CBS News staff can certainly be called "liberal" or "internationalist"; Murrow, who hired most of the correspondents, acknowledges that they are in general agreement on political affairs. He says that he made no effort to select people who shared his own views, and adds: "I think there is this much to be said. All of our correspondents went through much the same experience during the war. We have all worked abroad. These things have influenced us in similar ways."

There certainly are examples to sustain the thesis that the nature of modern news reporting seems inevitably to lead to bias. Witness the "one-party press" of the last Presidential campaign and the change of Time and Life from newsmagazines to opinion magazines. Other publications, such as the New York Times and Newsweek, are experimenting with techniques which will enable them to continue "objective" reporting and at the same time deal with lies in the news. Time has a different approach. Inserting definitely partisan judgments into many domestic news stories, it justifies its policy by an appeal to the theories of "interpretive reporting." In times as disturbed and invective-laden as these, the problem clearly is not confined to broadcasting.

CBS has almost always managed to maintain its pause between news and analysis. But in recent years the analyses have come to include more and more judgments. CBS analysts have in past weeks made judgments on the Bricker Amendment and military aid to Pakistan, among other issues. They have gravely, if soberly and implicitly, criticized Senator McCarthy. These things may be challenged, but chiefly on the grounds that they violate the traditional policy of the network itself. What is serious is that CBS has also permitted judgments to enter into straight news reports. Don Hollenbeck's WCBS-TV news broadcast which followed the famous McCarthy edition of "See It Now" rightly characterized itself as a supplementary report to the Murrow show, and an anti-McCarthy tone has been evident in other CBS News broadcasts.

This encroachment of opinion into news reports appears to be due, ironically enough, to the special position held by Edward Murrow which has done so much to make CBS News the extraordinarily good agency it is. As the dominant personality in the news operation, and a network executive too ("you might say that Ed is [Board Chairman] Paley's conscience," a CBS man has remarked), he has been pace-setter for the news agency. "We know that we can weep on Ed's shoulder, that we can ignore pressures as long as he is here. You could call him the newsman's representative in the publisher's office, and the publisher's representative in the newsroom," a CBS analyst says. Murrow himself remarked about unfriendly mail and pressure campaigns, "I never worry about that stuff." Since before the war, he, more than any other individual, has set the tone of CBS News.

Now, the corrosive crisis of suspicion and intolerance has forced Murrow himself to become (perhaps a bit to his own surprise) a crusader, a leader of those who feel that Senator McCarthy represents a threat to traditional American values. Prominent in this group are the liberals, and Murrow has already begun to receive the swarming embraces which in the past have been visited upon Adlai Stevenson and Elmer Davis. (Perhaps there soon will be a special issue of the New Republic dedicated to this newest of the heroes.) Once Murrow is considered a liberal leader, his public position will be fundamentally altered. It may not be too much to say that then Edward Murrow would be finished as a non-partisan analyst. In any event, from now on, the liberals will automatically praise, the McCarthy supporters will damn. Murrow may thus, perhaps quite deliberately, have made a greater personal sacrifice to the cause of civil liberties and honorable discussion than almost any other public figure in America.

WHATEVER the effect on Murrow's career, it will be interesting to see what happens to CBS News itself. If it should become thought of as partisan in reporting the news, even though the cause is a wholly admirable one, then a genuine ideal will have died and a giant will have fallen.

If CBS does not lose its reputation for impartial and responsible reporting, it will not be due so much to the fine policy statements of the past as to the caliber of the reporters themselves. "We are newsmen," Lesueur said. The profession of the newsman is perhaps harder to practice today than at any other time in American history. There are these problems of complexity and secrecy; of the public figure who lies and of the public agency which merchandizes its information; of the psychological warrior and the press agent. There is the historically unique status of diplomacy, inevitably interrelated with public opinion and the press, now deathfilled in its responsibility, a hydrogen bomb the penalty of failure. In these layers of information and misinformation, of ideology and of malice, is hidden that logarithmic equation. In considering how the press reorganizes and rethinks its mission, a certain reassurance may be drawn from the circumstance that fact, like mathematics, has always been known to give men a kind of pure joy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

All communications for use in this column MUST carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the discretion of the Editor. To be acceptable letters must be legible and written on one side of the paper. The Agawam News assumes no responsibility for opinions expressed in this column.

Unsigned letters will not be published.

Because of the interest in the prevailing controversity between Senator McCarthy, Cohn, Schine and the Army we feel that the letter received by this paper is of more interest than an editorial.

This letter is the sentiments of the sender and not necessarily the opinion or stand of this paper.

Dear Editor:

Since when does a TV columnist turn editorialist all in one breath, and since when, if Bert Shephard is an authentic editorial writer, is such an obviously slanted "critical analysis" allowed to hide behind the misnomer, TV Views?

His column of March 25 is the most childishly absurd attempt at exploitation I have ever read. Like all anti-McCarthy propagandists, he seizes the opportunity to abuse the purpose of his medium, and when he should be presenting objective opinion, he fills his column space with trivia, exaggerated beyond reasonable bounds and distorts the significance of what are really accidentals. Look out, Mr. Shephard, your prejudice is showing!

Take the matter of Roy Cohn's age. Shepard stated that Cohn is "a boy in a man's position" and that he, Shepard, was "let down considerably" upon discovering this. Tsk, tsk, little man, take your chin out of the cat's milk and face facts for a change.

Admittedly Roy Cohn is young, but what is more important he is acknowledged by both friend and foe as an eminently able brilliant and qualified investigator. His record as Assistant United States Attorney in New York bears this out (have you checked it, Mr. Shepard?) and his work and performance in almost every major case involving the trial and conviction of Communists has been approved and applauded the length and breadth of this country. The Rosenberg fiasco is a case in point. Pressure politics and a planned anti-capital punishment campaign organized by the Communist party at that time did not deter Mr. Cohn in the slightest, and it is no wonder now that he and his colleagues are under furious and unremitting attack.

For a mere "boy", Mr. Cohn did an excellent job of keeping his place on the Award Winning Program, Meet the Press. True to his usual pattern, Mr. Cohn maintained integrity by refusing to divulge confidential committee matters although he was at the time under a barrage of some of the most vulgar, insulting and insinuating type of questioning. For such a babe in the woods, Mr. Cohn admirably preserved his dignity and poise despite the bold faced effrontery of the May Craigs of the newspaper world hinting at collusion, suggesting mysterious "holds" by McCarthy on his staff and vice versa, and openly attempting to manipulate public opinion through unprincipled and unethical interrogations which deserved a far more scathing rejoinder than Mr. Cohn's polite reminder that he was a self-respecting man. For this he was congratulated and acclaimed by outstanding commentators all over the country via radio and TV, and for this Bert Shepard labels him a "second rate junior executive."

But of course, hitting Cohn is not enough for Shepard. Notwithstanding the fact that he was appears before a Congressional Investigating Committee unless there is sworn testimony of their subversive connections, and notwithstanding the fact that the two investigating committees of our government were overwhelmingly endorsed by the representatives of the American people (85 to 1 in the House and 362 to 1 in Congress), he can't resist the opportunity to question McCarthy's effectiveness and add fuel to the fire of Communist instigated doubt.

Well, don't worry, Mr. Shepard, McCarthy is too effective, that's his big trouble; he's hitting them right where it hurts the most. Perhaps like Martin Dies, Robert Stripling, J. Parnell Thomas, Dr. J. B. Matthews, Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Scott McLeod and the great educator William A. Wirt, McCarthy and his aides will eventually be silenced; certainly the humiliation and unjust criticism coming his way falls into the same pattern as that suffered by the aforementioned anti-Reds who were successively hounded out of public life, made objects of ridicule and notoriety, ruined career-wise and in one case driven to death; but before that happens to him the American people will have something to say. Most of them know that the announced Communist Party Platform for 1954 is a campaign of hate against McCarthy, that this is also the avowed purpose of the communist infiltrated press and the tried and true formula for parlor conversation of the pinkos, pseudo-intellectuals, self-styled liberals and just plain bigoted, confused and blinded people.

Do you, Mr. Shepard call it violating the rights of the innocent, when question after question after question is met by evasion, duplicity, insults and shrieks and outright refusal to answer, to then answer back, to a certain extent in kind? Is it abusing the rights of the innocent to become impatient at the ducking behind the Fifth Amendment and claiming all its privileges by the very traitors who have never bothered to defend our Constitution, but rather done all within their power to undermine it. Is it an abuse of the innocent to come to death grips with conspiracy minus the kid gloved diplomacy and lack of force that no Communist understands, but which, in their cowardice they have come to rely on? What naivete! A weak sister as an investigator would be a laughing stock, both to America and its enemies.

Mr. Shepard, you have a positive gift for concentrating on the WRONG issues. That's a major fault of the American people. As a result of it, the Kremlin has been made happy - overjoyed - especially in this last tangle between McCarthy and Secretary Stevens. Did it ever occur to you Mr. Shepard that the combined efforts of the communist press, the so-called "liberals" and people like you have succeeded in obscuring the real issue: WHO PROMOTED MAJOR PERESS, graduate of a communist leadership school, communist cell organizer at Camp Kilmer, New Jersey and recipient of Army Benevolence (no overseas duty because his wife was visting a psychiatrist whose name even the major could not remember), and Fifth Amendment Communist? Not only is the Kremilin happy, but also the Major is very much relieved, since all eyes now are turned on - or should I say against - McCarthy, and as far as he is concerned, the "heat" is temporarily off.

It makes life a lot easier to prefer the sensational rather than the fundamental, and the fundamental here is our battle against communism. The skillful lying, the rabble rousing, the lifting sentences out of context, the distortion of the issues is the triumph of the Communist Party. And just between us, Mr. Shepard, easily influenced people like you who jump at any opportunity to sound off on their favorite hates are helping us to lose this ball game. Exaggerating accidentals like the age of Roy Cohn for the purpose of holding him up to ridicule is just one more foul ball. If more columnists would concentrate on the important things, the real facts and figures, and the unpalatable, dirty, sometimes harrowing circumstances McCarthy is forced to work under and give him credit where it is due, (and its all in the record, Mr. Shepard), then perhaps the average citizen would not fall for half-baked, second-rate borrowed opinions of the would-be provocative columnist lacking responsibility enough to offer documented evidence or the truth.

If the grass roots are any indication, McCarthy has, by an overwhelmingy majority, won out. Perhaps, Mr. Shepard, this escaped your notice, but the independent polls of the different states last week, proved that the American people on the whole are well aware of the job McCarthy and Cohn are doing, and what's more they refuse to be bulldozed by a ranting, raving party line. What is more, the next few weeks will undoubtedly provide complete justification for McCarthy's stand throughout.

In my opinion, bleeding hearts have no right to be columnists. If they are columnists, they should stick to the specific area in which they work. If more of these egg heads would, if they feel it necessary to delve into politics, personalities or chronological age, use their talents towards fighting Communism, and standing by courageous, red-blooded Americans who will not be intimidated or manipulated by this countries' enemies, perhaps we would have real freedom of the press and less confusion in this country.

G'wan, Mr. Shepard. If McCarthy and Cohn are a feared team, they are feared by men who are spineless, traitorous and guilty. Quit the labeling, (a Daily Worker trick) and quit the irrelevant mud slinging, if you have any sense of reporting ethics, or confine yourself, please, to TV.

Sincerely

Announcement of his appointment was held up until early this evening because the subcommittee wanted to make it unanimous. With the temperature in the 80s, Senator W. Stuart Symington (D.-Mo.) was at Burning Tree Club, where President Eisenhower was also playing golf. When Symington was reached, the announcement was made.

The majority of Jenkins' work has been civil law, although he said he had participated in some 600 homicide casese on one side or the other since his practice in Knoxville began in 1920.

He is 57, a lifelong "middle-of-the-road Republican," Tennessee manager for Wendell Willkie in 1940 and a Taft man before the 1952 presidential convention. He told reporters he had not been active in politics in recent years.

Dirksen first met the attorney at a post-football game cocktail party in Knoxville four years ago. He asked a judge who that "rugged brute" over there was.

The judge, Dirksen said, replied that Jenkins was the best trial lawyer in the state.

THESE DAYS:

TV, Press Coverage Of the Hearings

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

THERE are five television chains in the United States, National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System, American Broadcasting Company, Mutual Broadcasting System, and Du Mont Television Network. Of them N.B.C. and C.B.S. are the largest and have the greatest volume of business. A.B.C. and Du Mont are carrying the whole of the McCarthy-Stevens hearings, approximately six hours a day, although financially they are not as strong as N.B.C. and C.B.S.

It is to be noted that whereas there are some 1,700 daily newspapers in the United States, the bulk of them are individually and locally owned. The television outlets are limited to five and a very large part of the programs which appear on any of these stations throughout the United States is limited to what is generally dished out of New York, with some occasional addendum from Washington and Hollywood.

It is true that some newspapers are owned by chains, but there is no chain that owns more than 25 newspapers. It is also true that numerous syndicates sell matter of all sorts to newspapers, but these are carefully read and edited locally and even omitted if an editor believes it is not in good taste or in the general interest to publish the particular item.

Television Is Different

On television, it is different. Because of advertising contracts, no local responsibility or editing is possible. Furthermore, the local outlet does not generally see a live "show" any sooner than the audience. Its management may complain after the deed is done, but it has no way of knowing that it might not wish to exhibit a particular feature.

I am interested in news and political discussion and particularly in the televising of such hearings as the McCarthy-Stevens. Only A.B.C. and Du Mont have given this story with absolute accuracy, because only these two companies have given it all in unedited, verbatim form. Other systems produce condensations, highlights, edited versions, late at night, when the programs sponsored by advertising are out of the way. It is in the nature of the media that only one item can appear on one channel at a time, whereas a newspaper publishes hundreds of items simultaneously. If then in a condensation on television, distortion, slanting or even untruth are resorted to, the other side has no chance of simultaneous reproduction and corrections cannot be made with any effectiveness at all until the particular program is again scheduled.

Newspapers, when these hearings are over, will take a very sober view of the handling of news in competition with a full, verbatim television show of a particular story. No newspaper can possibly print six hours of testimony on any subject. No newspaper, to my knowledge, has printed these reports in their entirety for every day of these hearings. It is physically impossible to do that without sacrificing equally important news. Condensation of any story is not the same as a verbatim report, but how many readers want to plow through the repetitious question and answer type of thing that can be more of a bore when read than on the screen?

Viewer Makes Own Decision

On the other hand, each viewer of the television show has a different picture and lays emphasis on different points. When he reads in the newspapers an emphasis different from his own, he regards the news as slanted. When millions of words have to be condensed into small space and when hundreds of interrogations have to be translated into a readable narrative, large gobs of testimony have to be omitted, emphasis has to be determined and the whole thing fitted into limited space.

The newspaper story differs from the television highlights in that editorial and columnist comment runs simultaneously with the publication of the news story. Some newspapers take more than one wire service and sometimes they publish more than one account in the same issue. Television cannot do that technically.

Each medium has its limitations and its advantages. However, the point needs to be made that had the two smaller television networks not produced the six-hour-a-day verbatim testimony, the condensed highlight show late at night could have been employed to do propaganda work for either side.

Television has grown so swiftly that little attention has been paid to it as a force in molding public opinion. The handling of these hearings offers an excellent opportunity for that purpose.

WASHINGTON, April 7—They filled the open seat for the army - McCarthy game today with a rough - and - tough looking Tennessee trial lawyer.

The permanent investigating subcommittee of the Senate voted unanimously to appoint Ray H. Jenkins of Knoxville special counsel for the probe.

Public hearings will begin April 21. Television and radio broadcasts will be permitted, but not under commercial sponsorship.

Jenkins, said by committee members to be the "best trial attorney in Tennessee," has never met Senator Joseph R. McCarthy and the Wisconsin Republican was not consulted before the selection.

Mind Completely Open

"I have no record, publicly or otherwise, in respect to Senator McCarthy or what has been termed 'McCarthyism'," the new counsel told newsmen.

"I have no preconceived notions of the merits of the controversy, no prejudices or bias and my mind is completely [illegible]

[illegible] popped into the mind of Senator Everett M. Dirksen (R.-Ill.) while Dirksen was planting shrubbery at the home of his son-in-law in Huntsville, Tenn., Sunday.

Saw Chance for Service

The senator telephoned the lawyer and asked for an airport meeting that evening. Jenkins' first answer was no. Then he thought it over.

"I saw in this service the possibility of rendering a definite public service to my country, and so I came to Washington for a conference," the six-foot-three Tennessean told reporters.

"The committee interrogated me from an hour and a half to two hours this morning. I insisted that no further action be taken until they made a rather complete investigation of me."

The investigation was made by telephone. Subcommittee members called some 10 state and federal judges in Tennessee, talked to both Knoxville newspapers for background and consulted several other persons.

Jenkins, red - faced, sandy - haired and 195 pounds, said there had been no discussion of what his pay would be.

N. C.'s Famous, Fighting Sons

A PEABODY AWARD is, to a radio or TV personality, what a Pulitzer award is to a writer, or what a Medal of Honor is to a soldier. The Peabody awards recognize disinterested and meritorious public service. This week they were presented to two individuals, both of them native sons of North Carolina.

Ed Murrow received his third Peabody award. Gerald Johnson, who unlike Mr. Murrow grew to adulthood in North Carolina and worked on newspapers and taught in the state before going north, was also honored, for his TV newcasts.

It was less than a year ago that three other Tar Heels, weekly editors Willard Cole and W. Horace Carter, and Vermont Royster, now of the WALL STREET JOURNAL, received Pulitzer prizes, of which only about a dozen are awarded each year. It was only two weeks ago that Mr. Johnson received the Sidney Hillman Award, presented annually for an outstanding contribution to civil liberties, race relations and associated issues. And last year this award went to editors Cale and Carter.

North Carolina can be particularly proud of these native sons because of the adversaries they chose. Cole and Carter fought the Ku Klux Klan, when it was dangerous to do so. Johnson's big target was hysteria and intolerance. Murrow supplemented his uncommonly good radio reporting with equally good telecasts, including the memorable one on Sen. McCarthy, another on the young reserve officer, Lt. Radulovitch, who had been termed a security risk because of the leftist ties of some of his relatives. Royster regularly delivers his readers a thought-provoking and delightful combination of incisive editorials.

Every one of these distinguished Tar Heels fits the phrase the Peabody Award Committee applied to Murrow: "Fair-minded and a fighter for justice." There is no finer compliment.

LE sénateur Mac Carthy, lors d'une intervention mardi soir, au cours d'un programme télévisé, a répondu aux attaques dirigées contre lui le 9 mars dernier par le célèbre commentateur Edward Murrow, qui avait affirmé que le sénateur avait franchi la limite entre l'enquête et la persécution, le sénateur a accusé le commentateur, qui lui avait cédé son propre programme de télévision, d'être un propagandiste du communisme depuis 20 ans.

Dans une déclaration publiée immédiatement après le programme, le commentateur Edward Murrow a rejeté les accusations lancées contre lui par le sénateur Mac Carthy, en déclarant que celui-ci cherche invariablement à taxer de communisme tous ceux qui s'opposent à ses visées.

La Direction de la Columbia Broadcasting Systeme, réseau de radio et de télévision auquel appartient Edward Murrow, a publié de son côté un communiqué rendant hommage à son commentateur dont elle souligne « l'attachement » aux principes fondamentaux des Etats-Unis » et son « hostilité à tous ceux qui aussi bien à l'intérieur qu'à l'extérieur cherchent à saper ces principes ».

Le programme avait été enregistré la semaine dernière à New-York avant le départ du sénateur pour l'Arizona où il se repose actuellement.

A la suite de cette émission, de nombreux téléspectateurs ont fait connaître leur opinion à la Direction de la C.B.S.

A New-York, dans les deux heures qui ont suivi le programme, la « Columbia Broadcasting Systeme » avait reçu 2.989 communications téléphoniques dont 2.012 en faveur de M. Murrow et 977 en faveur du sénateur. A Los Angelès, le bilan après deux heures et quart était de 949 en faveur de M. Murrow et de 144 en faveur du sénateur Mac Carthy, et à Chicago, après 70 minutes, de 454 pour M. Murrow et de 147 pour M. Mac Carthy.

Railroad Engineer's Son Shows Up 'Joe'

Murrow Sees Fakery In Senator's Drive

One of the most telling blows sustained by Senator "Jumping Joe" McCarthy during the past week was delivered by the son of a veteran railroad engineer—that is, by Edward R. Murrow, noted radio-television commentator.

Murrow's father, now retired, was first a brakeman and fireman, then an engineer on a private logging camp railroad near Blanchard, Wash. As a youth, Ed himself worked as a fireman on a donkey engine in that camp.

Ed, now famous for his "See It Now" television programs, devoted one of them to documenting McCarthy's tactics. He showed how "Jumping Joe" played fast and loose with the facts; how he used congressional immunity to persecute individuals who are not Reds; how he utilized "half truths" to confuse the public.

Murrow's broadcast drew the wrath of McCarthy, but it also brought many thousands of congratulatory phone calls, wires and letters. The deluge ran almost 20 to 1 pro-Murrow.

On the program, Joe was pictured in news films making various statements. Then Murrow demonstrated from the record the falsity of the statements.

"We must not confuse dissent with disloyalty," Murrow pointed out. "We must remember always that accusation is not proof and that conviction depends upon evidence and due process of law.

"It is necessary to investigate before legislating, but the line between investigating and persecuting is a very fine one, and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly."

Murrow invited McCarthy—who in the past has praised the fairness of Murrow's programs—to make a reply on "See It Now." Instead, "Joe" went on another radio program in an effort to smear Murrow as a "Red."

He did this by raking up a story that in 1935 Murrow had been a member of an American advisory council for a summer school at Moscow University.

Murrow replied, however, that the Russians had cancelled the summer school, so it never took place. He explained, too, that the proposed school was part of a student and professor exchange program sponsored by the Institute of International Education—of which John Foster Dulles, now Secretary of State, and Thomas Lamont, Wall Street banker, were trustees.

The proposed summer school, Murrow added, would have allowed American teachers and graduate students to probe Russian life—which is apparently why the Soviets cancelled it. Meantime, Murrow renewed his invitation to McCarthy personally to answer the previous "See It Now" program.

McCarthy finally agreed, in a telegram charging Murrow had "consciously served the Communist cause." Murrow retorted that "the record when it is finished will show who has served the Communist cause, you or I."

This suggestion that McCarthy is in fact serving the Communist cause was documented recently by James Kearney, editor and publisher of the Trenton (N. J.) Times. Kearney is also a prominent Catholic layman.

In a widely-reprinted editorial, Kearney pointed out that McCarthy has "undermined the people who work in our embassies abroad," has "convinced public opinion in Europe that there is little if any freedom left in the U. S.," has "spread doubts through American public life," has undermined Army morale and has "sidetracked" and "undermined the effectiveness of the FBI."

All these results, Kearney emphasized, are precisely the aims of the Communist party.

Moreover, Kearney continued, "Senator McCarthy, for all of his charges, has yet to uncover a Communist in a high or important place. Isn't it a desire of the Communists to spread confusion without endangering the really important members of the Communist party?

Kearney charged that "Senator McCarthy has been doing the work of the Communist party," and concluded: "Isn't it proper now to ask, Is Senator McCarthy really a Communist?"

LABOR SATURDAY, MARCH 20, 1954.

TELEVISION

Man from Wisconsin

AFTER his interrogation by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy a few weeks ago, General Ralph Zwicker, the commandant of Camp Kilmer, turned to his aides, according to the papers, and remarked, "Boys, now you've had an education." I felt the same way the other night after watching Edward R. Murrow's half-hour report on the Senator, over his weekly "See It Now" program, sponsored by the Aluminum Company of America (C.B.S., 10:30-11 P.M. on Tuesdays). Mr. Murrow brought off an extraordinary feat of journalism by the simple expedient of compiling a pictorial history of the Senator, complete with sound track, that showed him as he has performed in a variety of places and under a variety of circumstances during the past few years. Mr. Murrow let the Senator do most, but not all, of the work. We saw McCarthy speaking in Milwaukee, we saw him speaking in Philadelphia, we watched him conduct an investigation of the Voice of America, we heard a tape recording of a speech he delivered in Charleston, West Virginia, and we watched some of his operations during the 1952 Presidential campaign. We also got a pretty good look at the fellow—the best that I, for one, have ever got. To begin with, he's a big man, with big hands and a large head. Most of the time, he has a petulant, droop-jaw expression, as though, at the very instant he was all set to challenge everybody in the place to step outside, he was convinced that everybody in the place was about to jump him. He has a soft, almost silky, droning voice, which he tries somewhat too obviously to control. His laugh is frightening. He uses his hands a great deal for emphasis. While interrogating a witness, he gives the impression that all light, all truth, and all honesty belong at the moment to him alone, but then destroys the impression by appearing, curiously and unexpectedly, to be uncertain of his next move.

Mr. Murrow's intent was to pick the Senator up in a series of contradictions. He quoted the Senator as having declared in Milwaukee seventeen months ago, "If this fight against Communism is made a fight between America's two great political parties, the American people know that one of those parties will be destroyed, and the Republic cannot endure very long as a one-party system." He then let us hear the remarks of the Senator in Charleston on February 4th of this year: "The issue between the Republicans and Democrats is clearly drawn. It has been deliberately drawn by those who have been in charge of twenty years of treason. The hard fact is that those who wear the label 'Democrat' wear it with the stain of a historic betrayal." We saw the Senator in many moods—arrogant, aroused, fierce, and humble. To depict this last mood, Murrow threw a shot on the screen of a political dinner somewhere. An elderly gentleman at the speaker's table who was introducing the Senator became almost overwhelmed with emotion. He said he could not express what was in his heart, and he reached across the table and plucked some flowers from a floral arrangement, remarking:

"Ah, 'tis but a dainty flower I bring you,
Yes, 'tis but a violet, glistening with dew,
But still in its heart there lie beauties concealed.
So in our heart our love for you lies unrevealed."

McCarthy arose, gulping, and said, "You know, I used to pride myself on the idea that I was a bit tough, especially over the past eighteen or nineteen months, when we have been kicked around and bull-whipped and damned. I didn't think that I could be touched very deeply. But tonight, frankly, my cup and my heart are so full I can't talk to you." And he turned away, almost in tears.

Throughout the program, Mr. Murrow quietly added comments of his own. He made no attempt to hide his strong feelings of distaste and shock at the methods and language of the Senator. Murrow is, of course, a master of pictorial presentation and rarely forgets that television is designed for the eye as well as the ear. His most effective use of pictorial technique, it seemed to me, came in his discussion of the Senator's charge that "extreme Left-Wing elements of press and radio" were attacking his committee over the Zwicker affair. Mr. Murrow had before him two stacks of newspapers, and, pointing to one, he said, "Of the fifty large-circulation newspapers in the country, these are the Left Wing papers that criticized." Then, pointing to the other, he said, "These are the ones that supported him. The ratio is about three to one against the Senator. Now let us look at some of these Left Wing papers that criticized the Senator." Thereupon he

Just before the conclusion of his program, Mr. Murrow fixed the audience with an almost glassy stare and read, solemnly and deliberately, an editorial he had composed for the occasion. I thought that he was especially impressive when he remarked, "This is no time for men who oppose Senator McCarthy's methods to keep silent, or for those who approve. We can deny our heritage and our history, but we cannot escape responsibility for the result. There is no way for a citizen of a republic to abdicate his responsibilities. . . . The actions of the Junior Senator from Wisconsin have caused alarm and dismay amongst our allies abroad and given considerable comfort to our enemies, and whose fault is that? Not really his; he didn't create this situation of fear, he merely exploited it, and rather successfully. Cassius was right: 'The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves. . . .' Good night, and good luck." —PHILIP HAMBURGER

Raylea Gail Sacker, 10-year-old daughter of A. A. Sacker, Hartford, Conn., agent, packed most of the main points of fire prevention in the home into the following brief essay, written in connection with Fire Prevention Week:

"Fire Prevention Week is here. In order to keep my house safe from fire, I remind Dad not to throw cigarettes in the waste paper basket. I clean all papers out of the attic and cellar. I don't leave oil cans and rags hanging around. I tell Mom not to leave the iron going while she's talking on the 'phone. I don't leave the fire on when we go out, and I throw all papers out that accumulate around the house.

"Most important, I don't let my little sister play with matches. I tell Dad to watch out when he's burning trash or leaves. In case of a fire, I call the Fire Department immediately. All these things will make Fire Prevention Week a happy one for my family."—The Standard, New England's Insurance Weekly.

How did that fire start that you had to call the Department for?

MCC HYISM INVESTIGATED BY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL

McCARTHYISM is often denounced as 'A witch hunt.' It is doubtful if even Senator McCarthy himself has ever been guilty of so misleading or inept a comparison. The witch hunts of the Middle Ages have been treated with scorn by succeeding generations, which were certain that there have never been any witches. The phrase 'witch hunting' plainly implies hunting for something which does not exist.

We who live in the age of Fuchs and Nunn May, of Rosenberg and Pontecorvo, of Whittaker Chambers and Alger Hiss, of Burgess and Maclean, cannot deny that there are Communists in the Western world, or that such people have been eager to betray their country's most precious secrets to the Kremlin.

It is quite true that Senator McCarthy has never tracked down a single Communist highly placed in the Government of the United States. But the F.B.I. have been a good deal more successful, and have prosecuted a number of dangerous Communists who have subsequently been condemned and sentenced by due process of law.

Why should anyone in England be seriously disturbed because an American Senator, not for the first time in American history, is subjecting a number of his fellow citizens to tedious investigations and interrogatories?

It is largely because of the Aunt Sallyism of the Left. There are unfortunately a great number of people in Britain today who are anxious to find an excuse for quarrelling with the United States. Some of them are Communists, some are fellow travellers; others are pacifists; others again are merely looking for any excuse, however insincere, which would allow Britain to shirk her responsibilities under the Charter of the United Nations.

They hope that by toadying to Moscow they may find some easy way out of the conflict which has been joined between the evil forces of Communism and the worried peoples of the free world. These publicists, by exaggerating the importance and influence of McCarthy, seek to establish this proposition: If so many Americans are as horrible as McCarthy then no decent self-respecting Englishman can be the ally of the United States and the Americans had better 'go it alone.'

Commonsense, no less than good manners, requires that people who write about foreign politicians should exercise more restraint than they would in criticising their own fellow-countrymen. For attacks from the outside upon an individual invariably have the effect of rallying support for the person attacked.

These practical considerations ought to be borne in mind by any European who feels inclined to vent his spleen against Senator McCarthy. Criticisms made here are cabled back to the United States where McCarthy and his friends exploit them to be-devil Anglo-American relations still further. They point out how the Senator (whom many Americans think has only been doing his duty) has in the service of his country encountered ignorant and prejudiced criticism from the ungrateful English, whose views and interests may therefore legitimately be treated with contempt.

A very good example of the way in which an Englishman should not approach this problem was given some time ago by Mr. Tom O'Brien, M.P., a former chairman of the T.U.C., who is usually regarded as one of the most sensible men in the Labour movement. He suddenly gave tongue to the grotesque utterance that Senator McCarthy ought to be removed from authority by the American Government.

SUCH crude and gratuitous advice was bound to be resented in a country which since 1776 has been responsible for the conduct of its own affairs. And it was bound to be regarded with scorn there, because neither the President nor the Government of the United States have the means of 'getting rid' of Senator McCarthy. An American senator is elected by the voters of the State he lives in, and he can only be removed from office by the vote of his constituents or by a successful impeachment in the Senate.

To many English people, Joseph McCarthy appears to be a sinister and ominous jack-in-the-box who has popped up from nowhere and has grown so large on the American horizon that he completely obscures the Statue of Liberty. They picture him as a man with immense power but no office.

It is a completely false impression. Senator McCarthy is now in the middle of his second term in the Senate. He is a member of the Appropriations Committee, Chairman of the Committee on Government Operations and head of the Senate's Permanent Investigating Sub-committee. These positions make it his duty to scrutinise and investigate every individual and institution in any part of the world who by some means receives money from the U.S. taxpayer.

Of course, McCarthy now has far more power and influence than any previous holders of his offices. This is due to two things: his own talent and courage, and the political situation which was so favourable to his policies at the time he stood for election.

Most people have been so conditioned to think of McCarthy as a cruel political bully that the word 'courage' seems to them ridiculously paradoxical. But McCarthy does not only browbeat timid liberal TV comperes and inefficient Embassy coding clerks. He has challenged and defeated some of the toughest public men in the United States.

IN 1951 McCarthy drove off the air one of America's most influential commentators, the ultra-conservative Drew Pearson whom Franklin Roosevelt once stigmatised as "an unmitigated liar." He engineered the defeat of the Senator for Maryland, Millard Tydings, a Conservative Democrat who had been a lifelong opponent of Roosevelt and the New Deal. Neither victim was weak or unprotected, yet neither proved a match for McCarthy's skilful campaigning. In all, it is claimed, McCarthy has been responsible for getting ten of his supporters elected to the Senate.

Perhaps the greatest source of his power lies in the fact that the President needs McCarthy more than McCarthy needs the President. The two stigmas which attached to Truman's administration during the Presidential election, and which could not be explained away, were corruption and Communism.

In the public mind, McCarthy was the man who had convicted the Democrats of these crimes. Apart from Eisenhower and Senator Taft, McCarthy was the only Republican with a national appeal and audience. He seemed the only one who provided a simple black and white answer to the frustrations and confusions produced by the Korean war and Russian intransigence.

Now Eisenhower is head of the State; Taft is dead; and McCarthy can carry on appealing to the unthinking passions of his millions of supporters without ever being obliged to provide any concrete administrative actions.

There is little support for any attempt to have McCarthy expelled from the Senate. Conservatives and liberals in America alike agree that such a move would fatally undermine the Constitution and smooth the path of an embryo dictator. McCarthy has built his career on his superb and shameless ability to have his cake and eat it.

Senator McCarthy: poseur or patriot? He looks confident. The eyes of the world are on him.

It is one of the vices of popular journalism that once anyone has been put into the pillory and branded as an international villain, every busybody seems to think he can throw anything, true or false, idiotic or wise, at the Aunt Sally of the moment.

Such is the temptation towards this vicious and escapist process that even an experienced Liberal journalist like Mr. A. J. Cummings is capable of misleading himself and his readers

Mr. Cummings, after giving his blessing to Mr. O'Brien's ill-judged remark, selected for criticism —as if it were the last straw under which the patience of the British public must collapse—the following statement made by Senator McCarthy:

"We do not want allies who cringe and surrender in the face of an enemy tyrant or who lick the boots of the enemy and give him weapons of war. We do not want to go it alone, but if the United States is left, as we may well be, on an island in a Communist sea, then we will go it alone, and so help us God we will win."

These sentiments, though not the last word in enduring world statesmanship, would strike an objective observer as being of a character that might unfortunately on occasion win applause in any country. We can remember how popular Philip Snowden became here when he insulted the French at the Hague in 1930 over the matter of reparations.

In any case, the Senator's words strike one as markedly less offensive than those used by Mr. Sidney Silverman, a Socialist member of the House of Commons, when he described the Americans who have given us so many dollars as "shabby money-lenders."

Of course, Senator McCarthy has used far sillier and more odious words than he used on this occasion. And Mr. Cummings could, if he had taken the trouble, have scarified his readers with apposite examples. But so potent is the disease of Aunt Sallyism that Mr. Cummings just took the first press cutting that came to hand, and simply went for the Senator's distant and hardened head.

None of the foregoing should lead anyone to suppose that McCarthy or his methods are anything but a menace to the freedom, and a stain on the civilisation, of the United States.

Perhaps the most tragic result of McCarthy's campaign in the United States has been the transformation of his enemies from sober controversialists into wild libellers like himself. It is impossible for anyone in England who has followed the course of any one of McCarthy's charges to take him seriously.

His famous list of Communists in the American State Department was originally supposed to contain 205 names. Later it dropped to 57, rose again to 81, expanded to 108. 'Communists' were then toned down into 'dangerous men,' the list dwindled to one, and finally it disappeared altogether.

His opponents have now caught the disease they are supposed to be fighting. Until recently it was a painful experience to read some of the countless articles exposing McCarthy from the pens of American newspapermen and politicians. They rely almost entirely on innuendo and gossip as worthless as any produced by McCarthy. The mud he has thrown at a hundred transitory targets has been hurled back at him with an equal recklessness and lack of discrimination.

IT may be the contemplation of this squalidly conducted altercation which has inclined many distinguished Americans who are ashamed of McCarthy's methods to hold themselves aloof from the controversy.

Some Americans, notably Mr. Henry Luce, proprietor of Time, Life and Fortune, used to suggest to their English friends that if people would stop fussing about McCarthyism the Senator would end by boring the American public.

Mr. Alastair Forbes wittily commented on this, that he thought Mr. Luce might have exaggerated the capacity of one American to bore another.

Be this as it may, Englishmen have a right and a duty to impress upon their American friends the harm that is being done to America's position in the world; not so much by the antics of Senator McCarthy, as by the failure of so many important American statesmen and newspapers to mobilise public opinion in an adult-minded and effective way against this vexatious eyesore in the land of the free.

What would Americans have thought of Britain's war-time Prime Minister if he had failed to hit back at men like Mr. Aneurin Bevan and Mr. Emanuel Shinwell? One is almost tempted at times to think there are Americans, "free, white and twenty-one," rich and powerful, who are personally afraid of the inconvenience in which Senator McCarthy might involve them with his investigation committee and his droll henchmen, Cohn and Schine, if they were to oppose him.

TO an outside observer it sometimes looks as if there were a maladjustment of the American political system which puts the elected representatives of the people in a position to harass the lives of the ordinary American citizen. It may also be that the technique of mass advertising through radio, press and television, which has been adopted in so unlovely a fashion in the great Republic and largely borrowed for the purpose of politics, has given to unscrupulous and irresponsible individuals a power which can scarcely have been intended by the grave men who drew up the American Constitution.

These, however, are matters which must be settled by the Americans themselves, without raucous and rancorous advice from this side of the Atlantic.

And all the latest news from the other side of the Atlantic suggests that forces capable of cutting Senator McCarthy down to normal dimensions are now taking the field. Mr. Luce's powerful papers, Time and Life, have just recently published objective but highly damaging analyses of the nature of McCarthyism and the senator's true antecedents. Mr. Edward R. Murrow has effectively dramatised the whole issue on TV and there now seem reasonable grounds for hoping that five years from now McCarthy will have joined the late Senator Bilbo and the late Governor Huey Long as nothing worse than historical nightmares.

CBS Commentator Wins Fellowship Commission Awar

Murrow Predicts Extended Power Struggle With Russia

Edward R. Murrow, CBS radio and television commentator, said here last night that the power struggle with Russia may last longer than the life span of any living Americans.

Murrow received the Philadelphia Fellowship Commission's national award at a dinner at the Bellevue-Stratford.

In a wide-ranging speech, Murrow said the harsh fact Americans must accept is that this country is involved in a power stalemate with Russia. "The two sides are chest to chest," he said.

He said that Russia's program for future expansion was outlined in October, 1952, at the All-Party Congress in Moscow. This program is more specific than the program Hitler outlined in his book, "Mein Kampf." Murrow that is to admit that our faith is inferior to that of the enemy.

"We have the power. And if we don't depart from the habits of our heritage, there will be some glory, too."

Mayor Clark presented the award to Murrow. In a short speech, the mayor said, "We meet tonight in an unhappy national climate to honor a distinguished American."

Speaking of Murrow, Clark said, "It takes social courage of a high order for a reporter on the air today to tell the truth to the American people about intolerance and McCarthy."

The Fellowship Commission presented citations to four other men. They went to:

Battle of Trade, Nerves

It calls for a "battle of trade, a battle of nerves." It's a program he said that may last for decades.

"We are in a position where there is no easy solution," Murrow said. "And maybe there is no solution at all."

And then he turned generally to the subject which has put him in headlines in recent weeks; his now-famous television program about Senator McCarthy (R-Wis).

Although he failed to mention McCarthy by name, he said this:

"Millions of persons all over the world are looking to us for a new faith. They regard us as a sort of test tube. And they regard us with some apprehension."

This apprehension is based, Murrow said, on the confusion by Americans of the difference between the external threat and the internal threat of Communism.

Must Not Be Confused

"We must not confuse the business of dissent with disloyalty. We must protect the right of the individual to dissent, his right even to be wrong.

"Many nations have lost their freedom in their attempts to defend it."

Murrow's celebrated dispute with Senator McCarthy is based on Murrow's belief that the Wisconsin senator, through his investigatory methods, is causing disunion within the United States, and threatening traditional American freedoms.

McCarthy will appear on Murrow's program on WCAU-TV April 6 to answer the commentator's charges.

Diplomatic Recognition

"We must also get our thinking straight," Murrow said, "on the subject of diplomatic recognition." He quoted Sir Winston Churchill's statement that recognition is not the same as conferring a compliment.

"We must not force China more firmly into Russia's orbit," he said, implying that Red China should receive diplomatic recognition. The Eisenhower Administration is opposed to recognition at this time.

Murow noted that this country's role in world affairs has changed in the past 10 years.

"Responsibility never was thrust upon a nation with so little warning," said Murrow. "We came into our full inheritance at a tender age."

And how have we done as the world's most powerful nation? he asked.

Cites Accomplishments

"We saved Greece and Turkey from Communism. We probably saved Western Europe from Communism. We originated and led the first armed coalition fighting for all free nations in Korea. We sustained our economy.

"In the last few years, we lived a life—and not an apology."

He asked, "Who could choose a better time to live? We in the United States are the pivot upon which history will turn. Many nations have lived and died without the opportunity to be decisive. The time for the culmination of our history, our doctrine, our dogma, is now.

"Let us not say that our ideals will not emerge triumphant, for that is to admit that our faith is inferior to that of the enemy.

"We have the power. And if we don't depart from the habits of our heritage, there will be some glory, too."

Mayor Clark presented the award to Murrow. In a short speech, the mayor said, "We meet tonight in an unhappy national climate to honor a distinguished American."

John Cogley, executive editor of the Commonweal Magazine, a Catholic publication.

James L. Hicks, New York correspondent and feature writer of the Afro-American newspapers.

Morton Wishengard, writer of radio's "Eternal Light" programs and television's "Frontiers of Faith."

The dinner was attended by 1,130 persons—the largest turnout since the Fellowship Commission was founded 12 years ago.

Joseph A. Daroff, membership enrollment chairman, reported this year's drive is running 20 per cent ahead of last year's. He said anticipated receipts are $125,000.

Emotional Impact of Show Surprises Even Murrow

By LEO MISHKIN

"There was nothing in that show," said the black-browed man in the shirt sleeves, staring moodily out of the window, "there was nothing in that show that I haven't been saying over and over again on the air for a long time past." He swiveled around in his chair and buzzed for a secretary. "I'm all out of cigarets," he murmured when she came in. "See if you can get me a pack, will you?"

He put his feet up on the desk and drew those celebrated eyebrows together again. "Remember that two-hour Ford show last spring?" he went on. "Remember I came on at the end with Oscar Hammerstein, 2d, and said a couple of words or so? Well, what I said then is practically the same thing I said a week ago Tuesday. It's the same thing I've been saying on the news program I do for CBS radio, the same thing other people say on 'This I Believe,' the same thing I've been saying on 'See It Now' with that Radulovich story and the Indianapolis show."

NOT A POLITICAL FIGURE

The secretary brought in a pack of cigarets and he ripped them open almost absent-mindedly. "There is one thing, however, I'd like to get clear," Edward R. Murrow continued. "I do not consider myself a political figure because of it. I am not affiliated with any political party, and I certainly do not want to seek any sort of political office.

"When I did that program a week ago Tuesday I was careful to open it with the statement that this was going to be a controversial program; I ran it strictly according to the CBS ground rules. And last week, when we followed it up with that program on Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, at that hearing in Washington, I was again just reporting the facts."

NOTABLES AT VIEWING

Then he arose. "Look," he said, "I've got to go downstairs and look at a hunk of film with some people. You want to come along?"

The "some people" Murrow referred to turned out to be Samuel Goldwyn, the movie producer; Paul Hoffman, former director of the ECA, and Maurice T. Moore, chairman of the board of Time magazine. And the "hunk of film" run off in the CBS viewing room was the kinescope of this week's "See It Now," showing the interrogation of Mrs. Moss by the Un-American Activities subcommittee.

The kinescope record concluded with the words from the President, and Murrow's customary "Good night . . . And good luck," and the lights came on again. The visitors prepared to leave, congratulating the black-browed man in the shirt sleeves on the job he was doing, slapping him on the back, shaking his hand, telling him what a great service he was performing for the country. He stared at each of them in turn from his deep-set eyes. "Thanks . . . thank you," he kept muttering. "Well, somebody's got to do it."

FRIGHTENED AT THOUGHT

Out in the hallway, waiting for the elevator to take him back to his own office, he drew savagely on another cigaret. "I don't know," he said. "This is something I never experienced before. The emotional impact of that show, the words I used, coming right on top of those film clips—I suppose that's what did it more than anything else. Radio—in radio, I could deal with ideas, with abstract thoughts and concepts. In television—up to now, that is—I've just been reporting the facts. But now . . . now . . ." His voice trailed off, his eyes gazed into space through the swirl of blue smoke. "I don't know," he muttered again. "What frightens me is that somebody might come along and use this thing, television, for evil . . . I don't know."

The elevator door opened and Murrow ground out the cigaret in a receptacle. "Look," he said, sticking out his hand, "I'm sorry things are so hectic these days, but you know how it is. Come back and see me again after a while, will you? We'll talk some more about it." The elevator door closed behind him and he disappeared. Behind, in the hallway, there was still a faint trace of that blue smoke hanging in the air, and through it you would still see those black brows, the deep-set eyes and that organ tone voice saying, "I don't know . . . it frightens me . . ."

Vicious Bigot at Work

By HOWARD RUSHMORE

GOVERNMENT officials here and in Washington are receiving a vicious anti-Semitic document, "Zionist Network" by Jack B. Tenney, State Senator of California and candidate for vice-president in 1952 on Gerald L. K. Smith's "Christian" Nationalist party.

Tenney, once chairman of the California State Un-American Activities committee, has gone over completely to the Smith group of bigots. He was solidly trounced by his own party recently when the county Republican organization in Los Angeles refused to endorse him for re-election.

REDS SAY PRESIDENT SUPPORTS M'CARTHY

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, March 10—Pravda, in the longest and most detailed discussion of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy which it has yet published, asserted today that President Eisenhower "on the whole supported McCarthy."

The newspaper christened the Senator the "chief troubadour of American fascism" and said there was nothing new or original about him. "McCarthy hasn't invented anything himself," said Pravda. "He simply has zealously followed in the footsteps of Hitler and Mussolini."

Today's article referred to the Wisconsin Senator as "briber, speculator and defrauder."

The reason for Senator McCarthy in Pravda's opinion is that "owners of American monopolies" who guide the Republican party have found in the Senator a most useful weapon with which to assure themselves of power and attack progressive, liberal and trade union elements in the United States.

Pravda credited the American trade union movement with being a "powerful organization" which now unites more than half of all American workers and which has aroused fear on the part of "monopolies." The real reason in Pravda's opinion that President Eisenhower's Cabinet cannot refuse to support Senator McCarthy's activities is that he and other investigators hold leading posts in the "offensive of American reaction against the social achievements of the workers of the country."

was, until the shooting three weeks ago, surely the most dramatic production the House chamber ever staged. With his homecoming we were launched into what we called "The Great Debate," details of which most of us don't now recall. For several weeks it appeared the whole future of Western Civilization might hinge on whether MacArthur was listened to or not.

There were days when typesetters and broadcasters the world over bore the words of MacArthur to a waiting populace.

So much has happened since — so many other great debates — so many new heroes — that seeing MacArthur's name in a news item seemed startling.

Perhaps there is a lesson here for both those who fight so hard for fame and those who worry or applaud about who, for the moment, is the most famous.

Time, indeed, marches on.

The Show Of The Year

Last week, in his television program, Ed Murrow used the senator's own recorded words against him, devastatingly to show Joe McCarthy with his pretenses down. The commentator offered the congressman an equal amount of time for rebuttal. The invitation has been accepted for the evening of April 6.

Assuming it will be a duet rather than a solo, this certainly will be the TV show of the year. The impending joint appearance of two such master showmen, in their respective ways, is something no one within range of a receiving set will want to miss. The audience it will have will leave Milton, Lucy, Jackie, and Ed gnashing their teeth.

The millions who tune in that Tuesday evening, however, probably are doomed to tune off with a feeling of bewilderment and bafflement.

Ed may be depended upon to ask the penetrating questions. Joe may be depended upon even more to avoid the precise answers. He may be depended upon further to start talking so furiously and fast that there will not be time for many queries.

It was deponent's good fortune once to spend several hours in a closed session in which a dozen Ed Murrows were out-doing themselves in endeavoring to obtain some exact information from the senator. However skillfully they swung their hammers, they never were able to nail him down. The only thing the audience found out was that McCarthy has a genius for not being hooked on any public platform.

Southwest Breezes

St. Patrick's day passed and nary a spud did we plant.

Joe McCarthy expresses fear that Secretary Benson will cause the downfall of the Republican party next November. Look who's worrying about wrecking the GOP.

Change in White House

He may be a rough and tough army guy but look at the restraint President Eisenhower used in replying to Democratic attacks on the GOP and their claims about the tax bill. "They are in error," said the president. Turn back two years and think what the then president would have said.

the hydrogen bomb has been adopted and that the United States, with its allies would retaliate with any weapons and in any place of its own choosing.

Did this mean that, if a "little war" broke out in Korea or Indochina or the Near East, the "massive retaliation" would apply? Not at all. Each situation would be dealt with in the circumstances involved. It is not necessarily to be inferred that any atom bombs to be assumed therefore would not be. Admiral Radford says it is desirable to keep the enemy guessing.

Is the armament of the United States adequate to carry on a "little war" and yet maintain enough strength for a big war if the "little war" became a big war? The answer to this question has not been determined by anyone. Out of the uncertainty which it produces has come the debate between the heads of the armed services as to whether they have been given enough money to buy the weapons and to ican military action makes it unnecessary to ask the consent of both houses of Congress for a declaration of war.

What then did President Eisenhower mean when he told his press conference recently that America wasn't going to become involved in the Indo-China war and that, if we did, he would first ask authorization from Congress? The answer is that Indo-China is not covered by any mutual-defense treaty to which the United States is a party and that the situation is not even like Korea. This means that, if Eisenhower had been President in June 1950, he might have ordered American troops into action as an implied obligation of the United Nations charter but at the same time he would have asked for a formal resolution of ratification by Congress immediately afterward.

All this boils down to the confident belief that a "hot war" is not on the horizon, and may not be for a long time to come provided the United States maintains its armament program and its present policy of non-appeasement and resoluteness.

Big Firms Advise On Tax Bill

WASHINGTON — One amazing thing about the current 875-page proposed new tax bill is that Ways and Means committeemen — outside Chairman Dan Reed — have not known who the big business experts were who worked on it. It has not been unusual to have big business experts work on tax bills in the past. Their advice, as well as that of labor and consumer groups, was always welcomed. But the advice was always given in public sessions so that everyone knew about it.

This time it was given secretly, and Democratic members of the Ways and Means committee hitherto have not been able to ascertain who they were.

However they have just now discovered that the Jones-Laughlin Steel company and Westinghouse were on the committee which wrote the corporate reorganization sections of the tax bill. They have also ascertained that Bethlehem Steel and General Foods helped write the pensions section which reinstate the provisions of 12 years ago whereby only top executives of a corporation can have tax-free funds set aside for pensions. Small-scale employees cannot benefit.

Congressmen also learned Pearson that Standard Oil of New Jersey helped write the section on consolidated tax returns.

Roy Cohn's family is not unacquainted with the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune. His grandfather was mixed up in the Bank of the United States scandal. When Roy joined the New York National Guard a friend asked him why. "To get out of the draft," replied Cohn, who can be very frank. "What makes you think that will get you out?" asked the friend. "I'm going to be in the selective service office of the National Guard," was Roy's reply. . . Cohn took his exam to enter the National Guard in 1950, the year the Korean war started.

While working in Washington, Cohn managed to get a special dispensation from the Washington District of Columbia guard to drill with them. In the past this has almost never been given. . . Juiciest portions of the Army report on Cohn-McCarthy-Schine were omitted. The original report was about twice as long as that the army made public.

Air Secretary Talbott almost spilled his breakfast coffee when he read the recent Washington Merry-Go-Round account of the closed-door dressing-down given him by Reps. Harry Sheppard of California and George Mahon of Texas.

One of their colleagues, Rep. Clair Engle of California, an Air Force reservist, was all set to patch up congressional differences with the temperamental Talbott, but got a phone call from the Pentagon that things were still too hot to smoke the peace pipe.

Sen. John Butler of Maryland is a man who, when he has convictions, has 'em. And not even the White House can budge him. . . Butler felt strongly about the Bricker amendment, resented the expert lobbying job performed by White House minions in persuading various senators to switch their votes. . . So, when the same minions argued with him for 45 minutes not to tie Alaskan statehood to Hawaii, Butler refused to budge. He voted that statehood for both should go hand-in-hand.

Two cabinet officers are squabbling over who should take over the South American rubber program. Foreign-aid boss Harold Stassen has been trying to develop a strategic natural rubber industry in Latin America to prepare for possible loss of Southeast Asia to the Reds. His agency however is now going out of business. . . Secretary of Commerce Weeks thinks the Agriculture Department should take over the rubber program. But Secretary of Agriculture Benson insists its should go to the Commerce department . . . Reason for the after-you-Alphonse attitude is that whoever gets the rubber program will have to dip into his budget to pay for it.

dren, all males, all grown up, all with good jobs who will love their old stepdaddy so much they'll support him as he wants to become accustomed to being supported.

That's sweet, I think.

I know a man who claims he married the gal because she owned a Japanese print and a book he had always wanted to read but had never been able to purchase, it being out of print.

That's tender, too, the man probably didn't have much fun after marriage because his wife was too intellectual.

The fifth man I interviewed in this survey came up with the most comprehensive objective in picking a wife.

Said he:

I want a woman who can cook, will always be well groomed at breakfast, will never hang her undies in the bathroom, will never backseat drive, will never nag, will earn her own living, will mow the lawn weekly and will have no in-laws who might want to borrow money.

Referring back three paragraphs the phrase should not be "comprehensive objective" but should be "impossible objective."

Out of the Past:

Education in Moscow

By E. F. TOMPKINS

SENATOR McCARTHY won a polemical victory by reminding Mr. Edward R. Murrow of that broadcaster's association in the 1930's with the Moscow State University.

Mr. Murrow had to defend himself. In his appearances, he talked about himself rather than the Senator. However, after a lapse of 20 years he remembered things imperfectly. This is of consequence, since the Institute of International Education, also involved, now selects the Fulbright scholars who go abroad at the expense of American taxpayers.

The facts may be traced in propaganda prospectuses issued by Intourist, the Soviet travel agency; in "Who's Who in America" (1942-43); and in Reports of the aforesaid Institute. The Moscow pamphlets were overladen with fulsome praise of Russian Communism.

Listed as Adviser

Senator McCarthy remarked that in 1935 Mr. Murrow was listed as an American adviser to a Summer session of the Moscow University, which taught and advocated "the violent overthrow of the existing social order."

Mr. Murrow reported that he was such an adviser in 1935, but that he did not go to Russia, and that the Summer Session was not held.

The facts:

Mr. Murrow was assistant director of the Institute of International Education, and chief of its foreign offices, from 1932 to 1935.

According to Intourist, the Summer Session of the Moscow University operated within that period. Called the "American Summer School in Russia," it was organized and held its first session in 1933 (and Murrow was a sponsor then.) It "originated as the result of an experiment conducted . . . by a group of American educators."

Then began the connection with the Institute of International Education (Dr. Stephen Duggan, director; Edward R. Murrow, assistant director). Intourist said:

"In order to insure close cooperation with American educational institutions, and with students and educators in the United States, an advisory relationship was established in 1933 with the Institute of International Education.

"At the same time, a National Advisory Council of prominent American educators was formed by Prof. Stephen Duggan to assist the Institute of International Education in its advisory capacity."

Member of 1933 Council

Murrow was a member of the 1933 Council; and this was the Council to which Murrow still belonged in 1935, as Senator McCarthy said. Another member was Prof. George S. Counts, of Teachers College, Columbia University, then controversially famous as the author of a revolutionary pamphlet, "Dare the School Build a New Social Order?" and an adulatory book, "The Soviet Challenge to America."

Intourist recorded that "the second Summer Session" was held in 1934, that 212 students attended, and that—

"Among them were undergraduates, teachers, principals, professors, psychologists, social workers, physicians, nurses and artists."

Soviet Russia was gratified. Intourist said "the undeniable success of these ventures" prompted the formation of "an Anglo-American Section" to carry on with "the full support of the foremost educators and scientists of the Soviet Union."

Meanwhile, American students of 1933-34 complained that every Soviet teacher in every course tiresomely gave them Communist indoctrination. Dr. Duggan fixed that, he informed the Institute of International Education, by having only one course in Communism, compulsory for all students.

The 1935 session was projected accordingly. The Hearst Newspapers exposed the scheme in February (1935) and the Session was not held. But the collaboration was by no means as casual as Mr. Murrow pretends.

Diplomatic Moves Peril Geneva Success

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE

WASHINGTON.—A series of mysterious diplomatic moves were today piling up to threaten success of the Geneva Far East conference.

They are:

The Republic of (South) Korea has not accepted a formal invitation to attend.

Syngman Rhee, ROK president, has been silent on the matter of coming to Washington himself, or to delegate an envoy, to confer with the American State Department on the agenda.

The exchange of ratification of a mutual security pact between ROK and the U. S. has been indefinitely delayed. The ROK Embassy said it is prepared to sign, but the U. S. has postponed ratification "indefinitely."

Red China is reluctant to attend the Geneva parley unless its foreign minister be considered one of a "Big Five" and seated on equality with the ministers of the U. S., Great Britain, France and Russia.

Red Russia is attempting to delay the conference beyond April 26, the date originally agreed upon.

South Africa Out

The Republic of South Africa, one of the nations fighting on the side of the U. S. in Korea, has notified the U. S. it will have nothing further to do with the Far East problem and will not attend.

Behind the scenes, Secretary of State Dulles is attempting to iron out the differences and have the four power meeting at Geneva as scheduled, with Red China attending as a belligerent on matters concerning Korea and as an interested nation regarding the war in Indochina.

However, the U. S. has to deal with Red China through the American Embassy in Moscow. The Russians are insisting that Red China be seated at the Geneva conference as an equal.

Pro-Communist Study:

'Seminar' in Russia

By E. F. TOMPKINS

HERE lie two brochures issued by or for the Soviet Government to drum up student trade for the Communist "American Summer School in Moscow" in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

One pamphlet advertises the 1933 session. The other is devoted to the 1935 Seminar. In both years, Edward R. Murrow—Columbia Broadcasting System's anti-McCarthyite—is officially listed as a member of an American "Advisory" group. More will be heard of this, as the McCarthy Committee has original and authentic copies of the documents, and Mr. Murrow himself has compelled the Committee to make proper use of them.

Seminar's Goals

These booklets—to which Mr. Murrow obviously gave his personal sponsorship—contain some interesting texts. The 1933 issue, titled "The First Russian Seminar," has a passage headed "Seminar Aims." It says:

"The Russian Revolution has brought on one of the greatest social upheavals of all times. Socialism has been given microscopic trials before, but never on such a Gargantuan scale. Now, in our own times and under our own eyes, the world's most important experiment in Communism is taking place. The inspirational opportunities for study and observation are unlimited.

"Would you like to have been an observer during the French Revolution? The present opportunity in Russia is of equal significance. The First Russian Seminar will take advantage of this opportunity. . . .

"To the thoughtful American citizen, anxious to learn the utmost possible about the ways and means of improving our present civic-economic organization, the First Russian Seminar will make a strong appeal.

"The itinerary is comprehensive."

That ballyhoo contained a little lie along with the big ones.

The "comprehensive" itinerary in Russia was only a few side-trips under the leadership of Intourist, the official Soviet travel agency, to some tourist show-off places.

And what would Americans have learned about improving our "civic-economic organization"?

Would they have learned how "brainwashing" is done and purges are executed? Would they have learned how to starve five million farmers and how to condemn fifteen million political opponents to hard labor and slow death in slave camps?

If not that, what would American students and educators have learned at Mr. Murrow's First Russian Seminar?

Advisory Committee

In any event, the American dupes had American as well as Russian guidance. The 1933 brochure said:

"Leaders chosen for the most part from the Advisory Committee . . . will accompany the Seminar and supplement the general sight-seeing programs with special lectures, talks and informal discussions."

Following are the names of the American "Advisory Committee" in 1933:

Stuart Chase, New York City; Kenneth Conant, Associate Professor of Architecture, Harvard University; Samuel H. Cross, Assistant Professor of Slavic Languages and Literature, Harvard University; Henry W. L. Dana, Cambridge; George M. Day, Professor of Economics and Sociology, Occidental College; Samuel N. Harper, Professor of Russian Language and Institutions, The University of Chicago; Henry I. Harriman, President, United States Chamber of Commerce; Bruce C. Hopper, Assistant Professor of Government, Harvard University; Walter W. Hyde, Professor of Greek and Ancient History, University of Pennsylvana; Edward R. Murrow, Assistant Director, Institute of International Education, Inc., New York City; Frank Nowak, Professor of Slavic History, Boston University; Grove Patterson, Editor of the Toledo Blade, Toledo; D. C. Poole, School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University; Geroid T. Robinson, Associate Professor of History, Columbia University; Tredwill Smith, New York City; Whiting Williams, Cleveland.

Dear Mr. Murrow:

I want to add my congratulations to the thousands you have received for your fine program on the Senator from Wisconsin.

May I offer a suggestion for a somewhat similar program? Why don't you focus sometime on McCarthyism as it manifests itself in a local community, somewhat in the fashion of your fine show on the young reserve officer in Detroit? I have in mind a particular situation, which is at least indicated in the enclosed copy of a news story which appeared in the Trenton Times. It has a background, however, which would require some explanation.

This is one of many similar situations to be found today in scores of American communities from coast to coast, and I think you would be doing another distinguished public service if you would indicate what is really involved in local situations of this kind.

Best wishes,

Carey McWilliams

'INSIDIOUS' FORCES MEETING SHOWS IT CAN HAPPEN HERE

It can happen here.

It did, last night in the auditorium of St. Mary's Cathedral.

Before more than 100 people, a pale young man pulled a German Luger and a P-38 automatic out of a brief case.

"These," he said, "are weapons I brought back from the front lines of Germany."

He dropped the Luger on the speaker's table. Clunk! Except for this clunk, there wasn't a sound in the place.

He slammed down the P-38. Clunk!

He paused, then said, "A bullet in one of these will kill you."

"Holy smokes!" somebody whispered in Row 3.

Then the young man held up a copy of The Nation, a weekly magazine. "This, too," he said, "is a weapon of destructiveness."

And that was how it started -- two hours and 26 minutes of "anti-Communism."

Three men spoke, sometimes to enthusiastic applause, about almost every subject under the sun -- except Communism. The moderator, Frederick H. Grein, brought along the two revolvers and two other speakers, Frederick G. Cartwright and David C. Boswell.

Cartwright of Englewood is a New York investment broker. Grein, of Tenafly, is vice commander of the Catholic War Veterans of New Jersey. Boswell identified himself as an engineer "fighting a one-man battle against Communism, like Herb Philbrick."

The meeting, a panel discussion, was sponsored by the Catholic Young Adult Club of Trenton.

The three men came down from North Jersey to talk about the Communist menace. They did not mention Karl Marx, nor Stalin, nor Malenkov. They never defined the word Communism.

Instead they heaped abuse on President Eisenhower, Senator H. Alexander Smith, Senator Robert C. Hendrickson, former Governor Alfred E. Driscoll, Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, among many others.

When the meeting was over, a priest in the rear of the hall had this to say: "I have never heard such nonsense in all my life."

A public school teacher (who is a Catholic) said, "The frightening thing is that the audience actually applauded what these men said."

The subject was "Insidious Forces Trying to Undermine America."

Here are a few of the statements "which we can prove" made by one or all of the speakers:

At the behest of ex-Governor Driscoll, Communist teachers in New Jersey's public school system were "whitewashed."

It does not matter if you injure the reputation of an innocent person if your aim in reporting that person as a Communist is to fight Communism "because the good outweighs the bad."

The United World Federalist movement is a Communist plot.

No one should ever vote for Senator Smith because he once voted for Dean Acheson.

The American Civil Liberties Union includes the top Reds of America.

Senator Hendrickson is a dangerous man because he is tied up with the World Federalists.

The American Legion has been used, unwittingly, to foster Communist propaganda. So have PTA's and Leagues of Women Voters.

"Since when is America a democracy?" Boswell said at one point. "We're not a democracy, we're a republic."

Very few people were actually called Communist. But many were described by the speakers as "identified Communist" or "suspected subversive" or "tied up with the Reds." The speakers did not say who had done the identifying or the suspecting or the tying up.

Among those painted with the same brush were Edward R. Murrow of TV and radio, and Howard Fast.

As for President Eisenhower, Boswell said: "When Eisenhower was president of Columbia University, I wrote him a letter. I told him to fire every Communist on the Columbia faculty. And, do you know what? Eisenhower never answered my letter!"

A great deal of the criticism was directed at what Boswell called the "700 liberal newspapers of America." After leaving the stage, Boswell identified the Trenton Times as one of these. "As far as I'm concerned," Boswell added, "liberal means un-American."

The major target was the New York Times. "It doesn't hurt you to read the Times," said Boswell, "any more than it hurts to read any subversive paper."

The New York Times, according to Boswell, "has done more to further the Communist cause than any paper in America." He charged that there are 126 card-carrying Communists in that paper's Sunday section alone.

Boswell characterized the New York Herald-Tribune (Republican) as "the Uptown Daily Worker." Other papers labeled pro-Communist or anti-anti-Communist: the Newark News, the Bergen Record, the Englewood Press-Journal.

Grein, the man with the revolvers, at one point held up two textbooks. These were Communist-inspired, he said, and they were being used in "our schools." He did not say Trenton schools.

Other publications linked with the Communists by Grein were: McCall's Magazine; the Compass, defunct newspaper; The Saturday Review of Literature. In the same breath he mentioned The Daily Worker, a Communist publication.

Grein and Cartwright both suggested that The Nation be thrown out of public school libraries in Trenton if it is found there.

They also proposed that an "Americanism committee" be formed in Trenton to do the sort of anti-Communist work the three men were doing.

This committee, they said, should demand that the Legislature form a permanent unit to investigate Communism in New Jersey schools.

The appearance of Grein, Cartwright and Boswell in Trenton was a continuance of an "anti-Communist crusade" they have been waging in New Jersey. In several North Jersey towns Cartwright has provoked stormy sessions -- one described by himself as a "riot" with his speeches.

After making a careful study of Cartwright and some of his associates, the Newark News reported that "almost all the recent 'incidents' have a thread of connection and that thread leads back to a much publicized incident in Englewood eight years ago."

In most cases, Ted Hall of the News reported, the incidents have centered on public schools.

In East Orange a teacher was criticized for using pro-Communist pamphlets as teaching aids in a course intended to show students how to spot propaganda.

In Summit, school authorities were asked to delete from a school pledge a reference toward citizenship.

In Tenafly the school curriculum and some textbooks were attacked as un-American.

According to officials of the Nutley Human Relations Council, Cartwright "all but wrecked" that organization with inflammatory speeches.

Organized League

Cartwright has been a leading figure in the Englewood censorship incidents. To carry his campaign he organized the Englewood Anti-Communist League. Grein joined Cartwright in the Tenafly criticism and on other occasions.

When challenged here last night about their possible connection with Allen A. Zoll, Grein denied any such tie up. So did Cartwright.

But it is a well known fact that Cartwright has publicly endorsed Zoll. And Zoll appeared in Englewood to speak in behalf of Cartwright's Anti-Communist League.

Zoll was for years the head of American Patriots Inc., a group since branded as Fascist by the Attorney General. Zoll has been identified with anti-public school disturbances in Denver, Pasadena, Scarsdale and Port Washington, N.Y. Zoll is an associate and supporter of Merwin K. Hart, a super-patriot who writes for Common Sense, termed an anti-Semitic weekly edited by Conde McGinley in Union City, N. J.

In most of the North Jersey disturbances, Cartwright and associates have used established organizations to promote their ends. In Englewood it was a Catholic War Veterans post. In Montclair the Sons of the American Revolution attempted to censor public library books. In Summit the VFW sought censorship of the school pledge. The local spokesman in Nutley was a newspaper editor.

Hope for Future Meetings

Several oblique and direct attempts were made last night to use the same system here. The speakers hoped there will be future meetings of this kind in Trenton. They offered to help out. They urged formation of "Americanism" committees. They proposed an all-out attack on The Nation magazine.

The idea, they made it clear, was for the Catholic Young Adult Club of Trenton to carry the ball. For anyone interested in such an idea, they said, they would be available even after the question-answer period.

The heated question-answer period produced almost as many extreme charges as the formal talks. This is how it went:

Someone in the audience asked a question about Communism.

Boswell spoke for 11 minutes and 39 seconds in answer, and this is the gist of what he said: Although I am a Mason, one of my two sons married a Catholic girl named Murphy. I have no prejudice against any race or religion. Boswell added that he says his prayers every night.

Another question concerned Senator Joseph McCarthy and the Army.

Boswell's answer: "I believe Senator McCarthy (about General Zwicker) because he usually has the evidence. I know McCarthy personally and he is one of the finest statesmen who ever wore shoe leather in Washington."

Boswell urged those present to get a program of Americanism started. "I urge you to arouse your apathy," he said.

As for criticism of Senator McCarthy, Boswell said: "If you think McCarthy is wrong, don't hesitate. Write and ask him."

Boswell praised Louis Budenz, now an anti-Communist and former editor of the Daily Worker. He also said that the Roman Catholic church is the only organization anywhere fighting Communism.

STRAIGHT-UP AIRPLANE

The Navy today lifted the curtain of secrecy on this fantastic new fighter plane which is able to take off and land vertically. The plane, built by Lockheed, is powered by twin jet turbines. It needs neither runways nor carrier decks to operate. It uses its four-pointed X-shaped tail for a landing gear. Arrow points to pilot. (Story, B-12; other photos, A-10.)

What Price Charity?

Racketeers Fatten On Drives to Aid Children and Needy

This is the first of three articles detailing organized efforts of charity racketeers to fleece the public, their methods of operation, and the safeguards set up to protect reputable charity appeals.

By TOM CATON

Like a horrid cancer in the heart of society, charity racketeering is recognized as a $100,000,000 annual fraud on the people of America.

Los Angeles city for 40 years has been a model for efficient policing of a problem that amounts to a national scandal, has an enviable record for protecting its citizens, but still—

There are many individuals who, despite rigid controls, would make the urban population a happy hunting ground for chiselers anxious to take food from the mouths of babies, medical aid from the aged and infirm, and hope from the hearts of the blind and afflicted.

And right now is the kickoff time for the slippery characters and hypocrites who live high off the generosity of others. They are getting ready for their annual kill, now that Christmas bills are out of the way and there is a spare dollar in the public's pocketbook.

'Boiler Room Boys' Ready

The "boiler room boys" who try a hit-run and high pressure type of fund appeal are on their mark. The "gimmick" artists who want to pan off a little memento in return for a contribution are ready with their carpetbags. The mail order artists are ready with mimeograph and honeyed words.

"Now is harvest time for the charity racketeer," declares Allan Coulston of the Better Business Bureau of Los Angeles. "If he can, he wants to beat respectable charity appeals to the punch."

Los Angeles will find them ready, however. The City Social Service Department, under management of Mrs. Evelyn Spaulding, does nothing but crimp their style. Those fly-by-nights who try to make a quick score are liable to find the teeth of state and municipal statutes clamped tightly around their little plan.

Jail terms and fines await those convicted of making false appeals to line their own pockets.

Biscailuz Picks New Vice Chief

In a shake-up, Sheriff Eugene W. Biscailuz today removed Capt. Robert L. Summers as head of the vice squad and put him in charge of the Montrose sub-station.

Sheriff Biscailuz didn't say that the transfer was because Summers' squad had arrested six $100-a-night party girls in a "raid" last Wednesday at Malibu.

But it was recalled that last Friday the sheriff criticized the "bad judgment' 'of the vice detail for using Deputy Sheriff Lockwood Marshall's rented Trancas Beach home for the six arrests, and said he would announce "disciplinary action" today.

Led by Captain Summers, nine deputies, posing as car dealers on a "spree," took the "party girls" from Hollywood to the beach home rented by Marshall, a so-called "millionaire cop."

After the girls were paid $100 each in marked money, and did a nude dance, they were placed under arrest. In their report, the deputies said that they had been "guided" to the beach home by the girls, but Summers later admitted it was the other way around.

Biscailuz immediately ordered an investigation and stated:

"I'm against any form of entrapment."

The sheriff names Capt. Fred G. Timbres to succeed the deposed Summers as vice squad head.

Fimbres will be succeeded as head of the narcotics squad by Capt. Kenneth E. Irving of the headquarters detective division to which Capt. W. R. Tiernan was reassigned from the Montrose job given to Summers.

"The transfers were made for the good of the department in keeping with an existing personnel policy to further the efficiency of the service," Biscailuz said.

He said that any other changes in the personnel of the vice squad "will be up to Captain Fimbres," with whom Biscailuz said he would confer.

Two Lost Boys Safe In Mountain Ordeal

Unharmed and in good condition, two boys who had been lost two days and nights in the snow-capped San Jacinto Mountains trudged into Palm Springs today, thus halting a wide ground-air search.

Kenneth Nill jr., 13, and Keith Reekie jr., 14, both of Oceanside, had covered more than 25 miles on foot in freezing temperatures.

They got lost Saturday morning while on a hunting trip with Richard Miller, 14, of Palm Springs, who returned to his home last night.

Young Miller walked in over the eastern slope of the mountains, while the other two made for the western slope, toward Idyllwild, then doubled back in their tracks for Palm Springs.

A half dozen planes and scores of men on foot and horseback had been searching for them for the past 24 hours.

VICTIMS OF TEENAGED BANDITS

Norman Kaplan, left, owner of Jerry's Market at 2301 South Hoover street, shows how he and three men got out of icebox after they were locked in it by two teenaged bandits, one of them only 13 or 14 year sold, who robbed the market og $1500 in cash and $4000 in checks today. Other victims are, lef to right: Richard Longshore, Vince Perno and Marshal Kaplan.

Bandit, Aged 13, Robs L. A. Market

Two teenaged boys, one of them only 13 or 14 years old, held up Jerry's Market at 2301 South Hoover street today and escaped with $1500 in cash and $3000 to $4000 in checks, after locking four men in the icebox.

Victims of the holdup were Norman Kaplan and his brother, Marshall, owners of the market; Richard Longshore, the butcher, and Vince Perno, who was making a milk delivery.

Both wearing handkerchiefs as masks and both armed with revolvers, the two boys approached Norman Kaplan as he was carrying the cashbox from the safe.

"Everybody be nice and nobody will be hurt," the elder bandit told them.

All four were herded into the icebox behind the beer and dairy products compartments.

Norman Kaplan released the others, after several chill moments, by climbing through an icebox compartment door with a broken lock.

The older bandit was described as 18 or 19 years old, soft-spoken, 5 feet 10, 155 pounds; the younger, 13 or 14 years old, 5 feet 4, 120 pounds.

Spur Bill for 'Vote at 18'

WASHINGTON, March 15 (INS)—The Senate Judiciary Committee today approved a constitutional amendment that would give 18-year-olds the right to vote.

The committee sent the legislation to the Senate floor by a vote of 7 to 3. President Eisenhower in his State of the Union message asked Congress to extend the voting right to those between the ages of 18 and 21.

Supreme Court in Ruling

WASHINGTON, March 15 (AP)—The Supreme Court today denied Alabama and Rhode Island permission to file suits alleging Congress violated the Constitution when it conceded title to oil-rich lands to coastal states.

The two states, in seeking to challenge validity of a 1953 Act, contended it deprived their citizens of equitable interests in oil resources estimated to be worth $50,000,000,000, plus $62,000,000 in royalties and revenues impounded by the United States.

Rejecting the request from Alabama and Rhode Island, the court's majority opinion declared that the power of Congress to do as it wishes with public lands "is without limitation."

The unsigned opinion, known as "per curiam" opinion, cited six previous Supreme Court decisions and gave various quotations from those decisions in support of its holding today.

DISQUALIFY WARREN

The court's vote today was 6-2. Justices Black and Douglas wrote separate dissenting opinions.

Chief Justice Warren disqualified himself. Warren gave no reason, but presumably it was because of his interest, while governor of California, in getting Congress to enact the 1953 submerged Lands Act.

With Black and Douglas opposed and Warren disqualified, the majority was made up of Justices Reed, Frankfurter, Jackson, Burton, Clark and Minton.

Today's decision may not finally dispose of the issue.

Arkansas has pending in a lower federal court here a suit which challenges the right of coastal states to the submerged oil and the impounded funds.

RIGHT OF CONGRESS

Today's majority opinion cited previous decisions in which it pointed out that the Constitution provides that "the Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory and other property belonging to the United States."

Rain in Sight Tomorrow

Today's sunny weather may be followed by rain tomorrow afternoon or evening from a storm which is spreading southward from Oregon over coastal and mountain sections. The forecast:

"Sunny today. Clouds and a little warmer tonight. Considerable cloudiness and cooler Tuesday with chance of rain in the afternoon or evening."

High temperature today was 70 after a low of 47 at 6:21 a. m. Visibility was nearly 40 miles after breezes dissipated haze and smoke.

A SHILELAH FOR McCARTHY

Senator Joseph McCarthy wields a shilelah presented to him by the St. Joe's Club of Manitouoc, Wis., just before he flew back to Washington for a showdown with the army. McCarthy later accepted Radio-Tv Commentator Edward R. Murrow's offer to free air time April 6 to answer Murrow's criticism of McCarthy on a television program.

McCarthy To Spur Army Quiz

WASHINGTON, March 15 (INS) — Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland said today Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's Investigations Subcommittee must "proceed immediately" to "get all the facts" concerning army charges of pressure by McCarthy and Roy M. Cohn.

Knowland told newsmen the "matter should be proceeded with quickly." Reminded that McCarthy leaves Washington Wednesday for a series of speaking engagements that will keep him away for the rest of the week, he added:

"This is of sufficient importance that all members of the committee should want to

WASHINGTON, March 15 (AP) — Senator McCarthy, Republican of Wisconsin, today accepted an invitation to reply on television to criticisms from Edward R. Murrow, CBS commentator.

McCarthy said he would be willing to appear either March 23 or April 6, but preferred the latter date.

Murrow charged last week in a TV program that McCarthy, in investigating alleged Communists, had repeatedly stepped over the line between "investigating and persecuting." He offered to give McCarthy an opportunity to reply on the same program later.

MOSCOW SCHOOL ISSUE

In accepting today, McCarthy told Murrow in a telegram:

"If I am correct in my position that you have consciously served the Communist cause it is very important for your listeners to have the clear-cut documented facts so that they can decide whether or not you are truthful as you attempt to make out or are deliberately misrepresenting the facts."

McCarthy said in his telegram that "normally I would not waste time merely to

GOP, Dems. Split Party-Wise in Reaction to Nixon Talk

Seen as Pattern to Unite Republicans on Program

WASHINGTON, March 15 (AP) — Vice President Nixon's statement of the Eisenhower's administration case has been praised by a Republican as what the party needed to "get down to business," while a top Democrat said it just echoed his criticism.

Between these two poles ranged wide reaction to the talk nationally telecast Saturday night, much of which was obviously aimed at Senator McCarthy, Republican of Wisconsin.

Nixon took occasion also to speak up for the administration's "new look" in defense and diplomatic policies and to affirm that President Eisenhower is the effective leader of the government and party.

But most of the comment centered on such Nixon statements as one that "men who have in the past done effective work exposing Communism...have, by reckless talk and questionable methods, made themselves the issue" and thereby helped "those whose primary objective is to defeat the Eisenhower administration.''

McCarthy himself declined direct comment, but he said in a speech in Manitowoc, Wis., "I don't care how high or how low those are who scream at what we are doing,...I don't intend to treat traitors like gentlemen."

SENATOR FLANDERS, Republican of Vermont, who had said McCarthy intentionally or not is "doing his best to shatter" the GOP, termed the Nixon speech "the kind of a talk that should enable us Republicans to get down to business."

But ADLAI E. STEVENSON, the 1952 Democratic presidential candidate whose criticism a week earlier was the occasion for Nixon's address, said, "at Miami Beach I said that McCarthyism was injuring the government, dividing the nation and diverting the attention from the real issues. Last night Vice President Nixon...said precisely the same thing."

Republican comment ran along these lines:

SENATOR KNOWLAND of California, the Senate GOP leader: "It was a very constructive speech."

SENATOR BRIDGES of New Hampshire, temporary president of the Senate: A "calm, comprehensive report...which answered Mr. Stevenson's glib attack...I disagree with him (Nixon), however, when he infers that the dangers of Communism are being exaggerated."

NATIONAL CHAIRMAN LEONARD HALL: Nixon made it "amply clear...the Eisenhower administration is engaged on a program of great and lasting benefits to every American, and it will not be diverted by side issues."

SENATOR WELKER of Idaho: Nixon again "proved himself to be a great leader... (he) left no doubt but that we are united in fighting Communism at home and abroad...trying to save our people from perpetual war, overburdening taxation and inflation."

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CHAIRMAN STEPHEN A. MITCHELL acknowledged on a television program last night that Nixon's speech was "a good answer to Senator McCarthy." The Democratic spokesman added:

"I hope it is followed by effective action by Mr. Eisenhower."

But SENATOR MONRONEY, Democrat of Oklahoma, said Nixon met Stevenson's charge "that the Republican party is half Eisenhower, half McCarthy by asking Senator McCarthy to stand in the corner for at least 15 minutes."

SENATOR ELLENDER, Democrat of Louisiana, said Nixon made a "weak presentation." He said the Vice President, who used previously published figures on security firings, still had not said how many Reds were found in government.

McCarthy Braces for Showdown

give it priority over other engagements."

McCarthy told newsmen earlier that he has tentatively planned a meeting of his subcommittee Tuesday to take up the army's charges that he and Cohn, subcommittee chief counsel, sought favored treatment for G. David Schine, a former subcommittee aide inducted into the army.

WANTS THOROUGH PROBE

McCarthy told reporters the closed session will take place at 10:30 a. m. if members are available.

Knowland insisted the inquiry "should not be delayed" or "put over until the following week but proceeded with this week and very promptly."

He denied a published report that he had suggested a one-day investigation, observing that he has "no idea" of how long the inquiry should or would take. His only position, he said, is that "we ought to find out and develop the facts with sworn testimony."

Asked if he could confirm or deny reports that the army only partially listed its charges of attempts by McCarthy and Cohn to obtain favored treatment for Schine, Knowland said:

"I don't know if it was an expurgated or full report. I did not have a copy of it until after stories about it appeared in the press."

ENTITLED TO FACTS

But he insisted that "the Senate and the country are entitled to all the facts," adding:

"I don't think anything in this matter should be withheld, and I don't think the public and the Senate will be satisfied with anything less than all the facts."

He insisted the investigation, at least in its primary stage, is the responsibility of the McCarthy subcommittee or its parent government Operations Committee, which also is headed by McCarthy.

However, he said he "can conceive that growing out of the developments there might be a field that the Armed Services Committee itself might feel justified in getting into."

Senator John L. McClellan, Democrat of Arkansas, senior minority member of the group, was expected to return to Washington from Arkansas tonight. Other subcommittee men are in Washington and have been advocating such a meeting.

MUNDT PROPOSAL

Senator Karl E. Mundt, Republican of South Dakota, second ranking GOP member of the unit, said he will bring up for discussion his proposal to shift an inquiry into the army's charges and McCarthy's counter charges to another committee.

Asked if he would make a motion to that effect, Mundt said only that he would "bring it up for discussion."'

The Wisconsin Republican interrupted a western speaking tour to fly back to Washington and angrily rejected suggestions that any probe of charges and counter-charges exchanged between his staff and the army be made by another committee.

Although such a course was advocated by Mundt, McCarthy declared that no other committee is "going to investigate whom we hire and fire."

The subcommittee may meet today to decide if a suggested hearing, in which McCarthy himself would testify under oath, should be held tomorrow.

COHN IN OFFER

Meanwhile, Cohn said he would glady "step down" from his role as attorney for the subcommittee and appear as a witness.

The 27-year-old chief counsel for the group declared on NBC's televised "Meet the Press" that he was convinced that one or two persons in the army "did their very best" to halt the subcommittee probe of possible Red infiltration of the military service.

Cohn also labeled "ridiculous" a Pentagon charge that he had threatened to "wreck the army" if special favors were not granted to his friend and former subcommittee consultant, Pvt. G. David Schine.

The counsel added that Schine was drafted while still working on an important report and that the army agreed to permit him time on weekends to complete it.

He added: "Our desire was to see that he got what was coming to him and that he didn't get kicked around because he was coming from our committee."

CHARGES BY ARMY

An army report to senators charged last week that both Cohn and McCarthy intervened at various times to obtain favors for Schine, and especially to get him assigned to the New York City area.

The same report also charged that Cohn threatened "to wreck the army" and said that Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens was "through" unless the drafted subcommittee aide received favors.

In reply, the counsel said: "that statement is so ridiculous I can scarcely answer it. That statement is completely untrue. How could I wreck an army that Hitler and Tojo couldn't."

He had high praise for Schine who, he said, did an outstanding job, particularly in a probe of operations of the U. S. Information Service.

Earlier, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Democrat of Washington, a subcommittee member, proposed that a joint group composed of the Senate Armed Services Committee and the McCarthy group ascertain the facts in the dispute.

McCarthy told newsmen: "The American people are getting sick and tired of this yak-yak about the treatment of Communists. I'm getting sick and tired of it, too. The course of our investigation will not change. I will go on to the end."

The Wisconsin senator said he planned to leave Wednesday for speaking engagements in Chicago, Milwaukee, and Oklahoma City.

ACTION ELSEWHERE

Other weekend developments:

1. Adlai E. Stevenson declared that Vice President Richard M. Nixon, in his radio-TV address Saturday night, failed to say whether the GOP will drop McCarthy as a party spokesman. He contended that the Vice President agreed with him that McCarthyism was injuring the government, dividing the nation and diverting attention from the real issues."

2. Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall said the Nixon speech made it clear that the Eisenhower administration is "engaged on a program of great and lasting benefit to every American and it will not be diverted by side issues."

3. Nixon, named by the GOP to reply to Stevenson's broadside attack on the administration of the week before, did not mention McCarthy by name, but hit out at those who use "reckless talk and, irresponsible methods" in fighting Communism.

The Vice President urged an end to the "violent controversy."

prove that a radio and TV commentator who attacks me is lying."

This was a reference to McCarthy's charge, in a radio broadcast last week, that Murrow had been connected in the 1930s with a Moscow University summer school—a session which Murrow said was never held. McCarthy labeled it a "Communist Propaganda School."

QUESTION OF TRUTH

McCarthy had first designated a substitute, author William Buckley, to appear for him on Murrow's show but Murrow said he would give time only to McCarthy himself.

He said he prefers appearing on Murrow's show on April 6, but accept a March 23 date if that is the only available one.

He explained he had a number of other engagements arranged in the next week or so.

Many Hail Sokolsky Talk Backing Senator McCarthy

Special to Herald-Express

NEW YORK, March 15—More than 1000 telephone calls were received at radio station KJZ last night following Columnist-Commentator Sokolsky's broadcast defending Senator McCarthy, Republican of Wisconsin, and others fighting Communism.

Calls continued to pour in after Columnist Walter Winchell Broadcast excerpts of Sokolsky's speech on his 9 p. m. "Report to the Nation" program. The calls were approximately 4 to 1 in favor of McCarthy.

A spokesman for the Nation, which is the American-Broadcasting Company's outlet in New York, said the number of calls received was second only to the election night of Nov. 3, 1952, when Dwight Eisenhower was elected President.

The Journal American columnist, in his 6:30 broadcast, spoke favorably of McCarthy and his assistant, Roy M. Cohn, and former assistant, G. David Schine, now a GI.

Sokolsky said some source or sources within the Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower administrations have been and are powerful enough to be able to partially discredit or smear anyone fighting Communism in government.

"Since the Dies committee investigated Communists in the 30s, this source has been working effectively along these lines," he declared. "Who they are is what we must find out."

He urged Congress to stop bickering among themselves and get on with the work at hand.

"This attempt at party-splitting and smears are just what the Communists want," he said.

Last Rites for Chester Franklin

Last rites were conducted today for Chester Franklin, 64, film producer, director and writer, who died Friday.

A San Francisco native, Franklin was a cartoonist for the San Diego Sun before starting his movie career with Mack Sennett and D. W. Griffith. He worked later for Warner Brothers, Paramount, First National and MGM.

He directed the first film starring the dog Rin-Tin-Tin and other animal movies including "Sequoia" besides animal sequences of "The Yearling." Recently he was active as an artist and held an exhibit of his paintings here.

Surviving are his widow, Mildred; a daughter, Mrs. Betty Ratkin, New York; a granddaughter, and his brother, Sidney Franklin, film producer-director.

COLONIC

My technique is a scientific method of bringing about a state of erosion to impactions and the slate-like fecal content of the large intestine and rectum.

In simple language—it reduces solids to a state of solution, so that the contents may be passed by normal effort.

Prof. Ehret says—"Every sick person has a more or less mucus-clogged system, such mucus being derived from undigested and uneliminated, unnatural food substances, accumulated from childhood on."

"The actual amount of filth and waste which is the 'auspicious' cause of your 'trouble,' is almost unbelievable."

"I had fat patients that eliminated from their body as much as 50 to 60 pounds waste, and 10 to 15 pounds alone from the colon, mainly consisting of foreign matters, especially old, hardened feces. 'The average so-called 'healthy' man of today carries continually with him, since childhood, several pounds of never-eliminated feces. One 'good stool' a day means nothing. 'A fat and sick man is in fact a living cesspool.'"

"Experts in autopsy state they have found that from 60 to 70 per cent of the colons examined have foreign matters such as worms and decades of old feces-stones. The inside walls of the over-intestines are encrusted by old, hardened feces and resemble in appearance the inside of a filthy stove pipe."

"Leonard Williams, quoted by Dr. W. S. Bainbridge in his article on 'Intestinal Toxemia' (Med. Jour. and Rec. 1925) has said "THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE WHO HAVE A DAILY EVACUATION OF THE BOWELS BUT WHO ARE NEVERTHELESS WALKING SEPTIC TANKS."

Constipation is the common sense explanation of many illnesses say some of the world's best authorities. Many doctors accuse large intestine as breeding ground of bacteria and deadly toxins that cause sickness, suffering, disease—DEATH.

Now that I have come back to you and have completed two weeks' treatments just last week, I feel brighter, stronger and happy again as the result of these treatments.

Therefore, I suggest to those who suffer of same trouble to try Dr. Brinkley's New Yorker Technique, which I sincerely recommend.

This testimonial was not solicited. Respectfully yours, Rt. Rev. Eliss Pico."

"Dear Dr. Brinkley: Certainly appreciate Mrs. Padella, Mrs. Folendore and Dr. Martin's kindness.

They did wonderfully and did a great deal of good for me. I pray to God to bless and protect them.

Thankfully with great affection on them. Father Conrad Lebel."

"Dear Dr. Brinkley: I wish to extend my thanks to you and your entire staff, especially to Dr. Evans, Mrs. Vickers, and Mrs. Johanson, who were so courteous to me.

After taking your treatment for about ten days I feel better than I have felt in six years.

I shall not cease to tell my friends about you and your staff, and your great institution.

May the Lord let you live long to keep up the good work. Yours respectively, Rev. Walter H. Laster."

"Dear Dr. Brinkley: Without reservation or hesitation, I can truthfully say that I believe that your technique of treating the human body is a God-inspired idea. Because, up until I saw your advertisement in the newspaper, I had just about given up hope for any relief. The Doctors, at many of the leading clinics of this nation, had given me every kind of examination known in the field of medical science, and to no avail. But the first few treatments I received from your office I began getting relief. And I know that it was none other than the Spirit of Almighty God which led me to read your advertisement that day. So, may God crown all your efforts with His choicest benedictions in helping to relieve the perplexities and pains from which humanity is suffering. Fraternally yours, O. L. Fruit Spray Nearly Kills Boy

HOOD RIVER, Ore., March 15 (AP) — A fruit tree spray solution spilled from a bottle onto the legs of a 6-year-old boy Saturday and his heart had stopped by the time he reached a hospital here.

Heart-beat and breathing were restored but his life still hung in the balance today.

Somehow the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Ogden jr., who live in the Odell fruit-growing district south of here, found a bottle of a solution known as Tepp — tetra-ethyl pyro phosphate — used for spraying trees to kill pests. The liquid, which penetrates human skin and attacks the respiratory system, spilled when he opened the bottle and soaked through his pants into his legs.

So potent is the solution that only a half pint of it is mixed with 100 gallons of water for tree spray.

Murrow 10-to-1

CBS' mail count on Edward R. Murrow vs. Senator Joseph R. McCarthy stood at 8,500-to-800 in the commentator's favor as of late yesterday (Tues.) with about 4,500 letters still to be tabbed.

The 10-to-1 ratio is exclusive of wires and phone calls which hadn't yet been tabulated.

Scorecard On TV & McCarthy

VARIETY 3/17/54

Washington, March 16.

The snowballing importance of television on the national political scene was emphasized again and again last week, in a series of developments swirling about the Senator McCarthy fued with the webs.

Following the decision of NBC and CBS to give time to answer Adlai Stevenson to the Republican National Committee rather than to McCarthy, these major developments followed:

1. Sen. Ralph Flanders, a conservative Vermont Republican, ripped into McCarthy with a speech on the Senate floor Tuesday (9) and was promptly hauled off before cameras to film some of the choicer segments of the talk. This film got such play on television that President Eisenhower told his press conference the next day he hadn't read the Flanders talk, but had seen portions of the Senator's film video show.

2. Tuesday night, Edward R. Murrow let go with his sensational filmed tv show which featured McCarthy promises and charges and which the commentator charged the Wisconsin solon was doing a hollow job.

3. At his press conference Wednesday, President Eisenhower rallied to the support of CBS and NBC in their hassle with McCarthy over the "equal time" issue. While both radio and television time were concerned, Prexy laid the emphasis on video indirectly. He explained that he had seen and heard the Flanders talk on television. He went on to say he thought the webs were being entirely fair and discharging their responsibility by granting time to the G.O.P. National Committee.

4. On top of this, Eisenhower announced he was making a television fireside talk to explain his tax program to the people. It had newsmen at the conference quipping about "television day at the White House."

. On Saturday night, Vice-President Richard M. Nixon took to the airwaves to make the official reply to Adlai Stevenson, a further boost for tv.

6. Finally, on Sunday night (14), Roy M. Cohn, chief Counsel for Senator McCarthy's special investigating committee, was on "Meet the Press" to give his side of the widening row between McCarthy and the Army.

Ed:

You probably have these by now, but they're worth repeating.

No need to tell you what a lift you gave to us all, you and Fred, by what you did and the way you did it.

Best regards.

Ed Murrow

LONDON OBSERVER

TALL, dark, and cadaverously handsome in his early forties, Ed Murrow has become a national hero overnight for his broadcast programme on Senator McCarthy, Murrow is a director and the star reporter of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and, incidentally, the eighth highest paid salaried man in the United States. Millions heard his broadcast. Several thousand letters and cables reached C.B.S. within hours supporting him and condemning McCarthy in the ratio of fifteen to one.

Ed Murrow became famous in the 1940s for his report of the London Blitz. "This . . . is London," began his report every night, and his graphic, warm, slightly staccato voice enlisted millions of American sympathies which might have recoiled from official Embassies.

When Murrow was broadcasting from London in 1940, he once told me, hundreds of letters were received by the C.B.S alleging that Murrow was in the pay of the British Government. He keeps one post-card as a souvenir. "I don't think Murrow does it because the British pay him," it read, "I think the sonofabitch does it because he likes them."

REVULSION AGAINST McCARTHY

Efforts to Get Favours for Private Schine

ARMY MAKES A STAND

FROM ALISTAIR COOKE

WASHINGTON, MARCH 12.

Senator Joseph McCarthy was all over the front pages again this morning, but the instinct that put him there was for once not his. It looked as if an impulse of moral revulsion had galvanised the country and braced the backbone of an incongruous variety of his victims. The Department of the Army, a middle-aged coloured woman, the spectators at a session of the Senate's permanent subcommittee on investigations, two Democratic senators, and a suddenly blithe host of columnists and radio critics were moved to furious protest at the senator's tactics and his stature.

The Army published a long report, which documented in shocking details the threats of the young Mr Roy Cohn, McCarthy's chief counsel, to "wreck the Army" and break Secretary Stevens if David Schine, a McCarthy investigator, was not given consistently preferential treatment after he had been drafted into the Army as a private.

McCarthy's Demands

The report told how Senator McCarthy had directly approached the Army's chief legal counsel to seek a commission for Private Schine; how the Army found him unqualified to receive one; how Senator McCarthy and Mr Cohn then demanded that Schine be assigned to New York, in order to study "evidence of pro-Communist leanings in West Point textbooks," and how this request was also refused; how, when the Army told Mr Cohn that after Private Schine had finished his basic training the chances were nine to one that he would be sent overseas, this provoked in Mr Cohn the threat to wreck the Army and make sure that Mr Stevens would be "through" as Secretary of the Army. The Army insisted at one point which come to be accepted as the "spontaneous" expression of spiritual longings and gurglings in some tribe of the human race, this one, too, was composed by one man, or two at best. And happily their tune has caught the popular fancy early enough not to obscure its authorship. Their names are Edward R. Murrow and Senator Ralph Flanders.

Honour Vindicated

Senator Flanders on Tuesday vindicated the honour of the Republican party on the floor of the Senate by suddenly putting the rhetorical question: "What party does he belong to? One must conclude that his is a one-man party, and that its name is McCarthyism, a title which he has proudly accepted."

Senator Flanders then launched into the first open attack on McCarthy by a Republican in this session of Congress. He said that McCarthy was diverting the attention of the nation away from "dangerous problems" abroad and that he was "doing his best . . . by intention or through ignorance to shatter the Republican party."

Next day President Eisenhower sent a letter of commendation to Senator Flanders and told his news conference that the senator had done the country "a service" by calling attention to "the danger of us engaging in internecine warfare and magnifying certain items of procedure and right and personal aggrandisement."

Mr Murrow's Achievement

But it may be that the spark which has set off this fiery and so righteous explosion of popular indignation was laid, with deliberate courage, by Mr Murrow. He came to great fame in this country during the war through his broadcasts from London. He is a tireless news reporter and, in his weekly television dramatisation of the news, a consummate showman.

Last Tuesday night Mr Murrow gave over his whole half-hour to a pictorial analysis of "McCarthyism" by projecting visual excerpts from the senator's speeches and sessions in the chair of his subcommittee. It was McCarthy exposed by McCarthy

McCarthy had directly approached the Army's chief legal counsel to seek a commission for Private Schine; how the Army found him unqualified to receive one; how Senator McCarthy and Mr Cohn then demanded that Schine be assigned to New York, in order to study "evidence of pro-Communist leanings in West Point text-books," and how this request was also refused; how, when the Army told Mr Cohn that after Private Schine had finished his basic training the chances were nine to one that he would be sent overseas, this provoked in Mr Cohn the threat to wreck the Army and make sure that Mr Stevens would be through as Secretary of the Army; how, at the point at which the policy of special treatment for any Army private was not in the national interest, whereupon Mr Cohn, who is all of 27, told the Army he would give it "a little national interest" by showing it up in public "in its worst light."

The report listed the many occasions on which Private Schine was given special passes to come to New York, supposedly on the subcommittee's business. Last December the commanding General of his camp complained to the Army's legal counsel that Private Schine was "becoming increasingly difficult because the soldier was leaving the post nearly every night," and usually returning "very late at night." The day after this warning Senator McCarthy told the Army that he was no longer interested in having special treatment for Private Schine. But apparently Mr Cohn was furious and told the Army's counsel that he would show him "what it meant to go over his head." Six weeks later the battle to have Private Schine assigned to New York was still going on and Senator McCarthy warned the Army's counsel of the consequences of thwarting young Mr Cohn.

Two weeks later Senator McCarthy told an assistant to telephone the Army's counsel that he was very angry about the honourable discharge granted to a New York dentist who had claimed his privilege not to answer questions about past associations. Ten days after that General Zwicker, the commanding officer of the dentist's former Army camp, was called to testify before the McCarthy subcommittee. And that, as all the world now knows, was the guerrilla episode that led to the famous "memorandum of understanding," or as some say the terms of surrender, between the Army of the United States and Senator McCarthy.

Cafeteria "Code Clerk"

Inevitably there was standing room only in Washington yesterday when the subcommittee called Mrs Annie Lee Moss, a middle-aged Coloured woman, who was suspended by the Army Signal Corps after Senator McCarthy had described her as a "code clerk" whose "Communist record" was known to the Army. Mrs Moss was a cafeteria worker who quietly told the subcommittee yesterday that she had never been in a code room in her life. Mr Cohn tried to establish her personal connection with a staff member of the "Daily Worker" but it turned out that the man she knew was a coloured man who happened to have the same name. She was questioned about her Communist affiliations and replied that she had never heard of communism until 1948.

The audience was uncommonly ready with applause for Democratic committee members, and Mrs Moss's lawyer, whenever they protested at the tactics of Mr Cohn. At one point Senator Stuart Symington, Democrat of Missouri, asked if she knew who Karl Marx was. "Who's that?" she gravely asked, and the crowd laughed itself silly.

When she finished her testimony and stepped down from the stand Senator Symington leaned into his microphone and angrily cried: "I may be sticking my neck out but I think you are telling the truth. And if you're not taken back in your Army job, you come around and see me. I am going to see that you get a job."

Senator McCarthy was mercifully absent from these rebellious proceedings because he was busy composing a broadcast reply to Adlai Stevenson's condemnation of him at Miami last Saturday, to the first outright attack made on him by a Republican Senator, Ralph Flanders of Vermont, and to a trenchant analysis of his methods televised to a national audience last Tuesday night by the celebrated American commentator, Edward R. Murrow, and sponsored by the Aluminium Corporation of America.

This belated popular uprising against Senator McCarthy will be ascribed by idealists to something as vague as an attack of spiritual indigestion in the American people. But like all folk songs,

Mr Murrow's Achievement

But it may be that the spark which has set off this fiery and so righteous explosion of popular indignation was laid, with deliberate courage, by Mr Murrow. He came to great fame in this country during the war through his broadcasts from London. He is a tireless news reporter and, in his weekly television dramatisation of the news, a consummate showman.

Last Tuesday night Mr Murrow gave over his whole half-hour to a pictorial analysis of "McCarthyism" by projecting visual excerpts from the senator's speeches and sessions in the chair of his subcommittee. It was McCarthy exposed by McCarthy, and Mr Murrow added only the sparest editorial comment. But at the end, after the huge audience for this programme had seen McCarthy merciless, McCarthy gay, McCarthy cunning, McCarthy sentimental, Mr Murrow looked his audience in the eye and ended with these words:

"This is no time for men who oppose Senator McCarthy's methods to keep silent. Or for those who approve. We can deny our heritage and our history but we cannot escape responsibility for the result. There is no way for a citizen of the Republic to abdicate his responsibilities."

"As a nation we have come into our full inheritance at an early age. We proclaim ourselves—as indeed we are—the defenders of the free world, or what's left of it. We cannot defend freedom abroad by deserting it at home.

"The actions of the junior Senator from Wisconsin have caused alarm and dismay among our allies abroad and given comfort to our enemies. And whose fault is that? Not really his. He didn't create the situation of fear, merely exploited it, and skilfully. Cassius was right: "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars but in ourselves."

National Support

These words were spoken with the blessing of the Aluminum Corporation of America, which has obviously a lot to lose by taking this stand. The response, however, of televiewers across the country has been a stunning endorsement of Murrow's courage. So far the comments, by telephone, telegram, and letter, are running about fifteen to one in Murrow's favour.

Hence the surprising rally of candour in public men who have stayed astutely silent for five years. Hence President Eisenhower's relieved approval of Senator Flanders. Hence a morning chorus of suddenly uninhibited newspaper columnists praising Murrow for "laying it on the line." Hence the confident laughter of the big audience at yesterday's subcommittee hearing. Hence the delayed righteousness of Senator Symington, of Missouri.

Mr Murrow may yet make bravery fashionable.

Who Owns McCarthy 'See It' Pic?

There may have to be an amendment to the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution to get the answer to who will pony up $7,500 for the film that Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy made at Fox Movietone News in N. Y. and shown last night (Tues.) on "See It Now" in rebuttal to Edward R. Murrow's anti-McCarthy CBS-TV'er of last month. Apparently the Wisconsin legislator was under the impression that when Murrow offered him equal time, it included the expenditures for putting together the counterattack.

McCarthy left for Arizona yesterday and left the newsreel outfit out on a limb seeking to resolve the question of financial responsibility. The Senator had approached Murrow's sponsor, Aluminum Co. of America, on the cost and was shuttled over to CBS, with latter not confronted by the Commie hunter on the question of paying the freight. Should the web eventually assume the coin burden, it would probably also assume ownership of the McCarthy celluloid and be free to repeat it or cut it up into segments for future requirements. There may be some legal abracadabra on that phase, however. Most reasonable guess was that the Senator, a shrewd publicity fabricator, was using the press to take his story to the public as an attention-getter for his appearance on the show, with the amount of money involved considered small potatoes against the resultant publicity. Already known is that McCarthy had offered the film to other stations, but it's questioned now whether he has the right to do so on the ownership angle.

Murrow was to introduce his show in the usual way, giving the background of the McCarthy imbroglio and the latter would then have about 25 minutes for his film after Alcoa's opening plug. The Senator was quoted as saying that his pic was "not complete and does not contain all answers" to Murrow's charges, in an obvious attempt to forestall criticism after the fact.

It was reported at the Murrow-Fred W. Friendly (coproducer) office, where the sound portion of the McCarthy film had been previewed early yesterday, that there was "nothing to worry about" in terms of any possible violence on the part of the legislator in his vidpixer. Understood that the film was produced by BBD & O ad agency, which handled the Eisenhower campaign, and that he had the benefit of other masterminding as well.

He Who Criticizes McCarthy Is Target for Violent Revenge

In the latest of a long series of vindictive attacks, Senator McCarthy has impugned the loyalty of Edward R. Murrow, respected Columbia Broadcasting Co. official and noted commentator.

The senator said that Mr. Murrow has done the work of the Communists for 20 years and "is a symbol, a leader and the cleverest of the jackal pack which is always found at the throat of anyone who dares to expose Communists and traitors."

Why this vicious attack upon a man who, as the CBS says, has a record of "passionate devotion to his country and to the fundamental principles upon which it is built"? Why this attack on a man whom President Eisenhower immediately defended as his friend — at the same time denying any truth in McCarthy's ridiculous charges about H-bombs delays? The answer is: Revenge; pure and simple revenge.

Murrow a few weeks ago presented a television program on McCarthy—given over largely to film clips of McCarthy speeches, allowing the senator to present his own case. McCarthy's case looked so bad, even in the senator's own words, that Murrow's program was hailed as one of the most effective exposes of the senator.

McCarthy's revenge reaction was immediate. He charged Murrow with either being a Communist or with being influenced by them. He distorted Murrow's activities to make them look Communist. Tuesday night, on television time donated by Murrow's sponsor, McCarthy carried on his attack.

It was the latest example of the McCarthy tactic of retaliation. A glance back at his record shows that—quite aside from any alleged subversives—the targets of his irresponsible attacks have, time and again, been objects of his personal revenge.

Oppose McCarthy and you are smeared as a Communist, a dupe of Communists, stupid, an "egghead," a "bleeding heart," a "liar" or worse. He uses smear, boycott and political retaliation against opponents as the dictators have used them—to destroy those who oppose him, or his methods.

In a recent press conference at Oklahoma City, McCarthy said he planned a personal exposure of what he calls Communist infiltration and control of the American press, radio and television.

The threat comes at a time when the greater part of the press is highly critical of McCarthy and after he has failed to intimidate radio and television networks into giving him air time to which he has no right.

The press is no new McCarthy target. He attempted—with no success—to start boycotts against such critics of his methods perjury" could have been proved against McCarthy.

Maj. Gen. Richard C. Partridge, former army intelligence chief, refused to agree with McCarthy that an army intelligence report was Communist propaganda. McCarthy tried to discredit him and did force his transfer abroad.

Senator Fulbright (Dem., Ark.) criticized McCarthy and McCarthy lashed out at the Fulbright program for scholarships abroad, calling the recipients "half-brights" and tainting them with charges of subversion.

President Nathan Pusey of Harvard university opposed McCarthy's re-election while head of Lawrence college, and helped sponsor the book "The McCarthy Record." When Pusey was named to head Harvard, McCarthy let loose with an insinuating blast, saying he "did not think Pusey is or has been a member of the Communist party" but that he was a "rabid anti-anti-Communist." He later charged Pusey with protecting Communist teachers and Harvard with keeping its students "open to indoctrination by Communist professors."

Senator Lehman (Dem., N. Y.) criticized McCarthy. It brought a charge from McCarthy that Lehman had been guilty of "gross abuse" of the franking privilege—a charge proven false.

Maj. Gen. Zwicker, World War II hero, refused to answer McCarthy questions on the grounds that he was forbidden to by higher authority. He was smeared and told he was not "fit to wear the uniform."

Secretary of the Army Stevens tried to protect his subordinates and the army was charged with "coddling Communists" and Stevens himself with being stupid or a dupe.

The late Senator Taft (Rep., Ohio) said that he thought McCarthy had overstated his case and that he "can't agree with McCarthy" in the attack on Gen. Marshall. McCarthy's answer was a left handed smear and veiled warning: "I don't think Bob Taft would join the left wing camp followers in opposing my Communist fight."

The revenge tactic is not new for McCarthy. The state board of bar commissioners charged that he had violated his oath as a member of the Wisconsin bar by running for the senate while still a circuit judge. The supreme court dismissed the charge on the strange grounds that McCarthy was elected and therefore had a right to serve whatever the violation. McCarthy immediately lit out after the bar commissioners, demanding they all resign. He charged these able men had been "playing politics" or were "completely incompetent lawyers."

Revenge has been a tactic of the dictators. Senator McCarthy uses it for personal aggrandizement without regard for the cost to individuals — or the nation.

The press is no new McCarthy target. He attempted—with no success—to start boycotts against such critics of his methods as The Milwaukee Journal, the Madison Capital Times and Time magazine. He assaulted one Washington columnist physically in true knee and thumb-in-eye style. He has branded papers which opposed him as local "editions of the Daily Worker" (a Communist paper published in New York). He dragged up old and tired charges of communism against editor James Wechsler of the New York Post and harried him with an investigation, because Wechsler had criticized him and his associates.

The list is long. These cases come quickly to mind:

John J. McCloy, Republican, head of Chase National bank and former assistant secretary of the army, head of the World bank and high commissioner to Germany, explained to President Eisenhower that McCarthy had seriously damaged the overseas book program. The president, shocked, spoke out against the "book burners" with remarks that drew national attention. In revenge McCarthy recently charged McCloy with having destroyed records of army Communists. The charge was so ridiculous that even McCarthy had to admit it was in error. But he came right back with the equally ridiculous charge that McCloy issued an army order to allow commissioning of Communists.

Dr. Robert L. Johnson, former head of the international information administration, defended his agency against outrageous charges by a McCarthy staff member. McCarthy immediately wrote Johnson, threatening to cut his appropriations to "not one cent." He harried the IIA almost to extinction and drove Johnson from public service.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (Rep., Me.) wrote and delivered on the senate floor the famous "declaration of conscience," criticizing McCarthy. McCarthy managed to get her removed from the senate executive expenditures committee. She is now being opposed for re-election by a McCarthy disciple.

Former Senator Tydings (Dem., Md.) investigated McCarthy's charges of communism in the state department and proclaimed them a "fraud." McCarthy smeared Tydings and helped defeat him in one of the nastiest political campaigns in modern American history.

Former Senator Benton (Dem., Conn.) demanded that the senate act on the question of McCarthy's fitness to hold office and charged him with deceit and perjury. McCarthy smeared Benton, went into Connecticut to help defeat him. He even filed, with much fanfare, a suit for slander. But he dropped it when time for trial came because, Benton said, "deceit and think Bob Taft would join the left wing camp followers in opposing my Communist fight."

The revenge tactic is not new for McCarthy. The state board of bar commissioners charged that he had violated his oath as a member of the Wisconsin bar by running for the senate while still a circuit judge. The supreme court dismissed the charge on the strange grounds that McCarthy was elected and therefore had a right to serve whatever the violation. Mr. EISENHOWER DENIES DELAY OVER H-BOMB

McCARTHY CHARGE

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.

Mr. Eisenhower declared at his Press conference to-day that he knew of no delay in the hydrogen bomb programme. In a television broadcast last night, Senator McCarthy claimed that there was a "deliberate delay" of 18 months.

The President was asked a number of questions about the broadcast, in which Mr. McCarthy made his reply to criticisms on March 9 by Ed Murrow, chief Columbia Broadcasting System commentator. The reply consisted mostly of attacks on Mr. Murrow.

Although he is an inveterate television watcher, Mr. Eisenhower said he had not seen the programme. He was visibly disturbed when asked whether he had confidence in Mr. Murrow. He looked round almost as if he was planning a retreat from the room.

After evading questions for a time he changed his mind and declared he had known Mr. Murrow for many years, that he could not remember anything against him and he had always thought of him as a friend.

CHALLENGE TO SENATOR

Statement "Ridiculous"

Mr. Melvin Price, Democrat, Illinois, a member of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee of Congress, demanded to-day that Mr. McCarthy produce any evidence he had of a deliberate delay. He called the statement "absolutely ridiculous."

It was only Mr. Truman's "courageous decision" which got the hydrogen bomb started. "Even when experts were divided on the question, and on the recommendations of a minority of the Atomic Energy Commission and of atomic advisers, he decided to go ahead.

"His decision puts us in a favourable position now. Had the programme not been a success it is probable that the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. McCarthy) would have been the first to call for his impeachment."

Mr. Truman said in Kansas City to-day that there was "no delay" in development of the hydrogen bomb. "The order was issued as soon as the scientists were ready to go to work."

FILMED PROGRAMME

Criticisms Ignored

In his 25-minute filmed television appearance, put out by the C.B.S. in Mr. Murrow's own programme, Mr. McCarthy did not take up any of the points made by the commentator.

Instead he attacked him as "a symbol, the leader and cleverest of the jackal pack which is always found at the throat of anyone who dares to expose Communists and traitors." The Communists, he asserted, used "glib, clever men like Murrow, who so closely follows the Communist party line."

Implying that Mr. Murrow was a defender of Communists in the United States Government, Mr. McCarthy suggested that he was one of those responsible for delay in American development of the hydrogen bomb.

"If there were no Communists in our Government, why did we delay for 18 months, delay our research on the hydrogen bomb even though our intelligence agencies were reporting day after day that the Russians were feverishly pushing their development of the hydrogen bomb?

"Our nation may well die because of that 18-month deliberate delay.

anything against him and he had always thought of him as a friend.

"TYPICAL TACTIC"

Mr. Murrow's Reply

Mr. Murrow to-day described the Senator's effort as a "typical tactic of attempting to tie up with Communism anyone who disagrees with him." He would have to read the transcript of the broadcast with care before deciding whether it provided the basis for a libel suit.

He replied to some of Senator McCarthy's allegations. Here are the statements with Mr. Murrow's replies [in italics.]

Mr. Murrow had been a member of the Industrial Workers of the World.—Not true.

Prof. Laski, "The greatest Communist propagandist of our time in England," dedicated a book to Mr. Murrow.—This does not mean that he subscribed to Prof. Laski's views. The dedication was intended as a tribute to Mr. Murrow's broadcasts from England during the war for which, Prof. Laski said, an "immense debt" was owed.

Mr. Murrow's association with the Institute of International Education was evidence of Communist sympathies.—Mr. Dulles, Secretary of State, and many other distinguished Americans were also associated with it.

Most of the telephone calls received by the C.B.S. after the broadcast supported Mr. Murrow.

Counsel Chosen for Inquiry

The Senate Investigations Sub-Committee to-day appointed Mr. Ray Jenkins, 57, a lawyer from Knoxville, Tennessee, as special counsel for its inquiry into the dispute between Senator McCarthy and the Army. He succeeds Mr. Samuel Sears, who resigned yesterday, five days after accepting the appointment, because it was suggested he was a McCarthy supporter.

BROADCASTING TELECASTING

March 15, 1954 Vol. 46, No. 11

RADIO, TV TAKE THE STAGE IN NEW McCARTHY TEMPEST

Networks' refusal to grant free time to the Wisconsin Senator set off a running battle which brought in the President, the Vice President, other Senators, an FCC Commissioner, major commentators, a number of stations and the interest of the whole nation.

AS NEVER BEFORE, an unrehearsed and spontaneous American political drama broke last week on the national scene through the eyes and ears of the broadcast media.

Backing up the aural and visual media was the nation's press, whose headlines on the McCarthy issue served as a chorus of press agents for the broadcast industry.

The McCarthy story, which initially got its momentum via radio and tv and was still rolling as B•T went to press, actually had two parts, each dependent upon the other.

• One was the political fight waged by the Senator.

• The other, of immediate interest to the broadcast industry, was the "free time issue" created by a McCarthy demand on CBS and NBC that they provide him equal network time to answer Adlai Stevenson's March 6 speech which was carried without charge. When GOP National Committee Chairman Leonard Hall requested the networks to provide time to a spokesman of the Republican Party, they accepted. Vice President Nixon was chosen as the GOP's representative.

THE SENATOR
He would change law for free time.

The top developments:

• CBS and NBC bucked up to Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis.) and won President Eisenhower's blessing (see page 32) in the face of the Senator's condemnation and threat to teach them the law.

• They got support from what some must have considered an unexpected source. FCC Comr. Robert E. Lee, a friend of the Senator's, said he thought the networks had acted fairly and in the public interest.

• Possibly the most spectacular development in the week's merry-go-round was provided by a commercial program: CBS' Ed Murrow's See It Now, sponsored by the Aluminum Co. of America (also see comments, page 33).

• A McCarthy announcement Thursday that he has a lawyer—he refused to divulge the attorney's name—and may hire another to prepare a petition to FCC seeking an order to the two networks to give him the free time he demanded.

• A threat that he may seek legislative action if the petition is rejected.

• A WGN Chicago offer granting Sen. McCarthy time to answer Mr. Stevenson and acceptance by the Senator of this offer and others given voluntarily by some radio stations.

• An attack on Edward R. Murrow, which Sen. McCarthy delivered when interviewed on Fulton Lewis jr.'s MBS news program Thursday night. He said Mr. Murrow was once described as an adviser to a "communist propaganda school."

Stations Scheduled

Sen. McCarthy will appear on radio stations March 19 when he makes an address in Milwaukee. According to the Senator he has accepted offers for a half-hour from these stations: WGN Chicago, WJMJ Philadelphia, WTNJ Trenton, WNMP Evanston, Ill., and WPAC Patchogue, N. Y. He said WILM Wilmington, Del., offered him a two-hour free time period between 10:15 and 12:15 p.m. EST at an early date.

But William G. Long, general manager of WTNJ, was quoted later as denying that any "authorized agent" of the station had offered the Senator time. He said the station discovered that a disc jockey, identified as Gene Asro, had sent a telegram inviting Sen. McCarthy "free one-half hour radio time" to reply to Mr. Stevenson.

This, according to Mr. Long, was a statement issued on Mr. Asro's own volition and not as a representative of the station. "I understand it is Mr. Asro's intention to obtain time on WTNJ which he will probably pay for," Mr. Long said. The station agreed to the paid broadcast if time was found available.

WGN, the Chicago Tribune outlet, said it also offered to make the McCarthy broadcast available to other stations.

Frank P. Schreiber, manager of WGN Inc. (WGN-AM-TV) wired the Senator as follows:

"Understand NBC and CBS have refused to grant you time to reply to attacks made upon you in recent broadcasts over their facilities. Pursuant to WGN's long standing policy of presenting both sides of all public issues we offer you free of charge broadcasting time to present your side of this controversy to the American public and we will consent to allow any other radio station to simulcast or rebroadcast the program without restriction."

CBS' Murrow devoted last Tuesday night's See It Now telecast, which is sponsored by Aluminum Co. of America, to what amounted to an indictment of Sen. McCarthy, for the most part using the voice and scenes of the Senator himself as taped and filmed. Mr. Murrow announced on the program that See It Now facilities would be made available to Sen. McCarthy for reply, if he "desires to answer himself." Sen. McCarthy, who was reported not to have seen the show, did not indicate immediately what his response would be.

The telecast, however, touched off an audience response described as one of the heaviest in CBS history. It also inspired widespread newspaper coverage which included, along with some brickbats, high tributes to the commentator, the network, and the sponsor and, linked with the NBC and CBS rejection of Sen. McCarthy's demands for free time to answer Mr. Stevenson, praise for the broadcasting industry as a whole.

CBS' MURROW
The documentary swamps switchboards.

At CBS a battery of some 20 operators was kept busy taking calls Tuesday night through Thursday after the See It Now telecast. It was reported that as of Thursday night, the network had received 12,924 calls complimenting the broadcast and 1,367 against it. At the same time 3,267 complimentary and 203 protesting telegrams had been received.

As of Thursday, CBS was not sure whether it would telecast a repeat of Mr. Murrow's tv show on the Senator. The network reported a host of requests for a re-run.

CBS and NBC, for their decisions to go along with the Republican Party and allow free time to Vice President Nixon to answer Mr. Stevenson, and to deny Mr. McCarthy's bid, were labeled "dishonest and immoral" by the Wisconsin Senator.

His displeasure with the networks' stand was reflected in his refusal, at a Tuesday news conference in New York, to pose for CBS or NBC cameras or to talk to newsmen for those networks.

This refusal prompted an immediate protest by the Radio, Newsreel, Television Working Press Assn. of New York. In a telegram to the Senator, Arnold Lerner of Warner-Pathe News, president of the association, protested "emphatically against your discriminatory attitude . . . by barring newsfilm crews of CBS and NBC from coverage of an open press conference, you have deprived a substantial segment of the public of its right to obtain news through an important news medium. . . .

Courtesy of Washington (D. C.) Evening Star

"We earnestly feel that your personal quarrels with television networks must not be permitted to interfere with the free and unfettered flow of news to the American public.

"I need hardly point out that once a practice of barring 'unfavorable' news agencies is adopted, it might conceivably develop to the point where only 'favorable' agencies would be admitted, making a travesty of the very institution of the press conference."

Films made at the news conference included those of UP-Movietone News, which serves WPIX (TV) and WABD (TV) in the New York area, and INS' News of the Day.

A part of the exchange with Sen. McCarthy (paraphrased) quoted the Senator as saying, in effect, "It's a question whether CBS and NBC can deny time to answer somebody like Stevenson. I asked for time to answer the vicious charges he made against me. They refused. Just what I'm going to do, I don't know, but I intend to go after it in detail."

At another point, when a reporter noted that NBC had made a tape recording of his remarks and asked whether Sen. McCarthy intended to take steps to prevent its use, Mr. McCarthy was quoted as saying he "wouldn't do anything that would affect an enterprising young man."

Comr. Lee said Tuesday:

"Section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934 requires that a station provide to legally qualified candidates equal time where time is given or sold to one of the other candidates.

"In the current controversy none of the participants are candidates in the sense of the act. Consequently, the action of the networks in giving time to the Republican Party to answer Gov. Stevenson has been in the nature of a policy and is we think very fair and in the public interest. . . ."

Vice President Nixon's reply to Mr. Stevenson, who spoke on CBS Radio, CBS-TV, and NBC Radio on Saturday night (March 6), was to be made last Saturday night on the same networks, 10:30-11 p.m.

In a statement on its decision to grant time to the GOP National Committee, which named the Vice President as spokesman, CBS said that "Mr. Stevenson's address was carried by the CBS Radio and Television Networks as a public service in time granted to the Democratic National Committee under whose auspices the address was made. It is logical and equitable therefore to provide equal time for reply to the Republican National Committee rather than to any individual.

Fills Legal Requirements

"CBS is confident that its action completely fulfills both the spirit and the letter of the law and the FCC requirements."

In his first appearance following the Stevenson speech, Sen. McCarthy told commentator Lewis Thursday (MBS, 7-7:15 p.m.) that Mr. Murrow was an American adviser to the Moscow U. summer session in 1935. He said he was assistant director of the Institute of International Education which advocated violent overthrow of the traditional social order. Sen. McCarthy ascribed these charges to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Feb. 18, 1935.

"This may explain why Edward R. Murrow week after week feels he must smear McCarthy," the Senator asked. "Maybe Murrow is worried about exposure of some of his friends. I don't know."

The Senator classed Mr. Murrow with what he termed the "extreme left wing bleeding heart elements of television and radio."

Mr. Lewis interviewed the Senator on his weekend tv series, spotlighting alleged misuse of government funds in Alaska.

In reply to the MBS broadcast Mr. Murrow charged "reckless handling of the truth." He said in 1953. He said in 1935 his role was in a student-professor exchange project that was cancelled by Russia before it began, with the collegiate group spending the summer traveling in the Soviet Union, "an activity which was not then and is not now illegal."

Answering a McCarthy charge that Mr. Murrow had not told the truth in claiming American Civil Liberties Union had not been listed as a subversive group, Mr. Murrow said the Attorney General's list and FBI do not list ACLU as subversive nor does any other government agency. He added that ACLU has letters of commendation from Presidents Eisenhower, and Truman, and Gen. MacArthur.

Sen. McCarthy said at a news conference that if his petition to FCC is rejected, he then will sponsor legislation to assure that in the future, anyone attacked in a free-time political broadcast or telecast can have equal free time to reply. Such a bill, he said, "most likely won't affect this situation," but would set up rules for future similar cases. (See box on Sec. 315 of Communications Act.)

He said he also plans to press for adoption of a bill (S 2125) to require radio and tv stations, including the amateurs, to record all programs.

"According to some intelligence agencies," Sen. McCarthy said, "the hams are a tremendous potential for passing out improper information for espionage and so forth." This purpose of the McCarthy bill was made known to B•T by the Senator last year when the bill was first introduced [B•T, June 22, 1953].

FCC's Position

FCC has commented on the bill but has taken neither a positive nor a negative stand. Its comments to the Senate Interstate & Foreign Commerce Committee, where the McCarthy legislation pends, were more of a questioning nature underlining the many problems which would come from such a demand on stations [B•T, Dec. 12, 1953].

A sidelight to the McCarthy-Stevenson-network battle on radio-tv was a charge by Sen. Ralph Flanders (R-Vt.) that the greatest danger from communism is external and that Sen. McCarthy is doing his best to shatter the GOP. Sen. Flanders' fiery, anti-McCarthy speech, delivered on the floor of the Senate, later was repeated in part for radio-tv.

The Law Reads . . .

REFERENCE in the Communications Act to political broadcasts is contained in Sec. 315, reprinted here in full:

"(a) If any licensee shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station, and the Commission shall make rules and regulations to carry this provision into effect: Provided, That such licensee shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast under the provisions of this section. No obligation is hereby imposed upon any licensee to allow the use of its station by any such candidate.

"(b) The charges made for the use of any broadcasting station for any of the purposes set forth in this section shall not exceed the charges made for comparable use of such station for other purposes."

Ike Backs Networks in Giving Time to GOP Only

PRESIDENT Eisenhower bolstered the CBS and NBC network positions in the controversy with Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

Eight-minute excerpts of the President's remarks on the McCarthy case, made at the Wednesday morning news conference, were fed to networks Wednesday afternoon via the Washington sound loop. Included were:

Q—Do you think that the big networks have been fair in giving time to the Republican National Committee to answer Governor Stevenson rather than to Senator McCarthy? McCarthy feels that the networks have been unfair.

The President—I am not going to make the decisions that, of course, the FCC makes, and that the networks make on their own responsibility. Personally, I think that the networks have certainly discharged their responsibility for being impartial when they gave to the Republican National Committee the right to answer as they see fit.

You know, if you would take in any speech—suppose any one of you would make a speech, whatever party you belong to, and mention 20 names on the other side; now, does the network have to give 20 different people the right to get up and answer, or is it a party thing?

There must be some limit to this sort of thing, and I believe as long as they give to responsible, acknowledged heads of the organizational party—that is, the organization part of the party, the chairman, the right to determine this, that is justice.

Q—Mr. President, do you not regard the Stevenson speech as a part of the Democratic campaign for Congress, and therefore it should be answered by the party?

The President—Yes.

MURROW WINS THE NATION'S APPLAUSE

CBS commentator's program on Sen. McCarthy draws journalistic honor for itself and for the broadcast industry.

COMMENTS on last week's Edward R. Murrow See It Now show on CBS Television, which was devoted to a documentary-type look at Sen. McCarthy, were heard in Congress and in the nation's press.

Some of these comments and other editorial opinion on the "free time" McCarthy issue are summarized below:

Rep. Melvin Price (D-Ill.) told the House Wednesday: "It is indeed a rare thing when a tv network will stick its neck out by initiating or permitting to go out over its facilities a hard-hitting, honest, unvarnished report on a highly charged, completely controversial issue.

"We have learned to expect television to pull its punches in a situation like that in order not to offend any articulate section of the population, or the sponsor, or some network vice president with a bad case of timidity.

"Last night, however, the Aluminum Co. of America again sponsored and CBS again carried over its facilities the kind of objective analysis of a hot—really hot—issue which . . . redeems television journalism and puts it into the journalistic bigtime."

Rep. Price said of the Edward R. Murrow program, "It was a devastatingly effective program." He expressed "thanks—as a newspaperman by occupation, as one who learned professionally to seek out the truth and be satisfied with nothing less than the accurate facts—for the really excellent job done last night in behalf of accuracy in political discussion by the Murrow-Friendly team over CBS.

REP. PRICE

"And I should like to express my thanks to the Aluminum Co. of America for having demonstrated an enlightened faith in the American system of free discussion of controversial issues by sponsoring the Murrow program and by giving it the complete editorial freedom last night's program again proved it enjoys.

"It was an outstanding example of honest, courageous reporting."

In an editorial, the New York Herald Tribune said: "Doubtless the . . . See It Now program, in which Edward R. Murrow paraded the Senator's record on television, will provoke Mr. McCarthy even further. The half-hour show . . . was a sober and realistic appraisal of McCarthyism and the climate in which it flourishes. Like the free press, the free broadcasters met a controversial subject with a frank and responsible approach. Apparently the audience response was overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Murrow and against Mr. McCarthy, but even if the returns were reversed, the network still would have fulfilled its functions as an organ of expression and public service.

"Mr. McCarthy's ability to insult and calumniate those who oppose or criticize him is well known. By refusing to be bullied, the broadcasters will assure their own future and help to guarantee America's."

John Crosby of the New York Herald Tribune said, "Right there television came of age. At least I can never recall any other time when a network—and Ed Murrow is a director as well as one of the chief spokesmen for the Columbia Broadcasting System—has told its listeners to straighten up and act like free men with the clear implication that they are not now doing so."

There was at least one printed charge, by radio-tv columnist Jack O'Brian of the New York Journal-American, that before the Murrow telecast, CBS Board Chairman William S. Paley had "personally ordered the pompous portsider to take a more middle ground" but that "Murrow refused" and "backstage explosions kept detonating until tv time with threats from both sides of firings and resignations."

A CBS spokesman branded such charges "completely and totally false."

Mr. O'Brian also said:

"Madison Ave.'s hottest rumor in the wake of Ed Murrow's McCarthy smear" is that "Murrow will resign from CBS' board of directors. As it stands, any Murrow utterance must be accepted as the network's official opinion—just as a cabinet member's public speeches are accepted as reflections of the Eisenhower Administration's."

CBS spokesman said this report was also "completely false." Other CBS sources pointed out that at a CBS board meeting Wednesday there was no talk of any resignation.

It was reported that Mr. Murrow's analysis of Sen. McCarthy's record had been on the agenda of See It Now producers Mr. Murrow and Fred W. Friendly, for many months. A news account said Mr. Murrow told a reporter early last October that he and Mr. Friendly were at work on such a documentary report and would broadcast the material at the first opportune moment.

Last Tuesday apparently was the opportune time in their opinion. Mr. Friendly was quoted: "Next week might have been too late."

The North American Newspaper Alliance reported that no pressure was brought to bear upon Mr. Murrow or Mr. Friendly by top executives at CBS to abandon the program or to modify the position taken. NANA said CBS Board Chairman William Paley did not interfere in any way with customary preparation.

Jack Gould, radio-tv editor of the New York Times, called the Murrow show "crusading journalism of high responsibility and genuine courage," saying:

"For tv, so often plagued by timidity and hesitation, the program was a milestone that reflected enlightened citizenship on the part of the CBS and, particularly, the Aluminum Co. of America, who paid the bill to make it possible. No voice is braver than those who enable it to be heard."

A pungent remark on the editorial page of the Washington News in a column by Dan Kidney: "Sen. McCarthy can demand time to answer Sen. Flanders if he wants to attend the Senate some time when it is in session."

The New York Times, in an editorial blast, entitled "Who Speaks for the GOP?" said:

"No doubt Mr. McCarthy will use every weapon at his command to frighten his Republican colleagues and the radio networks into backing down on their decision—if not this time, then next time. He is right in believing that this is a test. But, try as hard as he will to twist the issue, this is not a test of free speech. Mr. McCarthy has that. It is a test of the control of the Republican Party. Mr. McCarthy hasn't that—yet. And it is up to President Eisenhower and his advisers to prevent him from getting it."

The Washington Post said: "If Sen. McCarthy were given free time on the air whenever anyone spoke of him disrespectfully, he would be talking incessantly—which sometimes seems to be the case anyhow. For the Senator has succeeded in making himself a symbol of slander and political irresponsibility."

David Lawrence, in his syndicated news column, attacked the position of CBS and NBC in denying time to Sen. McCarthy, saying they had made "a serious mistake." He said this denial works against the stand by radio-tv that they should have equal access to the news as the press. He said it was "a bad precedent . . . which will plague them [networks] for years to come unless . . . they reverse their . . . decision." Acknowledging the networks are legally within rights, Mr. Lawrence questioned the policy. If a man is attacked publicly in the press, he noted, he has an opportunity to answer by printing an answer himself. Not so on the broadcast media, he said.

Another for Murrow

EDWARD R. MURROW, CBS commentator, who holds five honorary college degrees, will receive his sixth, Doctor of Humane Letters, from Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., on June 6. He will be honored for "the intelligence, honesty and clarity with which he has been broadcasting the news since 1938 and for the programs with which he has made history a living and personal thing."

Hyde on Equal Time

FCC CHAIRMAN Rosel H. Hyde has told Congress that licensees, according to Commission policy, "should maintain a balance as a public duty" in programs dealing with public issues.

Chairman Hyde's comment was given earlier in the year to the House Appropriations subcommittee during hearings on the FCC's budget request for fiscal 1955. The subject was political usage of broadcasting facilities. Testimony was released Thursday (see page 54).

Chairman Hyde also made the distinction as to what the law states (Sec. 315 of the Act) and what is Commission "policy." He said the "Commission feels that licensees should be fair in the treatment of public issues under all conditions." Discussing the November Truman-McCarthy free time incident [B•T, Nov. 30, 23, 1953], Chairman Hyde said FCC had "no part in that series of programs". Chairman Hyde, Comrs. George Sterling and E. M. Webster (present before the subcommittee) said they had not asked the networks for time for either Harry S. Truman or Sen. McCarthy. Asked about members of the FCC staff, Chairman Hyde said he knew of "no such request. I would be astounded if anyone did."

NESTLE BUYS LARGE CAMPAIGN ON WNEW

THE NESTLE Co. (Nescafe), New York, signed with WNEW New York last week for what was described as one of the largest single radio station announcement program advertising schedules, said to represent about $6,000 weekly. The campaign will be launched April 5 with round-the-clock coverage to run until Jan. 1, 1955. Nestle's saturation spot announcement and program sponsorship extends through WNEW'S 24-hour-a-day broadcasts, seven days a week, and represents participation in all WNEW personalities shows.

A meeting explaining the Nestle-WNEW project was held at the station, at which time all the facts of the contract were outlined to 75 Nescafe salesmen and distributors.

The negotiations were handled by Donald Cady, vice president in charge of general advertising and merchandising for Nestle; John Crandall, media director of Sherman & Marquette, and John Geddes, WNEW.

General Foods Plans Anniversary Show on Tv

GENERAL FOODS, New York, to celebrate its quarter-century anniversary will sponsor Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II in their first formal venture into television, a 90-minute, star-studded musical cavalcade to be presented on both CBS-TV and NBC-TV, 8-9:30 p.m. Sunday, March 28. The cost of the program is understood to be about $300,000.

The cavalcade will include musical excerpts from Rodgers' and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," "The King and I," "Carousel," "Allegro," and "Me and Juliet." The stars of the respective productions on broadway will in many cases appear on the program in renditions of portions of their respective roles.

Young & Rubicam, New York, is the agency handling the television extravaganza.

Geyer Inc. Names Ballard To Nash Account, Board

SAM M. BALLARD, vice president, Geyer Inc., New York, has been elected to the agency's board of directors, B. B. Geyer, president and chairman, announced last week.

Mr. Ballard also was named supervising executive on the Nash Motors account, and will head the agency group on the account in the New York and Detroit offices.

He has been with Geyer since August 1953, when he resigned as chairman of the management committee and board member of Gardner Adv., St. Louis and New York. Prior to that Mr. Ballard handled the Hudson Motor Car account for Compton Adv. and for Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance.

Y&R's Dyke to New Post

KEN R. DYKE, vice president and assistant to the president, Young & Rubicam, New York, has been appointed director of branch office operations in the U. S., it was announced by S. S. Larmon, president of the agency. Y&R's domestic branch offices are located in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"Mr. Dyke," Mr. Larmon said, "will continue his responsibilities as vice president in charge of publicity and public relations. The International Division, which includes London, Mexico City, Toronto and Montreal, will remain under the direction of Lorimer B. Slocum, vice president."

Buys Color Breaks

CASTRO Decorators Inc., New York, has placed "the first local commercial order for station breaks in color" on WNBT (TV) New York, it was announced last week by Hamilton Shea, general manager of WNBC-WNBT (TV). The sale was completed by Mr. Shea and Jay Heitlin, sales manager of WNBT (TV), and Bernard Carlin, executive head of Newton Adv., which represented the company for its Castro convertibles. The contract reserves for Castro first availabilities of local color time spots. Following negotiations, Mr. Shea said: "The receipt of this initial local order for color commercials is another milestone in the rapid progress of this tremendously important addition to the television medium. The great impact of color from an advertising standpoint will open the doors to many advertisers." Several weeks ago WNBT (TV) carried what it described as "the first commercial color telecast of a regular program, Jinx's Diary."

Bishop Names Jay, Burr

NORMAN JAY has been elected president and Donald Burr vice president of Hazel Bishop Inc., New York, it was announced last week by Raymond Spector, chairman of the board.

Mr. Spector also revealed that the company's sales for the fiscal period ended Oct. 31, 1953, were over $10 million. The net profit before taxes was $2,022,848 and after taxes $601,111. The company's sales are running approximately 50% ahead of last year and the advertising budget for current fiscal year is $5½ million.

The Bandwagon

The past fortnight has been exceedingly difficult for Sen. Joe McCarthy. New enemies and old friends are attacking him from all directions. The ranks of anti-McCarthyites have suddenly swollen with distinguished recruits. The senator is wounded, his fangs dulled, and it is possible to move safely in to feast on his bones.

The bandwagon has suddenly become crowded and those of us who at times have felt lonely on it, say: Welcome Aboard.

When this sad chapter of American history is written it should record those who now have jumped to the "right" side, but who for eight years had silently consented or loudly applauded while the senator trampled his way to the demagogic top.

Senator McCarthy has committed no investigative sins in the past month different from those he committed over and over in past years. He succeeded in the past because of the vast indifference, the incredible unconcern with the basic American rights.

What he has wildly said about an Army general, a popular commentator, a Republican senator recently, differ not a whit from his treatment of professors, and government clerks and less prominent newspapermen in the past. But somehow that was different — people said. Maybe Joe was a little crude, but he meant well.

It is hard to understand a people who became so aroused when General Zwicker was told he "lacked the brains of a 5-year-old," but who worried hardly at all when the same senator called Gen. George C. Marshall a traitor.

Of all McCarthy's assaults on truth, one stands out. And the willingness of responsible and honest people to tolerate it is the real phenomenon of his rise.

That is his fradulent claim to being a war hero. None of us care much for the professional hero — even when his decorations are genuine. But all of us have a sincere respect for the men who fought for us, bravely and well. For any man to run for public office solely on his war record is slightly disgusting.

For a man to campaign on a phony war record is downright sacrilegious — an insult to all the kids who died unbemedaled on our battlefields.

That's what Joe McCarthy did—way back in 1946—and those who suddenly are so shocked about him now, knew it then, but thought little of it.

McCarthy campaigned as "Tailgunner Joe," the Marine hero. He was not a tailgunner. He was an intelligence officer. He said he enlisted as a buck private and worked his way up. He didn't. He wangled a commission as a 1st lieutenant before he ever put on a uniform. He claimed he was wounded in action. Actually, he broke his leg while horsing around. He had a lot of folks believing he won the war. Actually, he resigned from the marines at the height of the Pacific war—the day the marines hit Iwo Jima—so he could come home and make political capital out of his war record.

Much has been made of the Army's "surrender" to McCarthy recently. The Army needn't blush. It was the glorybound Marine Corps, which claims it never retreats, let along surrender, which really bowed to McCarthy.

After he became senator, he frightened the brave Marines into awarding him decorations which the Corps previously had determined he didn't earn. But they decorated Joe in a formal ceremony.

Through all this none of the veterans' organizations which take so much pride in the prestige of veterans ever complained. They applauded.

A man who would falsify his war record—one of the supposedly sacred ingredients of patriotism—and then claim to be the greatest patriot of us all, is a man none of whose actions should surprise you. Yet, as they clamor on the bandwagon now, so many people act surprised.

Maybe it's because there is a little fraud in all of us.

Big Decision

While the nation's life goes on day to day, groups of men sit around tables and try to reach decisions on questions which can affect us all for a long time. The Supreme Court tries to decide about segregation. Senate committees try to write new tax laws.

One of the most important decisions of our age will be handed down by a little known group of men studying a very new problem. They are the military men who must determine whether Frank Schwable should be court-martialed.

Schwable is the flyer who, shot down over Korea, succumbed to Communist torture and made false confessions of germ warfare. Was his action unbecoming an officer and a betrayal of his country? Or is he to be likened to the officer who fails only because he has just had his head blown off?

The decision may well be the official recognition of a new weapon, the beginning of a new code of conduct for fighting men. It could be a sign, more emphatic than the atom bomb, that we have moved into a new age of warfare.

Word Of Life

ACTS 9:1-9 . . . "But Saul, still breathing threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord, went to the high priest and asked him for letters to the synagogues at Damascus, so that if he found any belonging to the Way, men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem.

Now as he journeyed he approached Damascus, and suddenly a light from heaven flashed about him. And he fell to the ground and heard a voice saying to him, 'Saul, Saul, why do you persecute me? And he said, 'Who are you, Lord? And he said, "I am Jesus, whom you are persecuting; but rise and enter the city, and you will be told what you are to do.'

The men who were traveling with him stood speechless, hearing the voice but seeing no one. Saul arose from the ground; and when his eyes were opened, he could see nothing; so they led him by the hand and brought him into Damascus. And for three days he was without sight, and neither ate nor drank . . ."

Abandon Sea Survey

It hasn't been mentioned in any of the press releases on economy, but the administration's economy ax has eliminated a planned survey of the strategic Bering Sea, separating Alaska and Siberia.

The survey is considered so important that Rear Adm. Robert Studds, chief of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, came up to Capitol Hill to protest. Testifying behind closed doors of the House Appropriations Committee, Studds complained that the budget cutback would force him to decommission his largest ship, the Plymouth, which is now surveying the Bering Sea.

"In view of this proposed 15 per cent cut in your funds and the laying off of 253 employees and the mothballing of your largest and fastest ship, I wonder if you could tell us with propriety what the Soviet Union is doing in the field of surveys, particularly up there in the Bering Sea area?" asked Rep. John Rooney, Brooklyn Democrat.

Pearson

"I don't know, sir," replied Studds.

"I don't think anyone knows, sir," broke in his assistant, Capt. I. E. Rittenburg.

"Are you quite concerned about this cutback?" asked Georgia's Rep. Prince Preston.

'Yes, sir, I am," the admiral responded. "We feel these surveys are highly necessary. It is not my thinking, either. It is the thinking of the Navy Department."

Pointing to a special chart, he added: "I would like to show you this chart to show you just where we are going to suspend these Bering Sea operations, although the Navy is greatly interested in it. We have been doing it at the request of the Navy. That is shoal area, and you can see the strategic importance of it."

"Have you been able to ascertain," demanded Preston, "why this drastic action was taken on the part of the Bureau of the Budget"

"I think it is a general balancing of the budget, is it not?" shrugged Studds. "That is my understanding of it."

Art has now triumphed over economy, at least in the Senate office building. Senators are now able to paint their office walls a cheerful, light green instead of the drab but thriftier tan that has been standard in the Senate for years.

It took a long battle to break down the staid Senate Rules Committee which regarded the old Army tan is not only more economical, but more solemn and dignified. One exception was made some time ago for the granddaddy of the Senate, Rhode Island's spry, little Sen. Theodore Green, who was allowed to paint his walls to match his name.

Only other earlier exception was Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, who argued that green was more feminine. This was in the nature of a consolation prize after the Rules Committee had turned down her request for a powder room near the Senate chamber. Since facilities were available outside the cloakroom for male senators, she fought for equal rights for women. All she got was a coat of green paint for her office.

Later, when Utah's freshman Sen. Wallace Bennett applied for similar painting privileges, he was turned down. As a businessman and manufacturer back in Salt Lake city, however, he vowed to break this Senate boycott against attractive, expensive paints, and requested permission to cover his office walls with his own green paint. After considerable delay and debate, permission was finally granted.

Other envious senators dropped around and admired the restful green color. After that, the pressure became so great that the Rules Committee reluctantly agreed to stock green as well as tan paint. Now ten senate offices have converted to green.

Able Civil Aeronautics Administrator Fred Lee admitted behind closed doors the other day that this country is lagging two years behind Britain in developing fast passenger planes.

Testifying secretly before the senate aviation subcommittee, Lee predicted: "Coming into this fast aircraft, we are facing the prospect that turbine passenger transportation will come into operation in this country between 1957 and 1959."

"Do you feel," asked Chairman Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, "that we are falling behind the British in the field of transport?"

"I think we are behind about two years at the present time, but I think we are catching up very fast," replied Lee.

Remarked Truman's old friend, General Harry Vaughan, after the Stevens-McCarthy incident: "If the Navy's going to start wearing swords, the Army can now carry umbrellas."

Billy Rose

Bill Shakespeare, Civic Booster

Every now and so often, I get a letter from the mayor of this or that smallish town asking me to suggest a stunt or scheme which will help put his community on the map.

My answer to all such queries is that I know of only one sure-fire way to publicize a small town. Namely, to capitalize on the pulling power of a gent named Wiliam Shakespeare.

The alderman in the checked vest has a question? How can a longhair like Shakespeare attract attention and tourists to, let's say, Pismo Beach, Calif., or Ong's Hat, N. J.?

Well, the simplest way to answer the alderman is to give him some facts and figures about the Shakespeare industry. . .

For centuries, Stratford-upon-Avon was an English whistle stop, listed in the travel agencies only because it was the birthplace of the Bumptious bard. In this town, mostly for reasons of nostalgia, a replica of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre was kept open, but it only gave 80 performances a season and played to an average attendance of fewer than 500 customers.

Rose

Some years ago this miniature theatre burned down, and several of the town's live wires decided to replace it with a large modern auditorium in which two permanent repertory companies, with big names as guest stars, would give performances eight months out of the year.

Result? As of today, the new Stratford-upon-Avon theatre is playing to almost 500,000 paid admissions a year, and the culture-hungry tourists who flock to it from all over the world have made Stratford the most prosperous small town in England. Virtually every ticket sold means the purchase of a night's lodging in a local hostelry, fish-and chips in a restaurant, a couple of drinks in a pub, and a rowboat ride on the Avon. And as for getting on the map, Stratford is better known around the world than many cities with a hundred times its population.

Another example of what the Wondrous William can do for a community is the village in Ontario which is also known as Stratford. Just last summer, in an arena-type tent, a couple of civic-minded gents presented "All's Well That Ends Well" and "Richard III" with Alex Guinness as the male star and his London colleague, Tyrone Guthrie, as director.

Result? For one thing, there wasn't a hotel or rooming house accommodation to be had within a radius of 20 miles. For another, the event was considered so important that it was covered by just about every topflight dramatic critic in the Western Hemisphere. Did the canvas-top theatre do any business? Yes, almost $50,000 a week during its engagement.

To be sure, this kind of box-office magic only happens when top players, directors and technicians are hired to do the right and proper by Will's words. But the remarkable thing about Shakespeare is that when you set out to present him beautifully, you can buy some of the theatre's biggest talents for small dough. This season, Robert Ryan came 3,000 miles from Hollywood to act in "Coriolanus" at a slow hundred bucks a week. Earlier, Jose Ferrer starred in "Richard III," and his produest brag was that the management paid for his lunch. The thespian, it seems, has only one dream—to be able to say, "The time I did Hamlet—" or "When I played Lady Macbeth—"

This year, as per usual, dozens of towns will spend huge amounts of money on razzmatazz promotion stunts. They will try to make a big noise with pageants, festivals, name bands and the crowning of Miss Broccoli of 1954. And in almost every case, they will engage the services of high-priced public relations counselors.

For a fraction of what they squander, as the story of the two Stratfords proves, they can have the services of the greatest press agent of them all—Mr. Shakespeare — who works for free and doesn't even ask for a cut of the take.

Glenn Williams

This creep (meaning me) has been doing the "Creep" (meaning a dance) for years and just didn't know it.

Now, thanks to a little magazine called "Music Views", I now know what I've been doing and it makes me feel a little creepy.

The Creep, says the mag, is quite the rage in England and is spreading to the United States, so Katy had better bar the door.

Essentially, the Creep is a reverse tango, with the man always moving backward.

The music to which the Creep is crept is a simple 12-bar blues riff, whatever that is.

Williams

Well, I'm here to tell the British lads I was a backward dancer while they were still gulping tea and crumpets at their mothers' knees.

In fact, I was voted the most backward boy in my dancing class.

Actually, a couple of girl moppets were responsible for my dancing style, which has come to be known in my circle as the "Fire-And-Fall-Back" or "Run - For-the-Hills" type.

One of the moppets was the first to attempt to teach me how to dance. She was a brawny, buxom brunette, who, I feel sure, grew up to be a wrestler.

She was a determined type and every time I tried to fox-trot my way forward a couple of paces, she bounded me back for a 5-yard loss.

I guess she figured I was trying to get fresh.

Later, after I learned how to dance in a somewhat horrible fashion, I took up with a blonde who wouldn't have weighed over 90 pounds if she had tied lead weights to her skirts, which she hadn't.

When dancing with her I always was fearful that I would plow under the fragile beauty if I took a step forward without giving her fair warning.

As a consequence, I continued to back-pedal as best I could in the accepted two-step fashion of the day.

Now, this creep, this nowhere square, this schmoe is sitting around waiting for the Creep to gallop out to these midwest parts.

When it does, this real-gone guy, this cat, this hep dog is going to be out on the dance floor shaking a leg with the best of them.

It took a long time, but the Creep is creeping toward what I've been practicing for lo, these many years.

It just goes to show a prophet is not without honor except in his own country.

Bet that 90-pound blonde — who married a cornball from Sabetha, Kan., — is sorry now.

Western Front:

Sen. McCarthy

I am somewhat disappointed in the attitude of the paper, or at least Intercepted Letters concerning Senator McCarthy.

Twice last week the Senator caught it. I am sure that none of us believe that the Army is "coodling" Communism. On the other hand let us admit it is very possible that some Communist could belong to our Army. It certainly isn't right that these individuals be promoted and given an honorable discharge. That is wrong, and so are those who were responsible for the promotions. A sign of greatness is when one will admit mistakes. Certainly it isn't a sign of greatness to run to the skirts of Ike and ask him to protect them. Ike was great and admitted for them that they were wrong.

Senator McCarthy may be a little rough. I wish he could be rougher. God knows he isn't worse than the Reds. Maybe he will step on some toes—but until I hear of a person who is more effective against communism I'm for him. Let the man, who can do a beter job and prove it, cast the first stone.—F. G. FREEMAN, M. D., Pratt.

Wrong Road

Adlai's spech in Miami reminded me of the story of the man, driving thru the Ozarks, who stopped to inquire of a native if he was on the right road to Kansas City. The native said: "Don't rightly believe ya're. This road moseys along for a spell, then turns into a hog trail, then a squirrel run and fin'ly runs right up a pine tree and ends in a knot hole."—HOLLY RENFRO, Montezuma.

City Cleanup

What right do the men have to come around snooping in our yards, garages, sheds and outhouses? And telling us how to live!

I haven't seen any kids in our end of town that are sick. Also how would they like for someone to come snooping into their affairs!

I admit the town needs cleaning up but why not in the right places. Regarding the privys —did it ever occur to these men that if the sewer ran down our alley we wouldn't have the privys! Also, if we had a lot of money maybe we could all live north of the tracks. Or if we bought everything and owed everybody, we could move up there anyway. It takes a poor man from sun-up til sundown to make a decent living for his family and most of the time the wife has to work too.

Isnt it better that a man buy old cars and tear them up and sell them so he can make ends meet than have to go out and rob and steal to get things for his family Why not start with some of the eating places or drinking taverns!

It seems the poorer class of people of Hutchinson catch it all the time. Why can't they let them alone! They aren't asking the city for anything. They pay their taxes and more than they can afford.

We're all happy. Why don't they let us alone.

I don't suppose you will put this in the paper, but I feel a lot better anyway.—R. L. SMITH ("South End"), Hutchinson.

Chain Letters

The enclosed type of letters are being circulated and their non-legality has again been ruled by the Post Office Department.

(Dr. Wenke enclosed a chain letter being circulated among fishermen. It asks the recipient to send a new plug to the name at the top of the list, then write six letters, leaving out the top name and adding his own name. Promise is that in a few days, he will receive 36 plugs. "Every good fisherman needs 36 plugs," says the letter. It also states: "It is legal as there is no money involved."

The Justice Department has condemned this practice, stating that persons writing them are liable under federal law regardless of the "no money involved" clause. — L. L. WENKE, M.D., Great Bend.

Can you tell the 5 things wrong with this room?
It doesn't show in the picture but:
1. It's either too hot or too cold
2. There's no continuous air circulation
3. There are drafts
4. It's either muggy or dry as a bone
5. The air lacks freshness
If your home has these defects you can cure them by installing a new Lennox Perima-flo heating—or heating and cooling—system.
Lennox Perima-flo places an invisible curtain of conditioned air between the weather and you—stops cold at the outside walls, in front of doors and windows.
It also makes possible economical summer air conditioning because the same ducts which carry warm air in winter carry cool air into every room in summer.
Let us demonstrate the comfort you can enjoy with a Lennox Perima-flo system.

KANSAN FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

State Airman Killed In Local Car-Truck Crash

STATE TRUCK, CAR COLLIDE; THREE INJURED

Francis Allen, 20, Smoky Hill Airman, Dies in Crash

A man identified tentatively as Francis J. Allen, 20, stationed at the Smoky Hill Air Force Base at Salina, Kas., was killed early Saturday morning in a collision of a passenger car and a truck.

The accident occurred at the north end of the US-81 Highway overpass, north of the city limits.

Victor Santiago, 19, of the base, was critically hurt. Two other servicemen, Robert J. Benoit, 22, and Bernard L. Reinike, 18, suffered less severe injuries.

Lonnie Swift, 40, of 2804 Burton, driver of the truck, was not injured.

The collision was blamed indirectly upon the storm which struck Wichita Friday afternoon and night.

Sergt. Ray Dougherty and Patrolman Larry Duffy and John Adams of the sheriff's road patrol, said Swift, operator of the state highway truck, had started out early to sand some roads.

Swift said the car in which the servicemen were riding struck his truck from the rear.

Byrd-Snodgrass and Downing ambulances took the victims to St. Francis Hospital where Allen was pronounced dead on arrival.

The sheriff's deputies said the servicemen apparently were en route to their base when the accident happened.

The sheriff's dispatcher said the call relative to the accident was received at 4:41 a.m.

Two other men were sent to Wichita hospitals for treatment Friday as a result of another accident blamed on the dust storm.

When Frank Wright of Wellington, Kas., slowed his automobile on US-81 Highway a mile south of the Sedgwick County line, it was hit in the rear by a vehicle operated by Jim Chance Clothier, 4070 Steele.

Clothier was treated at St. Joseph Hospital and Jack Bedell of Oklahoma City, Okla., a passenger in Clothier's car, was treated at St. Francis Hospital. Wright was not hurt.

POLICE SERGEANT SHOT IN BANK DOORWAY—Sgt. Howard M. Slessman, 46, lies half in and half out of the doorway of the Greenwood Branch of the Seattle First National Bank after he was shot in the neck by holdup men. Attending doctor is not identified. (AP Wirephoto).

5-STATE DUST STORM WET BY HEAVY SNOWS

Nebraska Catches Brunt of Damage; Many Phones Out

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A snowstorm moved northeast out of Colorado and Kansas today, wetting down clouds of dust that had reduced visibility to zero in parts of five states. The blizzard dumped up to 10 inches of snow in its wake.

As the storm progressed, winds that had buffeted the Plains States with gusts up to 100 miles an hour diminished slowly. But hail borne by a howling wind and accompanied by lightning lashed Grand Rapids, Mich.

Nebraska bore the brunt in the early stages as the storm substituted snow for dust in its drive across the midcontinent.

Snow to depths of 10 inches was reported at Chadron in western Nebraska. The Northwestern Bell Telephone Company reported 1,630 long line circuits out in Nebraska, Iowa and South Dakota. It said 3,600 farm phones were out of service in the three states.

In Kansas City, the weather bureau said the storm would move northeast thru Iowa and Minnesota into Wisconsin and Michigan, and eastward out of Oklahoma and Texas. The weatherman said some rain was in prospect north of a line extending roughly eastward from St. Joseph, Mo., northeast of St. Louis to Cincinnati. He said falling temperatures were in prospect for the South as warm air gave way to cold.

High winds continued to buffet Missouri last night, fanning dozens of forest fires, some covering more than 500 acres each.

The state conservation commission said the worst danger was in southwestern Missouri, where more than 20 fires raged.

Dust blown in from the Plains States hampered fire watchers in planes and towers.

In Kansas, whose wheat plains fed the dust storm, two died in a traffic mishap blamed on the storm. Scores of lesser accidents were reported.

The dust got so thick on the Oklahoma A&M basketball court at Stillwater that it had to be brushed off after every quarters

JURY AT PRATT FINDS PRATER SLEW HIS WIFE

Deliberate 11 Hours Over Case of Railroad Man

Pratt, March 13. (AP) — A Pratt County District Court jury, after 11 hours' deliberation, found Dave George Prater, 64, local railroad man, guilty of murder in the second degree in the fatal shooting of his 31-year-old wife last December 28.

Prater had been charged with first degree murder.

The jury reached its verdict at 5:20 a. m. and Judge Clark Wallace opened the sealed envelope in court at 9 a. m.

Fred Tillman of Pawhuska, Okla., defense counsel announced he would appeal the verdict and Judge Wallace gave him five days to file a motion for a new trial.

The trial was one of the most sensational in the state for many years and set the city of Pratt to buzzing with conjecture and rumor. Many of the townspeople knew of the Praters' stormy married life and some testified as to hearing the 65-year-old railroad engineer threaten his wife's life.

Repeated attempts by the defense to introduce testimony relatime to Mrs. Prater's alleged infidelity were halted by objections from the prosecution and agreements from Judge Wallace.

During the trial the defense apparently directed their efforts toward an "incident" theory concerned with the pistol death of Mrs. Prater, 34 years younger than her husband.

Prater told on the stand of being assaulted by his wife whom he quoted as saying, "I'll split your skull open." He said she attacked him with a small ax and struck [illegible] charge.

The bullet struck Mrs. Prater between the eyes.

URGE STRONG FARM MARKET

Daily Competition Assures Farmer of Best Market, Cattlemen Say

By MARK CLUTTER
Wichita Beacon Farm Editor

Cattlemen heard nationall-prominent speakers stress the need for strong competitive markets during the late Friday sessions of the Kansas Livestock convention at the Broadview.

"There must be daily competition to insure adequate prices and a dependable outlook," R. J. Riddell, executive vice-president of the National Livestock Exchange, declared. "We believe that the public market system is the best system that has yet been devised, and that it is one of the most valuable assets of the American farmer."

Riddell pointed out the importance of commission men in keeping livestock prices at a good level thru competition and skillful trading ability.

Riddell emprasized the importance of good stockyard facilities and praised the Wichita Union Stock Yards Co. for its recent substantial modernization.

SECRET ATOM DATA MISSING

Papers May Concern Hydrogen Bomb Plant Experiments

Washington, March 13. (AP) — Substantial quantities of secret documents,related possibly to hydrogen bomb production, reportedly aremissingfrom the government's huge 400,000-acre atomic plant at Hanford, Wash.

Rep. Pelly (R-Wash) told newsmen yesterday the Atomic Energy Commission has confirmed information that certain papers have vanished. Pelly,who said he first heard reports of this late last year, added that AEC did not tell him the natureof the missing classified material, but that he took it for granted it was "topsecret."

Pelly said he had no indication the data was stlen by spies, but he asked foran investigation by the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committeebecause, he said, "even if it's a matter ofpoor housekeeping, it's a shocking situation.

The congressman reported Chairman W. Sterling Cole (R-NY) of the atomic committee has agreed to look into the situation and that an investigator probably will be sent to Hanford shortly.

An AEC spokesman said the commission would have nothing to say for the time being. At Hanford itself, there was no immediate comment. The project, which lies near the Columbia River, employs 18,500 workers.

The project's main mission is production of plutonium—a fissionable material—for atomic bombs.

However, Dr. Ralph Lapp, a scientist who worked on the World War II Manhattan project, said in a recent book that material used in the first big hydrogen blast in November, 1952, was made at Hanford. Dr. Lapp identified this material as tritium ,a heavy form of hydrogen.

Cold Again Sunday

Topeka, March 13. (AP) — Clearing skies and sub-freezing temperatures took over in Kansas Saturday in the wake of what the weather bureau said was the season's most intense storm, and the outlook is for continued cold weather thru Sunday.

However, some moderation of temperatures is indicated in the west and central by Sunday afternoon. Low readings Sunday morning are expected to range from 5 to 10 above zero in the northwest to 20 in the southeast. Afternoon highs are due to be in the upper 30's.

The storm churned up the most severe dust blow in Kansas since the dirty 30's and accompanying snow created blizzard conditions in the northwest portion for a while on Friday but practically no moisture fell on the drouth-stricken state.

Most of the dust had moved eastward but some was still being

WEATHER

Wichita and vicinity — Partly cloudy with diminishing winds thru Sunday. Snow flurries ending this afternoon. Colder tonight, warmer Sunday. High today mid-30's; low tonight near 15; high Sunday near 40.

Kansas—Clearing west, partly cloudy with few snow flurries east Saturday afternoon; generally fair Saturday night and Sunday cold wave Saturday afternoon and colder Saturday night; not as cold west and central Sunday afternoon; low Saturday night 5-10 above northwest to 20 southeast; high Sunday upper 30s.

Oklahoma—Fair Saturday, Saturday night and Sunday with dimishing winds; cold Saturday and colder east and central Saturday night; warmer west and central Sunday afternoon; low Saturday night 15-20 northwest to 20-25 southeast; high Sunday 40s west and 35-40 east.

Clear, Cold City Forecast for Sunday

Skies over Wichita which cleared early Saturday morning hazed over again later and light snow fell at intervals. The dust of Friday disappeared during the night and predictions of the weather bureau indicated it would not return.

The weatherman's prediction of light moisture falls came true, as traces of snow fell during the night.

The thermometer, however, fell as the skies cleared and predictions for Sunday indicated the middle 30's for a high reading.

Winds will continue thru Saturday, the forecasters said, but no dust is expected. During Saturday night, the gale will subside, and Sunday's skies will be clear.

Little erosion damage was reported in the immediate Wichita vicinity. Forecasters said the dust hung over the city Friday was from Oklahoma and the western part of the state.

During the storm Friday, transportation facilities were partially interrupted. Several plane flights were cancelled and motorists found driving on highways a tedious, hazardous business.

Visibility during the day ranged from a mile and a half down to one half mile at intervals. The dust appeared to come in waves. At times the tops of city buildings were nearly obscured and minutes later the pall had lessened, then would return.

There's ample parking around the Broadview's new Coffee House.Adv.

U. S. PLANE HIT BY CZECH JET

Copyright 1954, N. Y. Times News Service

Bonn, Germany, March 13 — A United States military plane was attacked by a Czech jet fighter Friday in Germany near the Czechoslovak border.

The American plane landed safely at Neubiberg airbase near Munich. It was not damaged and none in the plane was hurt.

An announcement from headquarters of the United States air force in Europe said the American plane became lost on a routine training mission in Austria and was fired upon by the Czechoslovak fighter. The attacking plane was described by German witnesses as a Soviet-built MIG jet.

The shooting incident took place, according to a report from German border police headquarters at Munich, two or three miles inside German territory near Waldmuecen. Altho the air force mentioned only one plane, the German police statement said the Czechoslovak plane was seen attacking two other planes. Three spent cartridges apparently from aircraft cannon were found about 300 yards inside Germany.

CONGRESS HIGHLIGHTS

Washington, March 13. (AP) — A prolonged uproar revolving around one man—Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy —cast into seeming whispers this week congressional happenings that would have amounted to quite an earful in more normal times.

The Wisconsin Republican's aim, he says, is not to root out those who would destroy this country in a Communist conspiracy. But from one day to the next he was in running battle with first one, then another combatant not usually identified with the Kremlin.

The week was already off to a fast start from a radio-televised charge by Adlai E. Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic choice for President, that the Republican Party was "half McCarthy and half Eisenhower."

McCarthy said he wanted free radio-TV time to answer Stevenson. But Chairman Leonard Hall of the Republican National Committee beat him to it, got the networks to allot time to the party instead. With President Eisenhower's okay, Vice-President Nixon was named for the job.

McCarthy hired himself a lawyer to press his case for nationwide rebuttal, meanwhile availing himself to one broadcaster's offer to

NIXON WON'T DODGE ISSUES

Vice President Answers Stevenson Over Radio, TV

Washington, March 13. (INS) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon said today he "will not dodge the issues" when he makes a nationwide reply tonight to Adlai Stevenson's attack upon the Eisenhower administration.

The vice-president conferred for 45 minutes yesterday with President Eisenhower, who selected him to speak for the Republican party following the attack by the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee.

Following the White House meeting, Nixon secluded himself in a Washington Hotel room to escape a barrage of advice on how he should answer Stevenson's charge that the GOP is split "half McCarthy and half Eisenhower." The President has labeled this assertion "nonsense."

Nixon's speech will be carried at 9:30 p.m. (CST) over the same facilities which provided free time for Stevenson when he addressed a Democratic party gathering in Miami Beach, Fla. They are the National Broadcasting Radio Network and the Columbia Broadcasting System's radio and television hookups.

Both the NBC and CBS have rejected requests for similar free time made by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.). The GOP legislator has threatened legal action in an effort to force compliance.

It was reported that Nixon will speak from notes rather than from a prepared speech.

2 KANSANS DIE IN CAR WRECK

El Dorado, Kas., March 13. (AP)— A two-car headon collision during the dust storm Friday killed two persons and injured a third one 11 miles north of here on U.S. Highway 77.

Killed were Robert Earl Allison, 59, and his wife, Katherine, 56, of Independence, Kas. Allison was a salesman for the Wichita Building Materials Company.

The driver of the other car, Alex William Miller, 42, Toronto, Kas., was admitted to the hospital here. He suffered chest injuries and lacerations.

M'CARTHY ANSWERS ARMY

Washington, March 13. (INS)— Following, in chronological order, are excerpts of memoranda made public by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in charging the army with attempted "blackmail" to head off his investigation of Communists in the army:

November 6 — McCarthy wrote that Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens had asked him to "hold up" his hearings on the army and "go after the navy, the air force and the defense department, instead."

November 17 — A subcommittee memo reported a New York luncheon attended by McCarthy, Stevens, army legal counsel John Adams, subcommittee counsel Roy Cohn, and subcommittee staff director Francis Carr at which they discussed Stevens' news conference statement that "there had been no espionage at Fort Monmouth."

The memo added: "Mr. Stevens produced the correct transcript of the conference and said he had been badly misquoted in the press, and the press had absolutely distorted what he said and put in some plain untruths."

"At this meeting, Stevens again said he wished that we could get on to the air force and the navy and the personnel employed directly by the defense establishment instead of continuing with the army hearings."

December 9—McCarthy to Carr: ". . . I want to tell you . . . that I am getting fed up with the way the army is trying to use (Pvt. G. David) Schine as a hostage to pressure us to stop our hearings on the army. . .

"Again today, John Adams came down here after the hearings and using clever phrases tried to find out, 'what's there in it for us' if he and Stevens did something for Schine.

"He refers to Schine as our hostage or the hostage whenever his name comes up.

"I made it clear that as far as I

REPORT STATE ROADS CLEAR

Topeka, March 13. (AP) — The Highway Department reported slightly improved travel conditions in Kansas late Friday.

United States Highways 24 and 40 were reopened between Wamego and Topeka as blowing dust subsided enough to permit better visibility.

A highway department spokesman said conditions also had cleared up south of Wichita

He said little information had been received concerning conditions in the northwest part of the state. Earlier the department warned motorists to stay off roads in the section of the state north and west of Oakley.

He said it was believed no highways are blocked but that visibility may be near zero from blowing snow.

PROBER BACK IN HOME STATE

Due for Off-Cuff Talk; May Discuss Work of Committee

Manitowoc, Wis., March 13. — Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.), fresh from a round of clashes with the army in Washington, is due to deliver an off-the-cuff speech tonight before a Manitowoc group of businessmen.

The senator said he had no prepared text, but that the speech probably would review the work of his controversial Senate investigating subcommittee.

The Wisconsin junior senator, who spent the night at the Milwaukee home of Otis Gomillion, a private detective and long time personal friend, is scheduled to address a junior chamber of commerce bosses' night dinner.

McCarthy stepped from a plane into a stringing sleet without an overcoat. "I never wear one," he said. "I love this weather."

In a brief interview McCarthy defended Roy Cohn, chief counsel of his investigation committee.

"I have a strong hunch that Roy will be in Washington quite some time," McCarthy said.

Cohn had been named in an army report as having allegedly made threats in effort to get special treatment for G. David Schine, former consultant to McCarthy's

34 ARE KILLED IN AIR CRASH

Singapore, March 13. (AP) —A London-bound Qantas-B O A C Airlines Constellation crashed and burned on landing at Singapore today killing 34 of the persons aboard. Seven persons, including six of the plane's crew, survived the flaming wreck.

The big four-engine plane, operated by a British Commonwealth company, was coming in from Jakarta, Indonesia, where it had stopped over on its regularly scheduled flight from Sydney, Australia, to London.

It crashed at the end of the runway after skimming over rooftops on a normal approach for the landing. Flames enveloped the plane and roared out of control for more than an hour.

When the blaze was quelled, the firemen broke into the plane with axes to pull out the charred remains of the victims.

Some of the injured crewmen in the for ard part of the plane managed to crawl to stafety. One of these was the stewardess, Josephine Butler, who was said to be in serious condition. An aged civil-

New York, March 13. (AP)—CBS Commentator Edward R. Murrow says Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was a member of the board of trustees of the Institute of International Education in 1935.

On his regular news commentary last night, Murrow replied to criticism made Thursday night by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who connected Murrow's institute activities 19 years ago with what he termed "a Moscow university summer session."

Murrow said:

"Now here are the facts about that Moscow summer school. . . I was the assistant director of the institute. . . This organization dealt primarily with the exchange of students and professors between this and foreign countries. . .

"It was largely financed at that time by the Carnegie Corporation and the Rockefeller Foundation.

PRAYER FOR RAIN

By THE REV. RALPH A. VANDERWOOD
Pastor, Woodland Community Church

Almighty God, in mercy send rain to this drouth stricken area. We realize our dependence upon You, the Creator of the heavens and the earth. Without the moisture which You alone can send, the crops fail, the cattle find no pasture, the beauty of the land fades, and Your children become faint from the heat, the dust, and the desolation.

Forgive us, our God, for failing to be thankful for all Your blessings—past, present and prospective. We promise to praise You for the showers that will refresh the land and cause it to bring forth beauty and bountiful harvest. We'll remember that the golden grain comes only from the ground that You have blessed.

In our adversity we have come to You, Heavenly Father. Never have we failed to find help thru prayer. As we petition You now, we believe that You will respond in love to meet our need. Give us grace enough that our lives as well as our lips shall thank You for rain and all our blessings.

Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, was main speaker at the annual meeting of the Kansas Livestock Association convening in Wichita this week. He heads one of the most influential farm groups in the nation.

MRS. FLOYD MULLENDORE

Mrs. Floyd Mullendore of 1465 Perry was selected as "woman of the year" by a local radio station for her years of volunteer service to the crippled children and mental patients at Wesley Hospital. Mrs. Herbert Hodel of Peabody nominated Mrs. Mullendore for the honor.

MRS. GERALDINE MICKELSON

Mrs. Geraldine Mickelson, international president of the 99s, woman pilot's organization, paid tribute to the local chapter Sunday during the third birthday party of the Wichita 99s. Mrs. Mickelson is from Sacramento, Calif.

WILLIAM J. KEATING

William J. Keating, director of the New York Crime Commission, was featured speaker Thursday night at the Wichita Crime Commission's annual membership dinner. At a press conference here prior to the speech, Keating cited the role of the free press in crime commission activities.

JURY AWARDS YOUTH $1,000

A 19-year-old Dewey, Okla., youth, Oliver Darrell Smith, was awarded $1,000 in damages by a federal court jury in Wichita in a verdict returned late Friday against Baxter Springs, Kas, truck driver, Arthur R. Mallory and the Brewster Trucking Company.

The civil jury trial resulted from a highway accident occurring November 7, 1951 on U.S.-Highway 166 west of Baxter Springs.

Young Smith was injured when an automobile in which he was riding as a passenger collided with the rear end of a semi-trailer truck being driven by Mallory.

The complaint charged negligence on the part of the truck driver for allegedly failing to signal when he slowed the truck to turn from the highway. A total of $21,000 in damages was asked in the original suit filed by Payne Ratner, Jr., Wichita attorney. The local law firm of Smith, Gilchrist, Warner and Buck represented the deefndants.

was concerned, I don't personally care what treatment they gave Schine, and that as far as I was concerned, he was in the army.

"I did say that I thought it wasn't fair to them to take it out on Schine, because we were investigating the army, or to keep using it to try to stop our investigations. I told him the only contact we were authorized to have with him about Schine was in investigations committee business.

"My telling him this does no real good, as he constantly lumps together all his talk about Schine with suggestions that we stop holding hearings on the army.

I am convinced that they will keep right on trying to blackmail us as long as Schine is in the army.

"Even tho they said he deserved a commission, they didn't give it to him because of the left-wing press and they keep trying to dangle proposed small favors to him in front of us.

"Adams, by his attitude, makes it clear that the army will do nothing to see that Schine gets into any kind of assignment to which he is qualified, unless we stop investigating the army.

"When he brought up the 'what's there in it for us' business this morning, I told him that I saw no chance of stopping the hearings. I suggested that he talk with you.

"This hostage business is getting to be a real thorn in my side and I wish that they would either give Schine what he deserves or leave him in the rear ranks forever without bothering me about it."

December 9—Cohn to McCarthy: "John Adams said today that following up the idea about investigating the air force he had gotten specific information for us about an air force base where there were a large number of homosexuals. He said that he would trade us that information if we could tell him what the next army project was that we would investigate."

December 17—McCarthy to Cohn and Carr: The senator said he had learned from Adams that "Gen. Lawton, who as you recall, cooperated fully with the committee in the exposure of subversives at Fort Monmouth, is about to be relieved of his command. . ."

December 21—Carr to McCarthy: "I think you should know that the staff of the subcommittee has not called upon Dave Schine's time or services except when necessary to the committee work. . .

"I agree that contact with him should be kept at a minimum. So far as I have been able to ascertain there has been no instance where he has missed training because of committee work. . .

"I think you should also know that during the past months since we have been closely associated with John Adams, I have on numerous occasions talked to him on the subject of Dave Schine.

"In all instances that I can remember the topic either came into the conversation as a natural result of some other subject we were discussing or Adams in a facetious vien made some statement concerning the 'hostage.'

"On a number of these occasions, I have stated that it was my opinion that Schine should get an assignment for which he was qualified and in which he could actually be useful to the army in an investigatory position.

"I have never, however, suggested that his assignment should be other than on which he is entitled to by all army standards of fair play."

January 14—Cohn to McCarthy: "John Adams has been in the office again. He said that if we keep on with the hearings on the army, and particularly if we call in those on the loyalty board, who cleared Communists, he will fight us in every way he can.

"As you know, Adams' present assistant, Haskins, was one of those on the board. His last assistant was eased out after we advised Adams of his record.

"Adams said this was the last chance for me to arrange that law partnership in New York which he wanted. One would think he was kidding, but his persistence on this subject makes it clear he is serious. He said he had turned down a job in industry at $17,500 and needed a guarantee of $25,000 from a law firm."

January 15—Carr to McCarthy: "Maybe one of these days you should speak to Adams in a friendly way. I've tried. He is baiting Roy Cohn pretty much lately on the 'hostage' situation. They get pretty heated before Roy buys the lunch, but it's going to lead to trouble."

March 11—In this memo, Carr told of a meeting he attended with McCarthy, Cohn and assistant defense Secretary Fred Seaton at which the senator told of hearing a report that the Pentagon planned to distribute copies of the Schine report to subcommittee Democrats.

"Sen. McCarthy advised Mr. Seaton that the writer (Carr) was searching the files for memoranda dictated cancerning Schine.

"The senator distinctly stated that he was not suggesting to Mr. Seaton what he could, or should, do with the report as far as the distribution was concerned, but that he was offering to Mr. Seaton some of the memoranda prepared by the subcommittee concerning Schine.

"The senator stated that he thought it would only be proper for the department of defense to consider these memoranda along with any releases of the Adams report. . ."

HOME TOWN NEWS

VITAMIN K BACK

Talk being heard around Wichita Friday was reminiscent of the 1930's. Not since the dust bowl days has the old term of "Vitamin K" been heard to any extent, but the Friday duster moving in from the west brought with it some long buried terms of the past. For the benefit of those not familiar with the peculiarities of the dust bowl era, "Vitamin K" was the name applied to dust taken internally by breathing. Visitors from the "outside world" were told that vitamin K was a necessity as far as the metabolic system of the dust bowl dweller was concerned.

REMEMBERED RHYME

And the blowing dust touched the memory of Mrs. Ernest Ziesch of 1832 Greenacres. A poem she had read more than 20 years ago suddenly came to her mind. It goes like this: "Now I lay me down to snore . . . With a ton of dust in every pore . . . And if at morn I fail to wake . . . My grave you will not have to make."

GREEN ROOMS

Tax agent-turned draftsman, Bill Agnew, who has designed the interior of the new internal revenue building tells us of the color which has been chosen for the inside decoration scheme. Evidently it's a color people never get tired looking at no matter how much they see it. The walls and ceilings will be done in shades ranging from cabbage to lettuce green. It matches the color of the commodity they take in. Too bad the tax folks won't be able to move in next Wednesday. It would be a fine place to celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

PAINT PROBLEM

The color scheme for the outside of the new revenue building has not been so easily arrived at. The planners are divided into three schools of thought. Two factions are pulling for gray and pink, while Lynn Brodrick has gained a following in his suggestion that the concrete structure be painted white with a big red stripe around the top. It won't be painted for a while.

GREEN THUMB QUESTION

Back to green again: From clear up in Columbus, Ohio, M. L. Mullay has written to ask why a successful gardener is attributed with having a "green thumb." Evidently he has already done some extensive research on the subject since he says that horticulturists can only offer widely varying explanations which amount to no more than opinions. Many, he said, have opined that the term dates back hundreds of years. To that he says, "The earliest recorded mention of a green thumb that I have found dates back only to 1925." Now Mullay has probably succeeded in getting a lot of us curious. Can anyone offer a clue or idea as to the origin of the term?

WHO WROTE IT?

One hint as to the age and origin of the green thumb term might be gained by finding out who wrote this verse and when: "Denied are the secrets of soil, seed and weather . . . To thousands who struggle to put them together . . . But, certain as morning, success seems to come . . . To those chosen people who have a green thumb."

SERVICE NOTES

We have been told during the past few months that national defense strategy is undergoing a change. This week we noted that the local draft boards have received notice that the army wants more dentists while at the same time the navy recruiting station has been instructed to let it be known that the navy wants lawyers. One quipster interpreted the army's search for dentists as an indication that there is a shortage of drill sergeants who know the words to that old marching song, "The Yanks Are Coming." But no explanation concerning the navy's search for attorneys has yet been offered. As most salt water veterans will tell you, there is hardly a skipper in the navy who does not contend that there are already too many "sea lawyers" on his ship.

Income Tax Deadline Is Drawing Near

At midnight Monday, the Ides of March, another income tax filing period will draw to a close.

Lynn R. Brodrick, director of internal revenue for the Kansas district has ordered that door of his ta xoffice in Wichita will remain open up to the last minute of the deadline day to accommodate late filers.

Monday the tax assistance and cashier's office in the basement of the postoffice building will open at 8 a.m. and close at midnight with agents on duty thruout the 16 hours to help last minute tax filers.

Most of the late filers were taking care of their income tax returns Saturday, a holiday for many, who needed time and assistance in the sometimes complicated business of computing income and deductions.

Also being accommodated by Brodrick's office are taxpayers all over the state who have yet to file their returns by mail. Their returns may be mailed at any post office as late as midnight Monday without penalty for tardiness.

The Wichita internal revenue office is charged with collecting taxes from more than 822,000 individual income taxpayers in Kansas.

SNOW SETTLES 5-STATE DUST

in a regional tournament of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

A heavy pall of dust covered the upper two-thirds of Texas last night and was expected to drift southeast over the state by morning.

Pushed ahead of the dust was a dense blanket of fog that cut visibility to less than a mile at Beaumont, Houston, Galveston and Brownsville.

Texas had its share of high winds, too, with gusts of up to 60 and 70 miles an hour reported at Dalhart.

Elsewhere, there were gusts up to 52 miles an hour in Oklahoma, 53 at Cheyenne, Wyo., and 41 at Pueblo, Colo.

A gust of 100 mph was reported at Fairfax Airport in Kansas City, Kas.

In Colorado and Wyoming the snow was diminishing after leaving up to six inches at Casper and Lander, Wyo., and four inches at Akron, Colo.

An estimated 300 motorists were stranded at various points in the two states, and 40 Colorado schools were closed.

In Colorado the moving snowstorm also was disrupting transportation. One hundred fifty passengers from six buses transferred to trains at Sidney last night. At Lincoln, the site of a state basketball tournament and a Democratic Party meeting, hotels and motels had to turn away stranded travelers.

MURROW GIVES 'FACTS' ON AIR

Lamont . . . and others equally distinguished.

"The Russian authorities abruptly and without satisfactory explanation, cancelled the proposed summer school before it began, and most of the prospective members spent the summer traveling in the Soviet Union.

"No effort was made to revive the venture, and the advisory council was therefore dissolved."

Murrow had devoted his CBS television show to McCarthy last Tuesday night. The commentator charged that the senator repeatedly has stepped over the line between investigation and persecution in the course of his Red-hunting activities.

McCarthy blasted back Thursday on the Fulton Lewis, Jr., radio program (Mutual Broadcasting System), classing Murrow with the "extreme left-wing bleeding hearts element of radio and television"—and at the same time accusing Adlai Stevenson of "untrue" statements about Communists in government.

Concerning the "left-wing" accusation by McCarthy, Murrow countered last night, "if the senator means I am somewhat to the left of his position and of Louis XIV, he is correct."

ian in the tail of the plane was the first to be removed by the rescuers. His condition was reported as critical.

Horrified eyewitnesses, including friends and relatives of some of those aboard, said they saw only wheels come down as the Constallation approached. One witness said he heard two explosions as the plane hit the ground.

An ambulance rushing some of the survivors to a nearby hospital was involved in a road accident and the patients had to be transferred to a police radio car for the rest of the trip.

TOPCOAT STOLEN

H. M. Tillman, 2903 West Douglas, complained to the sheriff's office Friday that his topcoat valued at $60 was stolen from the check room of a night club where he was a guest.

MUSIC CLUB WINNER NAMED

Lydal Bales, violinist, was named winner of the Saturday Afternoon Musical Club scholarship following auditions Friday afternoon at Central Christian Church.

A freshman at the University of Wichita and a student of James Caesar, Bales will receive a four-year scholarship at the municipal university.

Alice Graber, violinist, also of W. U., was second place winner and Carl L. Anderson, organist, of Friends University, was third.

Dr. Jack Juergens, director of the fine arts department, Southwestern College, Winfield, served as judge. Mrs. Boyce Radfield is the SAMC scholarship chairman. Mrs. Galen Graham is president of the club.

TRUCK STRIKES WICHITA MAN

Ernest J. Gabriel, 51, of 724½ East Douglas, was injured Friday afternoon when he was struck by a truck in the 700 block East Douglas. he suffered cuts and bruises on his head, face and body.

Driver of the car was identified by police as Wayne Wood, 25, of 726 Woodrow. Wood was arrested and charged with driving without due regard to use, occupancy and condition of the street, failing to yield the right-of-way to a pedestrian in a cross walk and failing to have a current driver's license.

Gabriel was treated at County Hospital.

TRIO IS HELD IN BURGLARY

Three Wichitans were held in city jail Saturday, suspected of burglarizing a Wichita home where a television set was stolen.

The three are John D. Blodgett, 21, 314 East Lewis, Garl E. Sutton, 39, 929½ North Main, and Gordon P. Murray, 32, 314½ East Lewis. Blodgett is currently a parolee from a 10-21 year jail sentence for robbery.

The three were apprehended at Harry and Broadway, by officers John Windsor and L. Barton. The car in which the three were riding had run a stop sign, according to the officers.

Searching the car the officers found the TV set. Serial number on the set matched the serial number on the set stolen from the home of Mrs. Naomi Hoskens of 1035 South Yale.

WICHITA YOUTH PRESUMED DEAD

The army has announced that Raymond O. Ware, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ware, 3 Vassar Court, missing in Korea for more than a year, can now be presumed dead.

Ware was reported missing in action two months after he arrived in Korea in 1950. He was a student at Planeview High School before entering the service.

Also on the presumed dead list released by the army was Pfc. Merle Cole, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Merle L. Cole, Sr., Liberal.

$134,000 SUIT IS FILED HERE

A $134,000 damage suit was filed in Federal District Court here Friday against the Missouri Pacific Railroad by a former employe, Harry Love, of Wichita Falls, Tex.

Suit brought under the Federal Employers Liability Act charged the railroad of being responsible for a back injury allegedly suffered by Love, June 7, 1953 while working with a section crew on the company's tracks near Wichita.

Louie Mattox, Wichita attorney for the plaintiff, requested a jury trial.

LINSCOTT BEFORE HOUSE GROUP

Washington, March 12.—Harold Linscott of Wichita, president of Branch 205 of the National Association of Postal Supervisors, appeared briefly before the House civil service and post office committee Friday in support of the postal salary reclassification bill.

He also endorsed the postal pay raise bill calling for a flat $800 increase for postal employees.

Linscott has been in Washington attending the legislative conference of the Government Employees Council. He planned to leave Washington by train Friday evening to return to Wichita.

WASHINGTON AVIATION NOTES

By BETSY JAGER

By BETSY JAGER

Rep. Carl Hinshaw (R. Calif.) urged Congress this week to consider transport of all first class mail by air.

This recommendation from Hinshaw is not new, for seven years ago when he was vice chairman of the Congressional Aviation Policy board, the board maintained that carriage of long-haul, first class mail by air would substantially benefit the Nation's convenience, commerce, national security, and service to the public as a whole. Furthermore, in 1948, the Finletter report of the President's Air Policy Committee recommended that Congress give serious consideration to the air carriage of all first class mail which could be expedited thereby.

Hinshaw pointed out this week that the Post Office Department's experimental program authorizing certificated scheduled airlines to fly first class mail between certain cities in the United States has now entered its sixth month. He added that this mail experiment is not only bringing improved service to the public, but is proving to be a deficit reducer for the Post Office Department as well.

"For example, the run between New York and Chicago, alone is realizing revenues for the Post Office Department, after payment to the carriers, of more than $2,000 per ton of mail flown.

Specifically, the department is realizing $2,314 a ton, of which $134.66 is paid to the airlines for services rendered," Hinshaw explained. "This means the airlines receive only 5.8 percent of the postal revenues for flying the New York-Chicago mail, and the remaining 94.2 percent, or $2,175.34 on each ton is retained by the Post Office to pay ground expenses."

The experimental first class air mail service is operating between Washington and Chicago, New York-Chicago, as well as the following points: Washington-Jacksonville, Washington-Tampa, Washington-Miami, New York-Jacksonville, New York-Tampa, New York-Miami, Chicago-Jacksonville, Chicago-Tampa, Chicago-Miami.

Hinshaw said he opposed the pending bill in House and Senate to raise airmail postage rate from 6 cents to 7 cents as inconsistent, because based on past postal rate experience, such an increase would result in depressing airmail volume.

He recommended instead that 6 cent airmail be eliminated and that a new class of priority first class mail be established. This class of mail would include all present first class mail, and would be carried at a uniform postage rate. It would be the responsibility of the Post Office Department to dispatch all mail in this new class by the most expeditious transportation medium available.

He considered the most realistic rate for such priority first class mail to be five cents an ounce.

A. L. EPPERSON IN FAR EAST

Pvt. Archie Lee Epperson, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Epperson, 8901 East Douglas, has been assigned to headquarters, eighth fighter bomber wing in Korea.

A Wichita High School East graduate of June, 1951, Epperson was employed at Boeing Airplane Company's Wichita division prior to his entry into service in June, 1953.

He took his basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and Fort Belvoir, Va.

New Londn, Conn., March 13. (AP) — Fire raced thru a slum area apartment building here early today, killing at least four persons. Police said four others, all believed to be children, are missing.

A LENTEN PRAYER

SATURDAY, MARSH 12

THE NEED FOR GOD

"While I go yonder and pray." Matthew 26:36. (R.S.V.) Read 36-46.

Even Jesus was not sufficient of himself for the supreme testing that he had to face. But he knew how he could lay hold upon the added strength that he needed. For he had always lived close to God. Now in this time of extremity, he went not to any physical armory, not even to assemble the strength of his many loyal friends. It was an inward victory that he must have, and so he went apart, that far from all pressures and distractions he might commune with his Father. His prayer was answered in the best way—not by the removal of the cup, but in the provision of power.

Few of us are called upon to undergo such trials or to bear such burdens. But for all our perplexities, when we are bruised by ill-fortune, discovered by our failures, when we feel frustrated or offended, whatever the situation, we too can go yonder and pray. It doesn't matter geographically where "yonder" is. One can commune with God in a crowded subway or while making beds as surely as in a church. It is the intent that assures the contact and communion to meet our need.

LET US PRAY: O thou infinite Giver of strength and comfort, may we be wise and quick to seek thee out in prayer. Whatever place or the time of our need, may we remember that thou art ready to help. And we would always pray in Jesus' name. Amen.

give what the senator termed a partial answer.

Senator Flanders of Vermont, in one of the first Republican attacks on McCarthy on the Senate floor, leaped into the fray by asking if his colleague was not "doing his best to chatter" the party. Eisenhower agreed with Flanders that there was "great danger" of splitting the GOP. McCarthy playfully told Flanders, "you vote less for the Republicans than any other member of the party so quit advising me how to be a good Republican."

The inquiry by McCarthy's Senate Investigations Subcommittee went right along, but departed on some tangents not according to the script. Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, summoned to the witness stand in part of the senator's campaign to show how the army handles alleged Reds, denied she had ever been a Communist. Democrats on the committee drew out that two other women by the same name live in Washington.

Then the army gave some members of the group a report saying McCarthy and the subcommittee's chief counsel, Roy Cohn, interceded for David Schine, a former subcommittee consultant now in the army as a private. The report cited alleged instances where it said McCarthy and Cohn exerted pressure for special treatment of Schine.

The Wisconsin senator fired back with a protest that army officials had attempted to "blackmail" him into dropping a probe of the army. This the army denied.

All this and much more spilled over the dam before the heralded hour when Nixon was to deliver the official answer to Stevenson.

Nixon promised he would "not dodge the issues" in his speech. And with the McCarthy controversy spilling over into so many a nook and cranny, it did not seem there was much place to hide.

STATEHOOD — A near-united Democratic front in the Senate succeeded in tying, 46-43, a proposal for Alaska's statehood on to the Hawaii statehood bill. This foreshadowed another close vote on the Senate's final choice, but not before more hours of oratory.

CHAVEZ-HURLEY — A Senate elections subcommittee decided 2 to 1, the Republicans against the Democrat, that the seat of Senator Chavez (D., NM), should be declared vacant because of alleged irregularities in the 1952 New Mexico election. Chavez' official victory was challenged by the GOP opponent for his seat, Patrick J. Hurley. Democrats were lining up strongly against Chavez' ouster, especially since they now have a one-member Senate margin over the Republicans.

TAXES—With landslide momentum the House rolled to the Senate, 411-3, an excise tax bill trimming many important sales levies down to 10 per cent. The measure would lop off more treasury revenue than Eisenhower would like, but it seemed assured of easy traveling right on to the White House.

next in line for the presidency of the national organization.

Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, was the speaker at the convention banquet Friday night. He stressed the importance developing markets rather than depending on the government.

Kline termed the idea that "if you get it from the federal government, it won't cost anything" a "delusion".

"Actually it costs more," he said.

"There are no substitutes for markets, and no kind of agricultural legislation will stop deflation," he said.

Kline praised the cattlemen for finding new markets, citing the substantial increase in beef consumption during the past year.

He criticized the storing of wheat and other crops by the Commodity Credit Corporation. "The thing that makes a living for wheat men is selling wheat, not storing it." He urged the importance of developing foreign markets.

Kline, who was to have arrived in Wichita at noon Friday, was delayed when his plane was unable to land at the airport. He went on to Oklahoma City and arrived in Wichita in time for the address.

committee. Cohn denied the Army statements.

Cohn is "one of the most valuable and finest young men who have ever worked for me," McCarthy said, adding "Roy is hated more than any man in the country with the possible exception of J. Edgar Hoover." Hoover is head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The army also claimed McCarthy had allegedly exerted pressure on Schine's behalf, but in a lesser degree. McCarthy said he had no comment about this. He reiterated the army's report was "completely untrue," but he said the report would be reviewed by his subcommittee as soon as the full subcommittee could be brought together. He indicated that might be Tuesday.

COLD WEATHER WILL CONTINUE

stirred up in the west portion Saturday altho diminishing winds are in prospect, the forecaster said.

Goodland reported three inches of snow for the only measurable amount staying on the ground and it contained .28 of an inch of moisture, the weather bureau said.

The only other measurable amounts of moisture were .02 of an inch at both Hill City and Garden City.

Temperatures dropped as much as 45 degrees Friday. Freezing temperatures were reported thruout the state state Saturday morning with low marks ranging from 27 at Chanute down to 12 at Goodland. The mercury climbed to 71 at Chanute Friday before the storm reached that area, but afternoon highs in the West were held to the 20's.

Greece is geeting bids on its Mogdova River power project to cost aound $15,500,000.

"so-called reformation . . . rebellion, blooodshed and licentiousness. No true historian can ever cheat himself into the conviction that Protestantism brought peace and happiness."

On the contrary,

"by his incentive talk and venomous pen" he "destroyed peace and harmony throughout the Fatherland." "Where formerly people had lived peacefully together, there rebellion and hatred entered, and despotism ruled with an iron hand. This universal cause of discord, devestation and despicable barbarism was the result of revolt against the Church."

That this attitude toward Protestantism in general and Lutheranism in particular still obtains is indicated by an article on the recent, widely publicized film "Martin Luther." The November, 1953, issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine, replies in the following words to a query regarding the film:

". . . the religious war spearheaded by Martin Luther was a deformation rather than a reformation . . . Luther was one of the most depraved men the world has ever known—vile in thought, word, and conduct."

We wonder if our President has any inkling of the above. We wonder if he has set the proper example in attending a mass in a church which has so consistently opposed our American way of life, inveighed against our Protestant heritage, and condemned those Christian principles so essential to our testimony. Even Roman Catholic followers will see that on the one hand bigotry and abuse are wholly unchristian and that on the other hand the display of external grandeur designed to impress our Chief Executive is nothing but superficiality, vanity, and self-glorification.

But in a more serious way, the incident is another step in the advance to make America Catholic. It would be in order for Protestant leaders of this country to invite our President's attention to the fact that the Catholic hierarchy has not finished its work of conquering the high positions in our government. The work will be completed only when the United States has become a Roman Catholic Church-State. To this end the Church is dedicated.

Federal Government: The Stronghold of Roman Catholics?

Sen. Joseph McCarthy

Is it possible that the McCarthy issue in the United States is a smoke screen for activities favoring Roman Catholicism in this country?

Apparently some individuals and groups are beginning to think so. Wilbur LaRoe in The Presbyterian Tribune for Jan., 1954, observes that "a situation may be developing where the average man on the street will think that if a person is a Roman Catholic there need be no question as to his loyalty, but if he is a Protestant, perhaps he should be investigated." Why?

Joseph C. Harsch, special correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor, gives a provocative answer in an article entitled "State of the Nation: Religious Controversy" (November 10, 1953). Quoted editorially in The New Age for January, 1954, the article reported that the General Council of the Presbyterian Church issued a letter to its constituents on November 3, 1953, "declaring that 'truth is being subtly and silently dethroned by prominent public figures from the position that it has occupied hitherto in out American tradition,' and warning that 'the moral consequences will be terrifying.' "

Mr. Harsch reminds his readers that "for about half a century it has been impolite to air in public print the old issues in the Christian world between Protestant and Roman Catholic." But the "tacit truce" is breaking down, and the ground swell of aroused opinion is beginning to be observed as greater prominence is given to controversial issues in American publications.

The most insidious encroachments seem to have followed in the wake of Senator McCarthy's Communist investigations, though it is probably too early to pass judgment on any cause and effect relationship. But the Senator's activities "have had the incidental effect, whether accidental or intentional," continues Mr. Harsch, "of increasing the proportion of Roman Catholics to Protestants employed in the public service." To protect themselves from attack, government officials have resorted to employing Catholics—inasmuch as the Senator is a good Catholic,—with the result that the proportion of Roman Catholics included in dismissals is remarkably lower than that of Protestants.

To substantiate his allegations, Mr. Harsch comments that he has > "failed to find a single Roman Catholic among officials dismissed from the State Department. A Protestant compilation of dismissals from the Foreign Operations Administration indicates that 80 per cent of all dismissals are Protestant and that many of the 20 per cent of dismissed Roman Catholics were subsequently 're-absorbed' into the service. If the present trend were to continue, Roman Catholics, who are a minority of the American population, would become the majority of federal employees."

It is the fear of consequences implicit in such a movement that is rousing some Protestants from their twilight sleep of indifference. They are concerned lest "Roman Catholic fervor against Communism may turn out in the end to be primarily a vehicle for an assault on Protestantism.

"The evidence to substantiate such a concern among Protestants is not conclusive," Mr. Harsch says by way of summing up. But "The Presbyterian statement is in itself conclusive evidence of the existence of the concern."

While admitting the scarcity of evidence, the New Age trenchantly comments that

> "the collective acts and pronouncements of the church hierarchy for generations have tended to confirm the opinion that these have not been nearly so much for the freedom of man as for the financial and political aggrandizement of the Roman Catholic Church-State."

If what Mr. Harsch has reported is found to be fully authenticated, it is high time that not only Protestants but all Americans return to their posts of eternal vigilance and man the guns of Constitutional guarantees in defense of their liberties before the enemy is upon them. Time is running out.

The Pope Condemns "Mass Democracy"

Abraham Lincoln

In a recent issue of the Jesuit magazine America (December 19, 1953), emphasis is again focused on the long-standing Roman Catholic attitude opposed to democracy. This time the criticism is shifted to their own co-religionist Senator Joseph McCarthy, who, in his remarks on the Red China blockade, was speaking too much as an American and not enough as a Catholic when he urged

> ". . . every American who feels as I do about this blood trade with a mortal enemy to write or wire the President of the United States and let him know how they feel so he can be properly guided in this matter."

The magazine, with vehement conviction, goes on to comment:

> "Because the Senator regarded Mr. Eisenhower as 'an honorable man,' he thought the President would 'follow the will of the American people if that will is known to him.' The principle of government the Senator here invoked is, in our opinion, inherently wrong. It is that of 'mass democracy,' of appealing to the 'people' to pressure their representatives into following their 'will' (the way they 'feel') on highly complex issues. Pope Pius XII explicitly condemned 'mass democracy' in his 1944 Christmas Message . . . The people, of course, have a right 'to petition the government.' But they cannot expect officials to let telegrams alone shape our foreign policy."

We do not know if Senator McCarthy is familiar with the doctrines of his Church regarding democracy. We do not know if he realizes the staunch opposition of the

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Who? When?

When are the responsible Senate leaders of the party in power going to speak up in the great political tradition that comes down to them through their own party?

In the Mirror of Public Opinion on this page are extracts from a moving address on the floor of the Senate by James W. Fulbright of Arkansas. It is an address that seeks to lift our sights to higher things and to the enduring elements in our constitutional system.

But Senator Fulbright is a Democrat. He does not speak for the Eisenhower Administration. He does not represent the side of the Senate which controls the organization of committees.

Last Wednesday Wayne Morse of Oregon rose on the Senate floor to make a truly outstanding speech. He defended eloquently "the precious right of the Senate to investigate." He described the congressional investigative power "as one of the great safeguards of the American people for the preservation of their liberties." Then he called for the enactment of a code of fair procedure to guarantee that the right to investigate is not abused and discredited, as in the McCarthy-Zwicker-Stevens battle. To that end Senator Morse introduced a concurrent resolution embodying safeguards for witnesses at congressional hearings.

But Wayne Morse is not even a Democrat. He left the Republican party in the 1952 campaign and lists himself as an Independent. Far from speaking for the Republican side, he enjoys the distinction of speaking only for himself. When the G.O.P. Policy Committee on Friday instructed Senator Ferguson to study investigating committee procedures, with a view to possible establishment of some ground rules, it took care to disassociate itself from Senator Morse's much more comprehensive approach.

What is needed in the Senate are speeches like those by Morse of Oregon and Fulbright of Arkansas but from the Republicans. What is needed is for just one Republican Senator to join the battle openly against Joseph R. McCarthy, his destructive war on the Eisenhower Administration, and his wanton disregard of historic constitutional rights.

The need is for a Republican Senator like the great Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana who in 1910, in the Taft Administration, assumed leadership of the fight against the corrupt Republican Senator from Illinois, William Lorimer, who was finally unseated in disgrace.

The need is for a Republican Senator like the indefatigible first Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin who, in the Harding Administration, fought through the resolution which authorized the official probe of the Teapot Dome and other naval oil leases.

The need is for a Republican like George W. Norris of Nebraska, who was the "conscience of the Republican party" in the Coolidge and Hoover Administrations. It is for a Republican like William E. Borah of Idaho, who time and again spoke for right and decency from his side of the Senate.

Whatever President Eisenhower may be persuaded to do or not to do about the Wild Man from Wisconsin, the Senate has the primary responsibility, and within the Senate the initiative lies with the Republicans. McCarthy is one of them. After all, it is their party that he is tearing to pieces.

Senator McCarthy is a chairman of a committee on which the Republicans are the majority. They can take him in hand. They can stop the mad performance before it destroys the Eisenhower program and even the Republican party. They can rise now as Beveridge, La Follette, Norris, Borah and many other Republicans stood up to fight for honor in their day.

What is needed is a new Republican Declaration of Conscience in the "greatest deliberative body in the world," followed by firm, sure, united effective action against its No. 1 Irresponsible.

Who will take the lead?

Who will say: This has gone too far, it will go no farther?

Who will be the man of the hour, the day, the year?

Who will act to restore the great name of the United States Senate?

Murrow Outpulls McCarthy

By Mary Hornaday
Staff Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

New York

The office of Edward R. Murrow, newscaster, in the Columbia Broadcasting System's building at 52d Street and Madison Avenue, has become the nation's new scoreboard for pro- and anti-McCarthy sentiment among the American public.

20-1 Tally

Telephone calls and telegrams to Mr. Murrow following his latest criticism (in his TV "See It Now" show) of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R) of Wisconsin, for "two staples of his diet, investigation protected by immunity and half truths," were running 20 to 1 in the telecaster's favor. Letters had not yet begun to come in.

CBS headquarters was abuzz with communications from coast to coast. Officials said they were especially impressed with the caliber of the persons calling. Many made it clear that they had never called or written a telecaster before, but they felt compelled to do so after the Murrow show.

Several senators were said to be among those who telephoned their congratulations.

Though Mr. Murrow made no special plea for an audience response, CBS switchboards were jammed with calls up until after midnight after the 10:30 p.m. show. A 3 a.m. count showed 2,214 calls of congratulation and 151 protests. At the same time, 1,320 wires had been received congratulating him, and 24 objecting to the telecast.

Preponderance of favorable calls appeared to be even larger the morning after, when a number of persons called saying they were voicing the congratulations of 150 or 200 people in their offices.

The Murrow telecast came at a time when Senator McCarthy was venting his spleen on both the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company for refusing him free radio and TV time to answer an attack by Adlai E. Stevenson.

Mr. Murrow, a member of the CBS board of directors as well as a newscaster, offered free time on his show to Senator McCarthy for a reply.

Using pictures of the senator in action to support his attack on McCarthy methods, Mr. Murrow added his own preachments to the American public for letting an atmosphere of fear develop that could support the McCarthy technique.

Probes Useful

"No one familiar with the history of this country," he declared, "can deny that congressional committees are useful. It is necessary to investigate legislating, but the line between investigating and persecuting is a very fine one, and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly.

"His primary achievement has been in confusing the public mind as between internal and external threats of communism. We must not confuse dissent with disloyalty. We must remember always that accusation is never proof and that conviction depends upon evidence, and due process of law.

We will not be driven by fear into an age of unreason if we dig deep in our history and our doctrine and remember that we are not descended from fearful men, not from men who feared to write, to speak, to associate, and to defend courses that were for the moment unpopular.

"This is no time for men who oppose Senator McCarthy's methods to keep silent nor for those who approve. We can deny our heritage and our history, but we cannot escape responsibility for the results. There is no way for a citizen of a republic to abdicate his responsibilities.

"As a nation we have come into our full inheritance at a tender age. We proclaim ourselves, as indeed we are, defenders of freedom wherever it continues to exist in the world, but we cannot defend freedom abroad in deserting it at home.

'Alarm and Dismay'

"The actions of the junior senator from Wisconsin have caused alarm and dismay amongst our allies abroad, and given considerable comfort to our enemies—and whose fault is that? Not really his, he didn't create this situation of fear. He merely exploited it, and rather successfully."

Among films Mr. Murrow showed to back his statements were excerpts of a recent McCarthy speech attacking Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker; questioning of Reed Harris, whose removal from the State Department Senator McCarthy claimed as a victory; and making a statement in which he attempted to identify Adlai E. Stevenson with Institute of Pacific Relations papers found in the Lee, Mass., "Red Barn."

He quoted the Chicago Tribune, Washington Times-Herald and Milwaukee Journal among non-left-wing newspapers that have recently cautioned Senator McCarthy, and he challenged the senator's recent withdrawal of the slander suit against former Senator William B. Benton, saying several volunteers had come to the senator's aid by offering to testify that they believed Senator Benton as a basis for the suit.

★ Murrow on McCarthy

Edward R. Murrow's television program "See It Now" Tuesday evening presented for the first time a conscientious and academic dissection of the methods, techniques and modus operandi of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Widely-known as an objective, truth-seeking, fact-finding reporter and being highly respected throughout the nation, Murrow has performed a great service to the American people by showing how McCarthy uses half-truths, distortions and semantic gobbledygook, coupled with maudlin sentimentality in his un-American investigations.

Murrow pointed out, via film clips, how McCarthy once said in a speech that if the fight against Communism pits one party against another, it would mean the destruction of the American system of government. Paradoxically, McCarthy, in another speech, recently pinned the "treason" label on the Democratic Party. The Wisconsin senator now contends through faulty logic that all Democrats are "traitors."

At one of McCarthy's investigations a Mr. Reed Harris was being questioned. McCarthy asked the man if the American Civil Liberties Union had ever provided a lawyer for him. Harris answered in the affirmative. McCarthy then informed Harris that the ACLU had been labeled subversive by the Justice Department and the FBI. The man said he received counsel from the ACLU some 21 years ago.

What Harris did not know and what McCarthy failed to tell him was that the ACLU has never been labeled subversive by any governmental organization. It has letters of commendation in its files from former President Truman and President Eisenhower. It is the Civil Liberties Congress that is a well-known Red front organization. Thus McCarthy once again twisted facts for his own purpose.

In another speech, McCarthy categorized Adlai Stevenson—then running for the presidency—in the same class as convicted perjurer Alger Hiss. He showed a copy of a document in which Hiss allegedly recommended Stevenson for an important executive post. McCarthy also said that Stevenson was affiliated at one time with the Institute of Pacific Relations, a so-called Red front group. Once again McCarthy failed to tell his audience that such men as Sen. Homer Ferguson and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles also belonged to the IPR at one time.

Thus Murrow tore into McCarthy's tactics with unerring detail. He showed up McCarthy to be a man who will live for a purpose, will distort for a means and twist for an end.

Possibly the climax of the program arrived when Murrow referred to McCarthy's statement that the nation's left-wing papers are against him. Here Murrow listed these "left-wing" papers. The New York Times, The New York Herald-Tribune, The Chicago Tribune (a McCormick paper, no less), The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Washington Post, etc.

It is our conjecture that Murrow turned his program in the direction of McCarthy because he was fed up with the junior senator from Wisconsin's rampaging riot against truth and justice. A reporter is supposed to be objective, but he is also supposed to search for the truth. Murrow as accomplished this purpose.

Murrow opened his program by stating he would give McCarthy an opportunity to reply. It is our hope that both gentlemen sit around a table and really go at it—Murrow hurling the questions, McCarthy attempting to answer. We place our money on Murrow.

So here's a salute to a great journalist for a job well-done. Yes, as Thomas Paine once said, "These are times that try men's souls.'—J. E. H.

Bravo, Murrow

During World War II, there was always a thrill when Edward R. Murrow opened his CBS broadcasts from bomb-scarred England with the terse line: "This . . . is London." He told the story of Hitler-menaced British democracy as nobody else could.

By the same token, Murrow deserves all the plaudits he is getting for his "See It Now" TV show—which said, in effect, "This . . . is Joe McCarthy."

It was television at its best, performing in the service of the American public.

McCarthy and the Networks

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's campaign to get free radio time to reply to a speech by Adlai Stevenson is as dubious as many of his other activities. No other figure in public life would have been arrogant enough to make such a demand in the first place, and it is ironical that a man who was reproved on the Senate floor by a member of his own party for his investigatory tactics should use the words "dishonest" and "unmoral" in attacking the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

President Eisenhower's support of Senator Flanders' Senate speech, and his announced opinion that the networks have discharged their obligation to be impartial by giving the Vice-President time to answer Mr. Stevenson, would normally be expected to close the case. But Mr. McCarthy's refusal to speak to N. B. C. and C. B. S. reporters, as well as his dark hints that legal retribution is in store for the broadcasters, indicates that a McCarthy vendetta against the networks has been added to his wars against the State Department and the Army.

Doubtless the C. B. S. "See It Now" program, in which Edward R. Murrow paraded the Senator's record on television, will provoke Mr. McCarthy even further. The half-hour show, which the Senator already has been invited to answer, was a sober and realistic appraisal of McCarthyism and the climate in which it flourishes. Like the free press, the free broadcasters met a controversial subject with a frank and responsible approach. Apparently the audience response was overwhelmingly in favor of Mr. Murrow and against Mr. McCarthy, but even if the returns were reversed, the network still would have fulfilled its functions as an organ of expression and public service.

Mr. McCarthy's ability to insult and calumniate those who oppose or criticize him is well known. By refusing to be bullied, the broadcasters will assure their own future and help to guarantee America's.

The Mirror of Public Opinion

... news commentator asks correspondents to sum up effect on Allies of Senator McCarthy's skirmish with United States Army; reactions range from plain disgust to fear of fascism; press abroad sees damage to America's reputation.

Edward R. Murrow in a News Commentary on the Columbia Broadcasting System

I cabled four of our correspondents in Europe, asking them to summarize reaction in the countries where they are stationed to Senator McCarthy's recent actions. Their cables are here in front of me. Permit me to quote from some of these cables. The first one comes from David Schoenbrun in Paris.

"'Senator McCarthy and Marilyn Monroe Attack United States Army on Two Fronts,' is the headline feature piece from Washington in Paris influential Le Monde tonight. Their correspondent cabled: 'The spectacle presented by McCarthy committee is sheer buffoonery.' And the correspondent concludes: 'Despite protests, Senator McCarthy will continue to exercise his talents, for, in fact, a large part of the American Administration, including Secretary Stevens and the unfortunate Gen. Zwicker, themselves approve the general line and objectives of McCarthy, reserving their criticism only for his methods'."

Edward R. Murrow

Schoenbrun says: "This is the general tenor of French observation about McCarthy, and most French believe this is a serious error on the part of Americans. They don't think a line can be drawn between objectives and methods, particularly when methods, as in the McCarthy case, are so spectacular and destructive that they obviously achieve objectives far removed from the avowed one.

On Burning Down the Barn

"It's a case of burning down the barn to catch a rat, one French editor told me, pointing out that it's ridiculous to say you approve rat-catching, although you deplore the fact that the barn burned down. You can't separate the two, any more than you can say that you approved Hitler's aims while deploring his uncouth methods. Hitler's aims may have been to eradicate Communism in Germany and destroy the Soviet Union, but what his methods did in fact accomplish was to eradicate democracy in Germany and destroy France and not Russia."

And Schoenbrun concludes: "French Government officials and legislators refuse on-the-record comments, feeling they have no right to express opinions on American domestic politics. But all, without exception, express privately consternation at the loss of American prestige among masses of people here, leading to serious doubts about the authority and constancy of American policy.

Vienna's Reaction to McCarthy

"One French statesman told me: 'I hope you won't make too much of French criticism of McCarthy, because you will be sure to make him a hero back home if we attack him'."

The second cable comes from Howard K. Smith in London and he says: "The British happen to be acutely alarmed at Senator McCarthy presently, as their concern for the demoralization of the United States Army, whereon all free Europe depends, coincides with the close-up experience of one of the Senator's investigations." And Smith says that in a TV program scheduled months ago, a former MP, Aden Crawley, night before last, narrated shots of McCarthy questioning Reed Harris, and the press reacted to what they term 'the smeared-run methods' with disgust, with a disgust that one feels examining creatures on the moist underside of a garden rock for the first time.

"The News Chronicle correspondent in London says: 'It's one thing to read about a witch-hunt and quite another to see it at close quarters. It's not very pretty but it's very instructive.'

Smith's cable continues: "The Senator's assault on the Army alarms a wide range of press. The Conservative Evening News today says: 'Were this merely a domestic scandal in a friendly country, no comment would be called for. But, clearly, it's a matter of principle which concerns all who want to both maintain freedom and order in the democratic society and to fight Communism.'

British Alarm Over Army Morale

"And the Conservative Daily Telegraph says: 'Even the most understanding friends of America abroad find it hard to preserve a sense of balance about activities epitomized in the name of Senator McCarthy. His attacks on America's allies, notably the 'blood trade' business, the smearing of Britain, have produced something worse than irritation. World Communism couldn't ask for richer ore than pours into its propaganda machine every time Senator McCarthy makes an utterance'."

There's another cable, from Alex Kendrick in Vienna, in which he says: "It must be trite by now to recall that this part of Europe was responsible for Hitler and saw Naziism come to power in the guise of an anti-Communist crusade. Yet, just for that reason people here who have been pushed around for 20 years, first by their own native fascists and then by Hitler and then by the Russians, have come to dislike those who do the pushing, especially when it's to the detriment of democratic processes and government."

Kendrick says: "That sums up the attitude hereabout toward McCarthy. He is not regarded as an international threat, like Hitler proved, but as one of the primary reasons for the serious loss of American prestige in an area where such prestige is important because we are face to face with the Communists and deal with them every day." Kendrick says: "It gets discouraging to have Austrians offer you condolences about the loss of your democratic traditions."

And Kendrick concludes his cable by saying: "Army officers are supposed to be nonpolitical, but the general feeling among headquarters officers here is to blame Eisenhower for not standing up to what McCarthy is trying to do to the Army, which, after all, as one senior officer said: 'It isn't only our Army, but it's supposed to be his army too.'"

Senator Gets Blast on TV

Ed Murrow Program Features Films From McCarthy's Past

New York, N. Y.—Edward R. Murrow, Columbia Broadcasting System commentator, said Tuesday night that Senator McCarthy had repeatedly stepped over the line between "investigating and persecuting."

Murrow ended a half hour film and record roundup of the Wisconsin Republican's career on his "See It Now" program with an attack on the senator's methods and a call to his opponents—and supporters—to speak up.

"This is no time," Murrow said, "for men who oppose Senator McCarthy's methods to keep silent—or for those who approve."

Murrow's telecast came as McCarthy was threatening to take legal action to force CBS and the National Broadcasting Co. to give him, personally, free time to answer a speech made last Saturday by Democratic leader Adlai Stevenson. The CBS and NBC networks had turned McCarthy down after giving free time to the Republican national committee.

Offers Him Time

Murrow said at the start of the program that his comments were all from a script and on record, and that if McCarthy wished to answer them, "an opportunity will be afforded him on this program."

Murrow said the usefulness of congressional committees such as that McCarthy heads could not be denied.

"It is necessary to investigate before legislating," he said. "But the line between investigating and persecuting is a very fine one and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly.

"His primary achievement," Murrow added, "has been in confusing the public mind as between the internal and the external threats of communism."

A spokesman for CBS said after the telecast that Murrow was giving his own personal views. CBS reported that the network's switchboard was jammed by an "unprecedented" number of telephone calls after the program.

Some 2,500 calls were received, the spokesman said, of which about 96% were congratulatory. He added that some 1,046 telegrams were received, of which all but 13 expressed approval of the program.

Margaret Truman Is One

A CBS official said those telephoning congratulations included Margaret Truman, daughter of former President Harry S. Truman, and Senator Mike Monroney (Dem., Okla.).

TV stations across the country which carried the CBS network program were flooded with calls, most of them praising the broadcast.

[Upward of 400 telephone calls, every one of them complimentary, were received Tuesday night and Wednesday by WCAN-TV after presentation of the Murrow program, according to Lou Poller, president and general manager of the station. So popular was the program that Poller asked CBS offices in New York for permission to rebroadcast it as a public service. Poller said his station also was willing to give McCarthy time for a reply if he wanted it.]

Murrow opened his program with an acknowledgment that it would be "controversial."

The program included film clips of McCarthy speeches and a sequence from a hearing by his permanent investigations subcommittee.

Murrow showed a film of McCarthy, earlier in his career, in which he spoke out in praise of the two party system. Then he showed the senator during his recent description of the Democratic party as the "party of treason."

Film clips at least twice showed McCarthy in unattractive poses, laughing or chuckling with an almost fiendish expression.

The commentator also showed a film of President Eisenhower during a Wisconsin campaign speech. In the speech, the president pledged to get rid of all "subversives" and emphasized that while congressional investigations were needed, the prime responsibility lay in the executive. This was a slap at McCarthy's efforts to take over this "executive" responsibility.

Hearing Is Shown

Then Murrow took up the senator's claim that he never browbeat a witness. A film of a McCarthy hearing was shown. McCarthy had Reed Harris, formerly of the Voice of America, on the stand. McCarthy, during questioning of Harris, referred to the witness' suspension by Columbia university in the early thirties. He asked if Harris had been furnished a lawyer by the American Civil Liberties Union. Harris conceded that he had.

McCarthy asked if Harris "knew" that the ACLU had been "listed" as an organization serving Communist ends.

Harris said he didn't "know" that.

Murrow afterward explained that this was typical McCarthy technique, and said that the ACLU had not been "listed" by any responsible government agencies nor by the attorney general.

Monmouth Probe Hit

Murrow said McCarthy had "investigated and substantially demoralized the present state department" and had made charges of espionage at Fort Monmouth, N. J., while the army "has been unable to find anything related to espionage there."

The commentator scoffed at McCarthy's claim that "only the left wing press" criticized him for calling Brig. Gen. Ralph Zwicker, commanding officer at Camp Kilmer, N. J., a "disgrace" to his uniform.

Murrow said editorial opinion on the incident was 3 to 1 against McCarthy in "the 50 large circulation newspapers in the country." He read excerpts from editorials in McCarthy styled "left wing" papers that included the New York World-Telegram & the Sun, the Chicago Tribune, New York Times, St. Louis Post Dispatch, The Milwaukee Journal, New York Herald Tribune and Washington Times Herald.

Murrow made his points in a quiet voice. There could be no implication that he was "hysterical" or "excited" about McCarthy . . . but rather that he was giving a cold, dispassionate picture of the man.

As Murrow said, his purpose was to get at "the truth."

In Washington, McCarthy's wife said the senator went to bed early Tuesday night and did not see the program. She refused to wake him up to talk to reporters.

Delegates to the 10th inter-American conference near Caraca listened Tuesday as United States Secretary of State Dulles der national communism in the Americas as "alien intrigue and trea lermo Toriello (extreme left), Guatemala's foreign minister, h

RADIO OFFER ACCEPTED

NEW YORK, Thursday.

In what is regarded as a bid to anticipate Vice-President Nixon's broadcast reply to a speech Mr. Stevenson, the Democratic leader, made in Miami last Saturday, Senator McCarthy has accepted an invitation to appear to-night on Mr. Fulton Lewis, junior's, radio programme.

The programme is carried by stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System. Mr. Lewis said he made the offer because of "the refusal of the National Broadcasting Corporation and the Columbia Broadcasting System to grant you time and in view of Edward Murrow's distorted and slanted tirade against you."

The Republican leaders, with President Eisenhower's approval, had decided Mr. Nixon should be their spokesman in replying to Mr. Stevenson, but he is not to make his broadcast until Saturday. The Chicago Tribune's radio station has also offered Mr. McCarthy free time.

To-day the Columbia Broadcasting System was still receiving congratulations on the television programme in which Mr. Murrow analysed the senator's methods. Mr. Murrow is a member of its board of directors in addition to being its most famous commentator.

BROADCAST PRAISED

Using films and recordings of Mr. McCarthy's speeches, he sought to show, as he put it, that "two of the staples of his diet are the investigations (protected by immunity) and the half-truth." Already C.B.S. has tabulated more than 8,000 telephone calls commending Mr. Murrow.

This compares with 697 protesting against the broadcast. In addition, there have been 2,700 favourable telegrams and 86 critical ones.

"This is the largest spontaneous response we have ever known," officials of the network stated. Mr. McCarthy indicated to-day that he would accept Mr. Murrow's invitation to make a reply on the same programme if there were "no strings attached" and he was allowed to produce the programme as he saw fit.

Mr. Murrow's television presentation owed its tremendous impact to the fact that he condemned Mr. McCarthy out of the latter's own mouth by showing him conducting investigations, or making such speeches as the famous campaign one in which he pretended he had made a slip of the tongue when he referred to Mr. Stevenson as "Alger" (Hiss).

"The line between investigation and persecuting is a very fine one," said Mr. Murrow, "and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly. His primary achievement has been in confusing the public mind as between the internal and the external threat of Communism.

"The actions of the junior senator have caused alarm and dismay amongst our allies abroad and given considerable comfort to our enemies."

He'll Reply, To Attack, Says Murrow

Senator and Newsman Trade Verbal Blows; Answers Stevenson

NEW YORK (UP) — Edward R. Murrow said he would take time on his radio program tonight to deal with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's "latest reckless handling of the truth."

McCarthy attacked the CBS news commentator on the radio last night, charging that Murrow was one of the "extreme left wing bleeding heart elements of television and radio".

The Wisconsin senator was replying to an attack by Murrow on the latter's "See It Now" television show on Tuesday night. Murrow had accused McCarthy of repeatedly "stepping over the line between investigating and persecuting".

McCarthy also charged that Adlai E. Stevenson made "false" statements against him. To a charge by Senator Ralph Flanders (R-Vt) that he has been diverting public attention from the danger of Communists abread, McCarthy quoted Abraham Lincoln's statement that if the nation ever is destroyed "it will be from within".

McCarthy never mentioned President Eisenhower although he said earlier he might reply to the chief executive who declared Wednesday that Flanders did a "service" in his speech, which also accused McCarthy of trying to "shatter" the Republican Party.

McCarthy, interviewed by Fulton Lewis, Jr., on a MBS radio program, cited a February 18, 1935, clipping from the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph to show that Murrow once was "on the advisory council of Moscow University".

That university, McCarthy said, taught "the violent overthrow of the entire traditional social order".

"That may explain," the senator said, "why Murrow week after week feels that he must smear McCarthy. Maybe he feels that ... he should worry about the exposure of some of his friends."

Canceled by Reds

In reply Murrow sai[illegible] last night:

"In 1935 I was [illegible] Institute of International Education, [illegible] tion engaged in the exch[illegible] of students and professors [illegible] between this and foreign countries. In this capacity I was a member of the advisory committee for a summer school in Moscow.

"In actual fact the summer school was canceled by Russian authorities before it began. Those graduate students and professors who had signed up for the school spent the summer traveling in the Soviet Union, an activity which was not then and is not now illegal. I did not accompany this group of distinguished educators."

BRATTON WILL SUE AFTER $3,000 FINE

Pennsylvania Imposes Its Third Largest Penalty in Saxton Bout Aftermath

PHILADELPHIA, March 10 (AP) — Johnny Bratton, former welterweight champion, was fined $3,000 today by the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission for "not putting forth his best efforts" in a ten-round losing fight with Johnny Saxton last Feb. 24.

The penalty—the third largest ever imposed by the commission in its thirty years of existence—was announced by Chairman Frank Wiener.

Murray A. Frank, general counsel for the International Boxing Managers Guild of New York, who represented Bratton, said the action would be taken to court to "test the validity of the commission's action."

Frank called the move "capricious and arbitrary" and charged that Bratton's "constitutional rights had been violated by the severity of the penalty."

The fine is to be deducted from Bratton's share of the purse—$4,770—which had been withheld. The commission's suspension of Bratton remained in effect.

The remainder of Bratton's purse is tied up by a Philadelphia Common Pleas Court action filed by Robert Richards, proprietor of a training camp at Ulster Park, N. Y., who claims Bratton owes him $1,200 for room and board.

Bratton previously had collected $4,000 in television money.

The largest fine ever levied against a boxer by the commission was $5,000 against George Godfrey in 1930. Joe Glick was assessed $3,500 in the mid-Twenties.

Wiener said:

"We want this to be a warning to all boxers coming into the state of Pennsylvania. They must put forth their best efforts or run the risk of being suspended or having their purses forfeited."

$40 for Ringside Seat For Marciano-Charles

The top price for a ringside ticket to the world heavyweight championship fight between Rocky Marciano and Ezzard Charles will be $40, Jim Norris, promoter, said yesterday. Other prices for reserved seats will be $30, $20, $15, $10 and $5.

Marciano, the holder of the title, will meet Charles at the Yankee Stadium on June 17. Norris has not yet made a decision on whether the bout will be televised into homes or theatres. The tickets will go on sale May 10.

GRIGGS AND OELSNER TAKE CLASS C TESTS

Between the hours of 5 and 7 last night the Rev. J. J. Lynch, member of the squash racquets squad of the New York Athletic Club, lost two matches in the Metropolitan Class C singles championship, but there may be a "recount" on one of them. This tournament is spread around three local clubs, the Columbia University, Downtown A. C. and the Lone Star Boat, and mix-ups are almost inevitable.

While they were waiting for him at the Lone Star courts in the Capitol Hotel building and where the scorers at last decided he had lost by default to R. Fuller of the Brown Club who was on hand and waiting, Father Lynch, a teacher at Cathedral High School, actually was on the Downtown Athletic Club courts losing a fourth-round match to E. C. White of the Yale Club, 15—12, 15—13, 17—15.

Also at the Downtown A. C., Mike Griggs of the Williams Club needed four games to get past Fred Seggerman of the Princeton Club, 15—10, 17—18, 15—13 and 15—10. W. J. Oelsner of the Downtown A. C. defeated Victor Schwartz of the Brown Club, 15—5, 15—3, 15—4.

On the Columbia University Club courts, Martin Lobdell of the Seabright Club was carried to five games before beating Larry Becker of Lone Star, 15—12, 12—15, 5—15, 15—14, 17—16. Jim Megysey of the New York A. C. won from Phil Hoffman, a club mate, 11—15, 15—10, 15—8, 15—10.

In a second default at Lone Star, Robert Hawthorne of the N. Y. A. C. was declared winner over Edward Reed of Lone Star.

CITY COLLEGE SIFTS SPORTS PURCHASES

Acts on a Report by Sheils—Holman Not Implicated, Cayallaro Emphasizes

Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of City College, announced last night that he had begun an inquiry into alleged improper practices in the purchase of athletic equipment for the college.

The action stemmed from a report that Dr. Gallagher received as the result of an investigation finished last December by former Commissioner of Investigation James H. Sheils. The Commissioner's report was made confidentially to the Board of Higher Education, and was forwarded by that body to Dr. Gallagher for his action.

While the contents of the report were not revealed, Joseph B. Cavallaro, chairman of the board, stressed that Nat Holman, dismissed City College basketball coach, was in no way implicated.

Mr. Sheils began inquiring a year ago to learn why the city paid more for athletic equipment for City College than for other municipal colleges. The findings in the report sent to Mr. Cavallaro on Dec. 2 were not disclosed either by him or the present Commissioner of Investigation, Peter Campbell Brown.

A statement denying that there had been any irregularities in the purchase of supplies was issued later by Sam Winograd, who had served from 1947 to 1952 as the faculty manager of athletics. He now is an assistant professor of hygiene.

Cites Backing of Inquiries

Although he was not mentioned in Dr. Gallagher's announcement, Mr. Winograd's statement said that earlier investigations had stressed his "completely loyal and proper service" as the person in charge of buying athletic supplies.

Dr. Gallagher said he had delayed action until after the Board of Higher Education had completed the trial of Mr. Holman and his assistant, Harry (Bobby) Sand, on charges resulting from the 1950 basketball scandal. Dr. Gallagher explained that he wanted to avoid confusion.

Mr. Holman charged yesterday that the board was withholding from him a transcript of the closed meeting that had decided on his dismissal. He said through his attorney, James V. Hayes, that the board had offered to supply the minutes of the open meeting, but he declared he was most interested in what was said in the closed part of last Wednesday's session.

Mr. Holman had been exonerated of charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher in a majority opinion of a three-man trial committee, but he was found guilty and dismissed at the board meeting.

The 56-year-old coach said that since his suspension from City College in November, 1952, he had received job offers from colleges, professional groups and television, but that he had reached no decision on them.

'STRIKE IT RICH' SUES

Seeks to Block City Order for Fund-Raising License

The producer of the radio and TV show "Strike It Rich" said yesterday that he was seeking a declaratory judgment in the State Supreme Court to prevent the Department of Welfare from requiring the show to obtain a fund-raising license.

Walt Framer, the producer, asserted that a summons and complaint were served on Welfare Commissioner Henry L. McCarthy and were accepted on his behalf by Philip Sokol, counsel for the department.

Mr. Sokol, who confirmed this action, said that the Commissioner had made no formal demand that "Strike It Rich" obtain a license, but had said that it ought to get one.

Television in Review: Murrow vs. McCarthy

'See It Now' on C.B.S. Examines Senator and His Methods

By JACK GOULD

EDWARD R. MURROW'S television program on Senator Joseph R. McCarthy was an exciting and provocative examination of the man and his methods. It was crusading journalism of high responsibility and genuine courage.

For TV, so often plagued by timidity and hesitation, the program was a milestone that reflected enlightened citizenship on the part of the Columbia Broadcasting System and, particularly, the Aluminum Company of America, who paid the bill to make it possible. No voice is braver than those who enable it to be heard.

On "See It Now" (10:30 P. M. Tuesday over C. B. S.), Mr. Murrow brought vigor, conviction and craftsmanship to the preparation of his indictment of the controversial legislator. His chief witnesses were Mr. McCarthy's own words, gestures and mannerisms as recorded on film and sound tape. The Senator's most useful tools, Mr. Murrow suggested, were Congressional immunity and the "half-truth."

Yet the program was no less an indictment of those who wish the problems posed by the Senator's tactics and theatrics would just go away and leave them alone. Whether a viewer approves or disapproves of Senator McCarthy, he could hardly help but react to Mr. Murrow's challenge. That was Mr. Murrow's and television's triumph, and a very great one.

There need be no quibble about the point of view of "See It Now." By itself Mr. Murrow's program was strongly one-sided. But the alternative to not handling the story in this manner was not to do the story at all, by far a greater danger. The Senator seldom has shown relish for letting others do the cross-examination.

Edward R. Murrow

As it was, Mr. Murrow made unmistakably clear at the program's outset that Senator McCarthy could have equal time to address himself to the points raised on the program. As the only person who can answer, Mr. McCarthy must decide whether to complete the record. Mr. Murrow can only invite, not subpoena. It will be interesting to see how the Senator pleads.

In "See It Now," Mr. Murrow and Fred W. Friendly, the co-editor of the program, took up the many facets of Senator McCarthy's activities in several stages.

The program's "working thesis," as Mr. Murrow called it, was that if the fight against communism was made into a fight against the two great political parties one party soon would be destroyed and the Republic could not long survive. These words were taken from a speech by Senator McCarthy seventeen months ago.

Yet last month Senator McCarthy spoke of the "twenty years of treason" and said "those who wear the label of Democrat wear the same historic betrayal."

"See It Now" showed Senator McCarthy once explaining that his "cup and heart is so full" he could not talk. In contrast he was shown at no loss for words in describing a general as not fit to wear the uniform. Mr. Murrow took up the Senator's charge that the left-wing press was against him. Fifty large-circulation papers, including the most conservative, actually were against the Senator by a ratio of 3 to 1 on the Zwicker case.

Mr. Murrow presented on film Senator McCarthy's calculated quip, accompanied by a giggle, against Adlai E. Stevenson: "Strangely, Alger —I mean Adlai * * *." This was followed by detailed documentation that Mr. Stevenson had nothing to do with a barn in Lee, Mass., though the Senator clearly had implied it showed a Communist tie-up. Similarly, the irrelevancy and prejudice of much of the Senator's questioning of Reed Harris were detailed.

After documenting his case, Mr. Murrow offered his telling summary of its meaning. It speaks for itself:

"No one familiar with the history of this country can deny that Congressional committees are useful. It is necessary to investigate before legislating, but the line between investigating and persecuting is a very fine one, and the junior Senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly.

"Hhis primary achievement has been in confusing the public mind as between internal and external threats of communism.

"We must not confuse dissent with disloyalty. We must remember always that accusation is not proof and that conviction depends upon evidence and due process of law. We will not walk in fear one of another. We will not be driven by fear into an age of unreason if we dig deep in our history and our doctrine, and remember that we are not descended from fearful men, not from men who feared to write, to speak, to associate and to defend causes that were for the moment unpopular.

"This is no time for men who oppose Senator McCarthy's methods to keep silent, nor for those who approve. We can deny our heritage and our history but we cannot escape responsibility for the result.

"The actions of the junior Senator from Wisconsin have caused alarm and dismay amongst our allies abroad and given considerable comfort to our enemies, and whose fault is that? Not really his, he didn't create the situation of fear, he merely exploited it, and rather successfully. Cassius was right, 'The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves * * *'."

Textile Union Renews Pacts

Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union of America, C. I. O., said yesterday that the union's contract with the American Woolen Company, due to expire next Monday, had been extended. He said extension also had been negotiated with more than 100 other woolen and worsted companies, whose contracts expire Monday. He explained that the union's woolen and worsted policy committee early in January had adopted a policy of renewing contracts without change.

Mrs. Mesta Plans TV Show

BOSTON, March 10 (UP)—Mrs. Perle Mesta, Washington hostess and former Minister to Luxembourg, said today she planned to go to work in a television show to pay for educating "hundreds" of aspiring European diplomats. She said she hoped to put on a television show in Washington. The proceeds will pay for scholarships at American schools for young people who want to enter the diplomatic service.

SPECIAL TV SHOW OF MUSICALS SET

Rodgers and Hammerstein to Produce 1½-Hour Program March 28 Over 2 Networks

Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d will produce a special ninety-minute television program on Sunday, March 28, at 8 P. M. that will feature musical highlights from their Broadway productions during the last eleven years.

The program will be presented over the combined networks of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company, with the Messrs. Rodgers and Hammerstein appearing in person. They will use, wherever possible, the stars who appeared in the original stage productions.

The program, as yet untitled, will be comprised of scenes and music from "Oklahoma," "Carousel," "Allegro," "South Pacific," "The King and I" and "Me and Juliet."

The General Foods Corporation will sponsor the program in celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary. The cost is estimated to be upward of $300,000.

Dangers of overeating will be discussed on the "March of Medicine" program, to be presented tonight from 10 to 10:30 o'clock over the N. B. C. television network. Among the participants will be authorities on obesity, nutrition and diet.

Actual tape recordings of the activities of the police department in Culver City, Calif., will be featured in a new C. B. S. radio program, "Night Watch," which begins April 5 from 10 to 10:30 P. M. The recordings will be edited to remove all names and to disguise locations.

The "Joe Palooka Story," a film series, will make its debut over Channel 5 on Saturday from 7 to 7:30 P. M. The cast will include Joe Kirkwood, Kathy Downs, Sid Tomack and Maxie Rosenbloom.

Letters From Readers On Slanted Newscasts

By JACK O'BRIAN

Our frank opinions that various CBS radio and TV newscasters are delivering their purportedly "objective" news material from a stance well to the left of even so called "liberal" analysis of the news has brought a surprising number of letters in agreement. It would seem that CBS is fooling around with a strangely vigorous intangible called public acceptance of its newscasts.

No longer does the public, from the tone of our letters, consider CBS news impervious to slanting. We have discovered the newscasts and telecasts generally of Edward R. Murrow and Don Hollenbeck, to name the leading CBS lessers, to the left to develop a peculiarly selective slant in most of their news work. It is this brace of portsided thinkers whose public performance has stirred many readers into the following angry exercise of the postal facilities:

"Thank you for corroborating my estimation of Murrow and Hollenbeck," writes one "middle-of-the-roader" who asked that we do not divulge his name. "I am a college instructor, and I'm afraid with the way things are going around my school that my feelings if printed out in the open in your paper might make things rough for me. If you don't mind, please keep my identity a secret.

"But I would like to give you my analysis of Don Hollenbeck's unusual approach to the news of the day. Whatever the big news may be, he manages to include some item of less than heavy import so long as it has some bearing on racism, unionism, or a hint that the public is not with the President in his program for the future, somehow keeping the future shaky and troubled, seeing global implications in some provincial situation far removed from the mainstream of progress.

"Or he will take some popular item of news and drop in a shrewdly timed and provocative comment usually intended to shake our confidence in American institutions, as I see it. One night Hollenbeck injected a snide aside into a television newsreel of a peaceful agreement between Tito and the Greek king. Of course Tito and Moscow aren't quite judy-pally any more. Hollenbeck's supposed afterthought suggested it was somehow shameful for Greece and Yugoslavia to find a basis for a peaceful agreement.

"Another night Hollenbeck, during the West Point graduation newsreel on his show tossed in a sly, softly spoken and entirely biased aside on a routine loyalty check of our service school graduates. It was shrewd, slick, and oily, just enough to get over a left-handed swipe at the necessarily cautious study we must make these days of any danger point, and any place where a man of privately treasonable conscience might secretly plot against our country under the patriotic guise of a uniform must satisfy our fears with a reasonable investigation.

"Should we accept someone for commission in our Army or Navy who has some private plot for the future? Don't even the cleanest of us occasionally examine our own consciences? Does that mean we shan't pass our own private scrutiny? If some civilian is tapped for a big government job, isn't the FBI asked to investigate him? But Hollenbeck, a graduate of that Commie-laden newspaper 'PM' who has taken a tack notably to the left in most matters of public commotion, was able to sneak in a sly suggestion that something awful is inherent in such a simple, honest, necessary check.

"Doesn't he know that Navy and Army fledglings grown men who some day will mature into another generation's Ike Eisenhowers, George Marshalls, Omar Bradleys, Douglas MacArthurs, Beedle Smith and that we should make certain they pass muster early, before they could color our country's future the pink that Mr. Hollenbeck seems to admire?

"We don't want any Maj. Peresses to get into West Point. Think of what Benedict Arnold almost did.

"These are important sidelights which do not seem ever to strike Don Hollenbeck, but only the items which strike me as tossing suspicion upon intentions which are the noblest. I'm afraid I'm sick of him, and CBS."

"I, too, would like to add my name to the list of those who are objecting to Don Hollenbeck on Ch. 2," writes C. Devlin, 315 E. 196th st., N. Y. C. 58.

And so on. We have received countless letters and cards bearing similar anger and suspicions. We did not "pitch" for such volunteered opinions, but we shall do just that now: Please write about any political slanting you catch anywhere in radio and TV. We'll print as many as we can. It might help.

An Analysis of Murrow's Portsided Political Pitching

By JACK O'BRIAN

We can't say we were surprised at Edw. R. Murrow's hate-McCarthy telecast last evening. Realizing before the broadcast that the program would be slanted one-sidedly to meet Murrow's own opinions, CBS Board Chairman Bill Paley personally ordered the pompous portsider to take a more middle ground. Murrow refused.

Backstage explosions kept detonating until TV time with threats from both sides of firings and resignations.

The feeling around CBS, where the air has been filled for years with pink and liberal editorializing, was that Murrow might cause a public revulsion against such permanently slanted political comments, to the detriment of sponsors, CBS business generally and the loudly expressed desire among some of CBS' top brass to get out from under what they considered an old misconception of the network's "liberal" policies.

Murrow's idealogies have brought the charge that he is a "reactionary," that his reactions can be anticipated in advance of any prescribed event or commentary thereupon.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has been in a lengthy "clean house of lefties" mood. The worst offendors on lesser levels have been quietly pushed out of the company.

Charmed Life

Murrow, however, has led a charmed existence. His Svengali-style influence on the top officers of the corporation has molded many a CBS attitude in the handling of both personnel and news.

When he officially and personally dominated the news departments of CBS, he encouraged in many ways heckling of publications whose editorial stands were anywhere to the right of Murrow.

He incited and encouraged a 15-minute radio program called "CBS Views The Press," in which Don Hollenbeck, a graduate of the demised pinko publication "P.M.," attacked conservative newspapers with sly Sen. Joseph McCarthy's speeches over the last few years.

and slanted propaganda of the sort Murrow last evening plucked from the context of

When his explosively one-sided propaganda, edited with deviously clever selectivity from McCarthy's march against Communism, was finished last evening, by equally Machiavellian coincidence the following telecast featured Murrow's "P.M." protege Hollenbeck. In an obviously gloating mood, Hollenbeck hoped viewers had witnessed his patron's triumph from and for the left.

He then proceeded through an equally tilted review of the day's events with McCarthy dominating his words, actions, attitude and camera.

Murrow's techniques on radio and TV are identical. He stubbornly sticks to the left side of any situation. He states cases as fact when they are merely Murrow's opinion. He is a great hand at dipping into the classics, citing the words of Twain, Lincoln, Diogenes, Holmes and other dead thinkers on subjects of the present moment about which none of these demised celebrities could be expected to have any precise retroactive opinions. Mostly the problems concerning which such ancient but glib quotations have been so deftly plucked have no bearing whatever on any phase of current history.

Still, they fit Murrow's purpose and mood; it's an old trick: Stating his own opinion might leave a listener in doubt as to his full authority on the subject. Quoting a resplendant name from the dead past and reciting a corpse's thoughts on an entirely separate subject, Murrow's manner indicates that Lincoln surely would have had the same opinion of the situation that prevails and therefore would have been moved back in the middle eighties to phrase something cogently pertinent to today's ears and minds.

It's an old device; along Broadway the device was used to give importance to some straggly joke. The creator of such jape would give it an extra dimension by asking: "Did you hear what Dorothy Parker said last night?" Then, in Dorothy Parker's unwilling name, the quip would follow.

Even in his "Person to Person" CBS-TV show, Murrow tries to push his guests into provocative statements about Sen. McCarthy. He was able easily to accomplish it with Harry Truman; he was not so successful in an exchange with Tallulah Bankhead, whose inhibitions can be loosened on many a matter but not one which might joggle her earnings.

IKE BACKS ATTACK ON JOE M'CARTHY

His Temper Flares, He Stamps His Foot at Adlai's Criticism

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) — President Eisenhower said today Sen. Flanders (R) Vt., did a service by pointing up the great danger of party-splitting strife in his Senate speech critical of Sen. McCarthy (R) Wis.

Eisenhower said he wanted to make it clear he was not issuing any blanket endorsement of Flanders' speech, but also told a news conference:

1—It was "nonsense" for Adlai Stevenson to say the Republican Party is split—"half McCarthy and half Eisenhower."

2—He believes the CBS and NBC networks did the fair and proper thing in giving the Republican Party free network time for a reply to Stevenson while denying it to McCarthy as an individual.

Eisenhower commented that any political speaker might mention critically the names of 20 or more persons and that it would be impossible for the networks to give each of them time for rebuttal.

In the Senate, McCarthy told reporters he would have no comment on the President's remarks until he had had an opportunity to study a transcript of them.

Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic Presidential candidate, had questioned in a Miami party speech whether the "new look" military program with emphasis on atomic and other new weapons is really affording the country the best security.

Asked about that, Eisenhower stamped his foot in emphasis as he said that he is doing nothing in the Defense Department that he does not believe is for the best interest of the country.

He is not going to demagogue about it either, the President said, his face flushed.

Eisenhower said that there

Happy Couple Start Honeymoon on Hawaiian Isle

BY KENDIS ROCHLEN
Mirror Columnist

Joan Benny and her bridegroom, Seth Baker, flew to Hawaii today for their honeymoon, while Hollywood recuperated from their lavish wedding last night.

The hitching of Jack Benny's 19-year-old daughter and the wealthy 26-year-old stockbroker was a glamorous production. Benny said it cost $25,000 but other estimates ran as high as $50,000.

See "Confetti" Page 1, Part II

It had simply everything, from the thick red carpet at the Beverly Hills Hotel entrance to Waukegan's favorite son done up in white tie and tails.

But the famous comedian played a straight role as he gave his lovely young daughter in marriage. He wore his glasses, explaining, "I'd rather look not so good and wear glasses, than fall on my face."

Mrs. Benny (Mary Livingston), too, stood proudly by as Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin performed the double-ring ceremony. He advised the young couple to "forget about the tinsel of life and live for good things."

The wedding went off with precision under the direction of Designer Don Loper, who had a hand in everything from creating the bridal gown to decorating the huge Crystal Room with white flowers and green garlands.

Loper dashed about issuing orders like a movie director.

"Okay, cut it," he said with a wave of his hand as he sought to end the long reception line.

Though the full roster of Hollywood's Who's Who showed up for the reception, the real stars were the excited lovebirds. And they worked plenty hard meeting the demands of the script. They posed for hundreds of pictures. They stood for hours, smiling, shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Baker, a slim New Yorker who addressed every woman there, including his bride, as "doll," kept shifting from one tired foot to the other, but never lost his smile or his manners.

"What do you think of big, fancy weddings at this point?" I asked and he grinned:

"You couldn't print it, doll."

MIRROR OFFERS FACTS ON BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Today The Mirror presents an important service to its readers—a comprehensive report on the business outlook.

Mirror experts turned to official figures from State and national agencies, reports from leading business statistical firms and direct interviews with leading businessmen. All the facts were carefully considered and evaluated. The complete picture is presented on Page 3 of today's Mirror.

You, Mr. Consumer, and you, Mr. Businessman, read the facts and decide for yourself. Is America's economy healthy and rugged, or are the gloom peddlers right?

Ike to Go on Networks in Fight Over Tax Cut

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) President Eisenhower announced today he will go on television and radio probably next week to discuss the administration's tax bill.

The President made no reference directly to a pending House bill to cut excise taxes by about $912,000,000 a year.

His announcement came against the background of a Democratic move to boost personal income tax exemptions by $100.

The administration has not endorsed the excise cut and the Treasury has indicated strong opposition to the exemption increase.

House leaders of both parties see close to unanimous approval for the excise cut.

Before action got under way in the House itself today, the Ways and Means Committee voted unanimously to reverse itself and make the extension of present rates on liquor, autos and other items for one year only.

The committee also approved an amendment which would give auto and truck dealers a tax refund on their unsold floor stocks, if the tax drops automatically on April 1, 1955, as now scheduled in the bill.

Here's an Idea That Works Both Ways

Good neighbors are a wonderful invention. And that goes for your neighbor businessmen as well as the people on the other side of the back fence.

Take your car dealer, for instance. With a stake in the goodwill of the whole community, he is going to be sure you are given a good deal, good service, good terms and a real interest in the right operation of the car you buy from him. C of C Official Finds Business Slump Leveling

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10 (AP) — There are some indications the down trend of recent months in business activity has moderated or leveled off, Carl F. Wente, first vice-president of the California State Chamber of Commerce, reported today.

He listed these indications in his current report on economic conditions within the State: Unemployment insurance claims have dropped, the value of real estate has been increasing, department store sales in most areas have moved above their January lows and farm prices are generally above the levels of last fall.

Wente said continuing unemployment claims have remained slightly below their high point reached in the week of Jan. 23 and that initial claims also have been slightly lower.

Nonfarm Jobs Down 900,000 From Year Ago

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) The Labor Department reported today nonfarm employment dropped 300,000 in February with total nonfarm jobs down 900,000 from a year ago.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said in an analysis of the figures that while the unemployment trend is continuing, there are signs it is "slowing down."

The 300,000 drop in nonfarm employment between January and February indicated the Census Bureau's February count of over-all unemployment, due in the next few days, will exceed the 3,087,000 calculation for January.

U.S. Sues Dad of McCarthy Aide

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) The Justice Department today announced the filing of criminal and civil contempt actions against Schine Chain Theatres, Inc., for alleged violations of a 1949 antitrust decree. The chain has headquarters in New York State.

The department said the contempt proceedings were brought in the Federal District Court at Buffalo, naming as defendants the theater chain itself, five of its subsidiary corporations, and J. Myer Schine, and others.

J. Myer Schine is the father of G. David Schine, former aide to Sen. Joseph McCarthy's (R) Wis., Senate Investigating Committee.

The younger Schine, 26, was drafted into the Army last November, and is now a private stationed at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Senate Group OKs FEPC Bill

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) The Senate Labor Committee today approved a bill to forbid discrimination in employment because of race, color, creed or ancestry. The measure lacks President Eisenhower's endorsement.

M'CARTHY AIDE TO SERVE UNDER MAN HIS BOSS PROBED

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP)—Roy Cohn, chief counsel of the Senate Investigations Subcommittee which Sen. McCarthy (R) Wis., heads, said today he has been ordered to report to Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, for training as a National Guard officer June 12-25.

Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, commandant of the camp, has been a storm center in the row between McCarthy and Secretary of the Army Stevens.

The Secretary has accused McCarthy of using abusive language in questioning Zwicker, a decorated hero of World War II.

Public Backs TV Rap at McCarthy

NEW YORK, March 10 (AP)—Thousands of phone calls and telegrams poured in on the Columbia Broadcasting System today in response to a denunciation of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R) Wis., by Commentator Edward R. Murrow.

Immediately after the program last night, CBS reported 2365 calls were received in four hours, all but 151 approving Murrow's views. Also 1089 telegrams were received with only 14 upholding McCarthy, CBS said.

The calls were coming in too fast to total today but CBS officials said the reaction was overwhelmingly in favor of Murrow.

One CBS spokesman reported a 20-to-1 ratio in favor of Murrow out of 41 telephone calls he personally answered.

Another CBS spokesman said Margaret Truman and Sen. Mike Monroney (D) Okla., telephoned their congratulations to Murrow.

Murrow declared on his "See It Now" program last night that McCarthy repeatedly overstepped the line between investigation and persecution.

He offered McCarthy an opportunity to reply on a later "See It Now" program.

CBS said it had not yet received any indication from Mc-

FOOD PRICES HIT NEW HIGH

NEW YORK, March 10 (AP)—Wholesale food prices as measured by Dun & Bradstreet climbed to another three-year high this week.

At $7.25, the Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index was at its highest point since March 15, 1951, when it stood at $7.27.

WORLD in BRIEF

By HENRY FRANK

ALL OTHER THINGS failing, even Presidential warnings, Republicans may have decided to take Sen. Joe McCarthy out behind the barn for a little quiet "reasoning." That possibility developed today as the storm around the Wisconsin Senator grew more furious—after McCarthy got his first snub in attempts to get TV time to answer charges of Adlai Stevenson.

A highly placed Republican said today the new party strategy was to "get McCarthy out of the headlines and get our story across."

And Sen. Flanders (R) Vt., delivered the party's first open attack on McCarthy last night, declaring Joe was "doing his best to shatter the party." All McCarthy's efforts, Flanders said, had turned up nothing more than a "pink dentist" in the Army.

To this, McCarthy answered he didn't "have time to answer Republican heroes."

McCarthy does have time to answer one charge, however. Ed Murrow, CBS news commentator, offered the free time to answer his charges on TV last night that McCarthy had "overstepped the line between investigation and persecution" many times.

But it was on his demand for time to answer Stevenson that McCarthy took his major tumble. When the GOP announced that a reply to Stevenson was a party matter and that Ike had picked Vice-President Nixon for the job, McCarthy insisted that Federal Communications Commission regulations provided that he be given personal time.

To this Robert E. Lee, McCarthy's friend and new FCC member, pointed out that the law requires "candidates" be given equal time, and that McCarthy is not a candidate. Lee added that he thought giving the party, instead of McCarthy, the time was "a square deal."

McCarthy replied, "If that's the rule, the rule has got to be changed."

But he couldn't stir the networks, Lee or—it seems— anyone else.

CREPE FOR FEPC

VALIANT EFFORT to get a compulsory Federal fair employment practices act seemed doomed today as the Senate Labor Committee was slated to give approval to a bill by Sen. Ives (D) N.Y. But no one had any hope that the Senate—where southern Senators have killed such bills before—would give passage to the measure.

SHOWDOWN on the Hawaiian Statehood bill seemed certain tomorrow—with the Senate about evenly split on whether to attach Alaska to the bill or leave it for later, as Sen. Knowland has asked.

TAX CUT approval by the House appeared certain today as the measure slicing $912,000,000 from excise levies was due to come before that body. The bill would level off excises at 10%, except for liquor, tobacco and beer. Many price cuts will follow, observers predicted.

TROUBLE AHEAD?

"LOSS OF CHINA led to Korea and Indo-China, and loss of Indo-China may lead to the loss of Asia" to the Communists, Vice-President Nixon said last night in saying the United States "now could fight on its own terms."

But there was a disturbing sequel. Last night the French National Assembly gave Premier Laniel's government carte blanche on negotiating a peace in Indo-China. Laniel immediately said that the Geneva conference offers the best chance for a solution.

The Geneva conference, by including Red China, already has aroused fears that there might be a "Far Eastern Munich" with the Reds benefiting. Placing the fate of the Indo-China war on the same block only adds to those fears.

MEANWHILE, South Korean President Syngman Rhee, who got no reaction at all from earlier statements South Korea would boycott the April 26 meeting, decided his nation would attend.

Suicide's Friends Hope to Clear Her

Couple Tell Fear of Musician, Charge Alaska Police With 'Pressure'

BY PAUL ETTER, Mirror Staff Writer

Friends of beautiful Diane Wells, convinced she was innocent of a murder charge, today planned a campaign to clear her name in death.

They charged Mrs. Wells, 31, who faced trial April 5 for the murder of her wealthy Alaskan husband, was a victim of blackmail threats and police department "pressure tactics."

The young mother killed herself yesterday in the Hollywood Plaza Hotel rather than face a murder trial.

Death of Mrs. Wells, who swallowed 30 sleeping pills, leaves a Negro jazz drummer to face trial alone.

Mrs. Wells and the musician, Johnny Warren, who claimed he was her lover, were accused of the gun killing Oct. 17 of Cecil Moore Wells, 51, former president of the All-Alaska Chamber of Commerce.

Convinced Diane was innocent, two close friends—Allen and Joann Mansfield, 3928 Carmona Ave.—declared this morning:

"So many things went against Diane in this case. For one thing she lived in fear of that musician.

"Always Diane insisted there was no love affair between her and Warren. She saw him only once—after he telephoned to ask for a meeting—and she was afraid not to see him."

The Mansfields, who are caring for Diane's 3-year-old son Mark, also charged the police department in Fairbanks, Alaska, with "pressure tactics."

"A number of prominent Fairbanks men had been murdered shortly before Wells was killed and the police felt they had to make swift arrests in the case," Mansfield said.

Detectives refused to believe Mrs. Wells' story she was beaten senseless by two men who broke into their home and killed her husband before she regained consciousness.

"But she was beaten so badly she nearly died," declared the Mansfields, who were guests of the Wellses at the time of the murder.

The couple, who said Mrs. Wells lacked confidence in the attorney she retained when she was accused, continued:

"She never feared the outcome of the trial. She always said she was innocent but she hated and dreaded the scandal for the sake of her child."

Carthy, who is in Washington, as to whether he would accept the offer.

McCarthy's wife said he had gone to bed early and that he did not hear the program.

Murrow, who is a member of the CBS board of directors, rapped McCarthy in the midst of a fight by the Senator to force CBS and NBC to give him free time to answer a Saturday night speech by Democratic Leader Adlai E. Stevenson.

The two networks offered free time to the Republican National Committee, which chose Vice-President Richard M. Nixon to make the reply.

McCarthy, arguing that Stevenson attacked him personally as well as the Republican Party, said yesterday he intended to make a test of whether the networks had a right to refuse him time to reply personally, in addition to the Nixon speech.

Murrow used films and tape recordings of McCarthy speeches and statements and declared that the Senator employed half-truths as a "staple."

He accused McCarthy of confusing the public between internal and external threats of Communism.

Murrow said in his program the need for investigation by Congressional committees cannot be denied.

had been no procedure change in operations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He said he always dislikes slogans and believes the "new look" tag is not truly descriptive of the military program.

The subject of Flanders' speech was brought up when a reporter asked Eisenhower whether he sympathized with what Flanders had to say.

The Vermont lawmaker contended in a Senate speech yesterday that McCarthy's tactics in pursuing internal subversion were diverting the country's attention from greater dangers from without. Flanders said, too, that McCarthy "by intention or through ignorance" was "doing his best to shatter" the Republican Party.

The Republican Party, Eisenhower commented, now is the party of responsibility, so charged by the people.

He added that when Flanders pointed up the danger of internecine warfare, in situations which magnify the danger of personal aggrandizement—those things which endanger the program of the administration—Flanders is doing a service in pointing up such situations.

Eisenhower said also that when a situation develops where you are going three or four directions at one time, well, then, it is just serious.

A reporter asked whether the President didn't feel that the positive aspects of the administration's program ought to be emphasized instead of having so much publicity about investigations.

Eisenhower replied that he doesn't believe negative things promote the happiness of the people. He said the spiritual, cultural and economic welfare of the people should be promoted.

Eisenhower backed up the decision of the Republican National Committee to have Vice-President Nixon answer Stevenson's speech on television and radio. The President said he had sat in on a meeting at which that decision was made.

McCarthy has demanded network time for his own answer to Stevenson and has threatened to take to the Federal Communications Commission the decision of CBS and NBS refusing him this time.

The President said he regards the network decisions as fair and just.

McCarthy and Symington Clash at Probe Session

WASHINGTON, March 10 (AP) Sens. McCarthy (R) Wis., and Symington (D) Mo., clashed angrily at a public hearing today when McCarthy accused a fellow Senator of misrepresenting facts on a television program. He did not name the Senator.

Symington said he assumed McCarthy's remarks were aimed at Sen. Jackson (D) Wash., who was absent from the hearing, and added:

"I suggest you wait until the Senator is present to defend himself."

McCarthy, presiding at a session of his Investigations Subcommittee, beat a glass ash tray on the table in an effort to silence Symington.

The exchange came during the appearance of a Clifton (N.J.) draftsman who refused to say whether he has ever been a Communist. The witness, Leo Kantrowitz, 36, testified he had been given security clearance to work on classified electronics projects for the government, but said he didn't recall that any of his bosses ever asked whether he was a Communist.

McCarthy asked Kantrowitz, "Would you consider yourself a current Communist or, as one of the Senators has suggested, an old warmed over biscuit?" McCarthy said the Senator had used the "warmed over" term in a television program, but did not name the Senator.

McCarthy and Symington, each gifted with a good, loud speaking voice, talked simultaneously some of the time, with the rapping of the ash tray adding to the clamor.

M'CARTHY VS. THE REST
RUSSIA—THEN AND NOW

BY VIRGIL PINKLEY, Mirror Editor and Publisher

The McCarthy issue dominated the week's news, just as it has many times during recent months.

Whatever your viewpoint is about the highly controversial Wisconsin Republican Senator, two facts are plain:

1—Continuation of McCarthy's methods and his defiance of party leaders and policies will split the GOP wide open.

2—Unity of the country—desperately needed now in view of world conditions—is being rendered virtually impossible.

It has been evident for a long time that McCarthy loves newspaper headlines, TV and radio show spotlights and his own importance.

SEN. McCARTHY

He does not hesitate to use the most demagogic practices to make "news" or carry out a bulldozing quiz. His investigations are more like hazings than legal and fair hearings. His methods frequently verge on those employed in totalitarian and Communist countries.

He is quick to call anyone he disagrees with a Communist or fellow traveler. He induces his fanatical followers blindly to do likewise.

Many McCarthy supporters describe him as "the greatest American in our history."

Others say, "McCarthy really knows how to handle these Reds." For some time he has been the rallying point of extremely conservative and reactionary groups. But his tactics of the past several weeks have caused some of his previous supporters to doubt his sincerity or the necessity of his methods. This applies to several long-time Republican Senators with whom I personally spoke during this past week.

The Fabulous McCarthy Episode

Four years and 26 days ago the junior Senator from Wisconsin stood before a Republican audience in Wheeling, W.Va. Joseph R. McCarthy said:

"I have here in my hands a list of 205—a list of names that were made known to the Secretary of State as being members of the Communist Party and who, nevertheless, are still working and shaping policy in the State Department."

Later, the Senator, in the book he wrote, reduced the figure to 57.

That was the beginning of the fabulous McCarthy episode. Events have developed so rapidly and gone so far that the President of the United States this week felt impelled to publicly deplore McCarthy's "investigation" techniques and demand a return to justice and fair play in such hearings.

Republicans as well as a growing number of Democrats and independents are speaking out against McCarthy and urging a reform in Congressional investigations.

Congressman Jacob K. Javits, a long-time Republican representing New York's 21st District in Congress, is typical. In a special article he writes:

"The question is not whether there is a need to investigate Communism and subversion; the question, rather, is of the methods employed. These methods greatly trouble millions of Americans who are sensible of our historic traditions of jurisprudence and who are concerned at the growing threat they pose to our civil liberties.

Traditional Concepts of U.S. Justice

"Some of these investigations have taken on the nature of prosecution of witnesses or persons mentioned by witnesses, resulting in subsequent loss of livelihood, reputation and social standing.

"It is clear that a reform of Congressional investigating committee methods is badly needed and that we must seek ways more in keeping with traditional concepts of justice to reach our objectives."

Javits suggests several alternatives, among them a plan to entrust such investigations to a joint committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives. He cites as an example the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. He says:

"This committee has conducted in the utmost secrecy investigations of great moment to the security of this country and of the free world. This group, which is charged with as great a responsibility as Congress has ever given to any committee, could well be a model for the handling of subversion."

Perhaps at this late date somebody can convince Sen. McCarthy that he does not serve his party or this nation well when he divides and inflames American opinion. Certainly his objectives are laudable, insofar as they concern ferreting out Communists. Few men have been given a greater opportunity to serve us and the free world with more lasting results. But the quarrel that most fair-minded and deep-thinking citizens have with the Senator is the way in which he operates.

Pity the average individual called in by the Senator as long as he continues his present practices.

A Year Ago Joseph Stalin Died

A year ago Joseph Stalin died. At that time I wrote in this column:

"The death of Joseph Stalin this week emphasizes anew the vast difference between a democracy such as ours and a totalitarian state such as Russia.

"A republic governed through the supreme instrument of a constitution has flexibility and is vastly more responsive to the citizen. The American Constitution combines individual liberty with national strength. It is a marvelous balance between the individual and the state, but always the citizen is supreme."

Abraham Lincoln reiterated this fundamental American viewpoint in his magnificent Gettysburg Address:

". . . That this government of the PEOPLE, by the PEOPLE and for the PEOPLE shall not perish from the earth . . ."

On March 7, 1953, I wrote:

"Dictators come and go. Real democracies live on. They make it possible for their citizens to improve their living standards and strive for those higher ideals which enable men to reflect more of the image of their Creator."

A year ago Russia was carrying on an intensified cold war. A year ago the Soviets were stepping up their fiendish propaganda.

A year ago the Kremlin was fomenting strife and trouble. A year ago Moscow was working on the Communist plan to dominate and conquer the world.

Today these Red activities continue. The menace we faced then is as great as ever today. Our only recourse is to work, stay everlastingly on guard and pray. March 6, 1954.

'I Believe Everything Bad About You,' M'Carthy Told

STAMFORD, Ct., March 6 (AP)—A prominent industrialist said today he believes what former Sen. William Benton said about Sen. McCarthy (R) Wis., and is willing to say so on the witness stand.

McCarthy yesterday withdrew a $2,000,000 libel suit against Benton, a Connecticut Democrat. He explained that his lawyers had told him he could not prove damages because they could not find anyone who believed the Benton statements that McCarthy was guilty of perjury, fraud and calculated deceit on the American people.

Today, Walter H. Wheeler Jr., president of Pitney-Bowes, Inc., and former president of the New England Council, a private development organization, made public this telegram he sent McCarthy:

"The New York Times this morning reports you as stating you are withdrawing your $2,000,000 libel suit against ex-Sen. Benton because your lawyers had been unable to find anywhere in the United States anyone who would testify that he believed anything Mr. Benton had said.

"Your lawyers could not have looked very hard. I would be glad to testify for you that I believe what Sen. Benton has said about you and I am sure there are many millions of others in this country who would be happy to do likewise."

either, as I will kill your loved ones and turn myself in.

"I want 500 10s and 250 20s. Wrap the bills in newspaper and tie it good."

Caspers was instructed to run an ad yesterday in the personal column of the Pasadena paper saying:

"John, please contact me." He was to sign it M. V. P.

The ad appeared and at 9 last night Caspers received a telephone call telling him to leave the money in a package at a big tree at Terrace Drive and Green St. by 10 o'clock.

With the help of deputy sheriffs, Caspers prepared a package containing some money wrapped on the outside of stacks of paper.

The package, marked with fluorescent powder, was left at the base of the tree, as ordered, and a patient watch by six detectives began.

About 1:30 this morning, Mrs. Heath, dressed in a pink housecoat, approached the tree and picked up the packet. As detectives followed her, she disappeared between a couple of buildings.

They began a house-to-house search and finally apprehended the couple at their home at 2 a.m.

The tree is less than a half block from the Heath house and three blocks from the Colorado St.-Orange Grove Ave. intersection known to Rose Parade viewers.

Utterly dejected, the couple told deputy sheriffs today they sent the note because their three children and Mrs. Heath are ill, the family is in debt and Heath is jobless.

"It was a crazy idea," said Mrs. Heath. "We were so much in debt. There didn't seem to be any other hope."

Their bewildered youngsters, Larry Thomas, 4½; David Carl, 3, and Connie, 4 months, were taken to Juvenile Hall.

Despite the ordeal of waiting out the climax of the plot that threatened their lives, Mrs. Caspar told The Mirror she pitied the couple.

Young Boy Sees Grandmother Wounded; Neighborhood in Terror

BY PAUL ETTER AND ROBY HEARD

Fifteen years of smoldering resentment exploded into violence late last night as a middle-aged Bell couple dueled with guns in their home.

Wounded critically in the crossfire—exchanged as her 11-year-old grandson cowered in terror in a bedroom closet—was Mrs. Dollie Wiles, 54, who had filed for divorce only yesterday.

Booked on suspicion of assault with intent to commit murder was Burges Clyde Wiles, 58-year-old gas meter reader.

Five policemen subdued and captured Wiles as he struggled with his wounded wife—apparently trying to choke her—in their bedroom.

The wild shooting spree, plunging a quiet neighborhood into terror, occurred at 11:35 p.m. in the one-story frame cottage at 6900 Sherman Way, Bell.

Police said Wiles fired at least seven times at close range with a 12-gauge shotgun. Mrs. Wiles, officers said, shot six times with a 32-caliber revolver.

A horrified witness to the gun battle was Vivian Brown, 30, daughter of Mrs. Wiles by a previous marriage, who sank to the floor of the bedroom as bullets fired by Wiles whizzed through the home.

Suffering from shock and given sedatives at the Bell hospital, Miss Brown said trouble began shortly after she and her mother returned home at 10:30 p.m. from a movie with her nephew, Frank Brown, 11.

"My stepfather, who had been drinking, was waiting for us in the living room — angry and snarling because we had gone out," Miss Brown told Chief Dep. Dist. Atty. Adolph Alexander.

"Trying to ignore him and avoid trouble, we all went into the bedroom. He turned on the television as loud as he could just to annoy us.

"Finally my mother declared, 'I'm not afraid of him, I'm going in and make him turn the TV off.'"

Picking up an antiquated Smith and Wesson 32-caliber, five-shot revolver she had hidden in the bedroom, Mrs. Wiles approached her husband who had armed himself with the shotgun he kept in the garage.

Her stepfather cut the telephone wires, Miss Brown said, and an argument broke out.

"Aiming the shotgun at my mother, my stepfather forced her back into the bedroom, step by step. She slammed the door — and the fireworks started.

"My stepfather ran out of the house and began firing at us through the bedroom window. I fell to the floor but finally crawled into the closet where little Frank was hiding.

"Later, after firing about four times through the window, my stepfather walked back into the living room, reloaded the gun and began firing again through the bedroom door.

"Mother, who had never fired a gun before in her life, was shooting at the same time.

Suddenly Wiles burst through the shattered living room door and lunged at his wife as she cringed in helpless terror on the bed.

That was the scene that greeted five Bell policemen—summoned by neighbors — as they burst into the room.

Puerto Rico Raids Nab Boss, Aides

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, March 6 (AP)—Police seized Pedro Albizu Campos, chief of Puerto Rico's Nationalist Party, and five of his aides in a blazing two-hour battle of guns and home-made bombs today.

Gov. Luis Munoz Marin made plain the crackdown on the fanatical National Party was the result of the shooting of five U.S. Congressmen by Natoinalists in Washington last Monday.

He pledged all out effort to "stamp out this poisonous snake in our midst."

The Governor issued orders to police to arrest 38 Nationalist Party leaders. Within five hours, 36, including the 62-year-old Albizu and five women, were under arrest. Among the women was Doris Torresola, a party secretary. Her brother, Griselio Torresola, was killed by Secret Service police when the Nationalists tried to assassinate President Truman in Washington in 1950.

Air Crash Heroine to Marry

SANTA ANA, March 6 (AP) Miss Patricia Grivna, heroine hostess, will be married tonight in Capilla de San Antonio, six months after a plane crash in which her coolness helped save 26 persons.

Showing no evidence of the burns she suffered, she will walk down the aisle to become the bride of Raymond M. Cheseldine Jr. of Fullerton.

Miss Grivna's grit was credited with saving 26 passengers, including three babies, when a Northwest Airlines plane crash-landed at McChord Air Force Base minutes after taking off from Seattle.

That good-looking channel eleven!

Good evening.

In a strong statement obviously aimed at Senator McCarthy, President Eisenhower has slapped at the disregard of fair play in Congressional investigations.

The President told his news conference no one in the armed services is required to submit to any kind of personal humiliation before an investigating committee.

A short time later, McCarthy said he will keep right on running investigations the way HE wants to.

He said: "If a stupid, arrogant, or witless man in a position of power, appears before our Committee, and is found aiding the Communist Party, he will be exposed.

"The fact that he might be a General, places him in no special class so far as I am concerned."

Eisenhower stated: "In opposing Communism, we are defeating ourselves if, either by design or through carelessness, we use methods that do not conform to the American sense of justice and fair play."

I will discuss this situation in just a few moments.

President Eisenhower has taken a public stand which should leave nobody in doubt about what he thinks of Senator McCarthy's methods.

The Chief Executive's press conference statement is his most forthright comment yet on McCarthy. Developments of the past week had made it imperative for him to speak, and he has done so in a typically balanced manner.

He avoided mentioning the Senator by name, this in accord with his previous statements that he would not engage in name-calling.

How will McCarthy re-act? Will he ~~meekly~~ accept the rebuke and follow the principles of fair play that Ike urged in his investigations? I doubt it.

The Republican Party must take positive action to control the rambunctious, headline-hunting Senator. He has shown no evidence of intending to do this on his own accord.

Ike's statement marks a turning point in GOP affairs. It hardens even further the lines of cleavage within the party.

The way the Republicans have been acting recently, you'd think they had set out to lose next November's election intentionally.

Seldom have we seen a ruling party so bogged down in bickering, cross-purposes, contrariness and just plain short-sighted operations. The GOP performance on Capitol Hill during the past month has been sad, indeed.

It seems that if there is any possible way to lose an election, the Republicans will try to find it. Too many GOP leaders forget that Eisenhower and many members of the Congress were elected, not only by the Republicans, but by a considerable number of fine Democrats and a large group of independents.

If the Party really wants to win the next election, UNITY must be achieved -- and quickly!

After 20 years out of power, at last the Republicans ~~take~~ took over the government behind a highly popular, gifted leader. Following months of preparation, he laid before Congress a very comprehensive, middle-of-the-road legislative program.[1:30] A charter of progressive Republicanism, in step with the times and with the national mood.

So what has the Republican-controlled Congress been doing with it? Hardly anything.

Instead of plunging into the program, the Senate got itself all snarled up in a fruitless quarrel over the Bricker amendment to limit the President's treaty-making powers. Day after day the Republicans bickered. They tied themselves in such legal knots that it took the combined efforts of all the Capitol's parliamentary experts to keep them in operation at all.

Finally the much-amended amendment lost, and passed into oblivion, at least for this year.

Far from being part of the President's program, the Bricker Bill was actually opposed by the White House. No wonder the Democrats in the Senate have been chortling to themselves. When some Republicans accused them of stalling on Ike's program, Senator Lyndon Johnson, the Democratic leader, very appropriately pointed out that it was the GOP themselves who brought up the Bricker amendment.

Far more dangerous from the party's standpoint, but fundamentally 2:30 springing from the same intra-party split, is the feud between McCarthy and Army Secretary Stevens.

The Army Secretary rightly got fed up with the unbearably rude way in which McCarthy browbeat a General in a closed hearing. He challenged the Senator to open debate, to the cheers of many other administration Republicans who have had a stomach-full of McCarthy's high-handed, arbitrary methods.

But the wheels within wheels turned, and a backstage truce was signed. There was no showdown. Once again McCarthy's open challenge to his own party's leadership was not met. Stevens came off second best in the encounter, through no fault of his own, and obviously is very disgruntled about it.

So are many other Republicans who think the moment has been much overdue, to cut McCarthy down to size. Eisenhower's statement is a long step in that direction.

We have been watching the spectacle of a man bidding for power, EVEN at the expense of TURNING ~~his own party~~ AMERICANS AGAINST AMERICANS. Many of his GOP colleagues are angry, embarrassed and alarmed by what's happening. But they have been hesitating to make an open break with the McCarthy wing of the party, ~~hesitating~~ because they are afraid it would give the Democrats a campaign issue.

They needn't worry about that - - McCarthy and his crowd are giving the Democrats plenty of issue, right on a platter.

I look for the Democrats to open fire soon - - and vigorously - - on the McCarthy issue.

~~Another, lesser fight - - again part of the same deep cleavage within the party - - was the firing of Clarence Manion as Chairman of the Inter-Governmental Operations Commission.~~ in their books he isn't a true blue Republican. McCarthy has been their rallying point in his not-very-veiled challenge of Eisenhower. Their eyes are still fixed on the past, not the present and future. They fail to recognize that this country, in common with the rest of the world, has undergone tremendous changes in the past 25 years.

The truth is that many old-line Republicans, -- especially in the Mid-West -- still don't like the idea of Dwight Eisenhower in the White House.

In their own minds, they reject all the changes from 1932 on because they were put over by the Democrats. The Eisenhower branch of the GOP takes the viewpoint, "let's accept the good in that program, and halt and undo the excesses."

I see little hope of a reconciliation between the far right wing and the rest of the Republican Party. The tension is getting worse.

Entirely too much lip-service has been paid to the Eisenhower administration recently, and far too little actual support.

Unless the GOP does something to untangle itself very soon, it will be in severe trouble next November.

My News Personality tonight comes from that fabulous world of show business. In fact, he's the man who wrote the song "There's No Business Like Show Business." Wrote it because he believes it.

He is Irving Berlin. By far the greatest of our American popular song writers, a man who has kept us singing and humming for decades.

The bouncy little grandfather, now 65, is about to burst forth with a new flurry of songs. We may all be whistling them soon. He's hard at work in Hollywood on two musical movies 30 built around songs of his - - "White Christmas" and the famous Show Business lyric.

He's still full of pep, ideas - - and an amazing knack for catching the public's fancy with his tunes.

After composing more than 8-hundred pieces, his well of ideas hasn't run dry yet. Remember some of his classics?

"In her Easter bonnet, with all the frills upon it,
She'll be the finest lady in the Easter Parade."

Or: "All alone, by the telephone. . . ."

And: "Blue skies, smiling at me. . . ."

1.00

Hundreds of others, too. Lines and tunes that linger. For unlike many less tunesmiths, Irving Berlin writes both the music and lyrics.

Right now he's wating to see how the public re-acts to some new ones coming up in the film "White Christmas."

Four in particular have a chance of becoming hits, he thinks. Make a mental note of the titles in your future book. "Snow, "Count Your Blessings Instead of Sheep," "Love, You Didn't Do Right By Me," and "The Best Things Happen While You Dance."

What makes a song click? If any man should know, it's Berlin. But he says he doesn't.

"You try to figure out why such-and-such a song was a hit or not, and you can't," he says. "No matter what a professional writer tells you, someone else is likely to come out and prove just the opposite."

His advice to beginning song writers is simple - - learn all the rules, and then forget about them.

He comments: "Today, with all the outlets for playing and listening, they'll get a very quick decision from the public."

Of course, first a beginner has to get a decision from a publisher to gamble the money on putting out his song.

As in any business, Berlin goes on, a song-writer develops tricks and a style. The beginner lacks these, so has to get by on his basic ideas.

The dean of composers adds: "A professional - - if he's good - - doesn't sit down with the thought, 'I'm gonna knock out a hit.' If he does, if he gets too careful, he's in trouble."

What Berlin is saying is that success in this uncertain business depends 2:30 upon a combination of ideas and style - - plus a "feel" for public taste.

He's been sampling that taste for a whole half-century. His first song, 50 years ago, was "Marie From Sunny Italy." Anybody remember it? I don't.

With the money he earned from it, he bought his mother a fancy rocking chair.

Many of Berlin's hits have been written on a trick piano. Able to play only in the key of F-sharp, he found an ancient piano which had a trick lever that would mechanically transpose 3:50 the melody into any other key. So all he had to do was keep playing in F-sharp and shift the lever into whatever key he desired.

He even took the piano to Europe with him several times as part of his regular luggage.

Irving Berlin is one of the many entertainers who came up to fame from the poverty of New York's East Side. He was born Izzy Baline, the son of a Cantor, in Russia. The family came to New York when he was only four, and was quite hard up. When he was eight his father died.

The boy roamed the Bowery and the wharves, selling papers. In his early teens, he was a singing waiter in a saloon, learned the piano and took a stab at songwriting. Eventually he drifted into Tin Pan Alley, and began to turn out hits. "Alexander's Ragtime Band" got him firmly established.

In the First World War, he was a sargeant, and produced the famous soldier's revue, "Yip, Yip Yaphank." In it was the unforgettable "Oh How I Hate to Get Up in The Morning." H.80

When the Second World War rolled around, Berlin got out his faded old uniform. It fit perfectly on his still wiry little frame. He then put together the notable wartime revue, "This Is The Army" in which he personally appeared to sing one number. "Oh How I Hate to Get Up in The Morning," of course.

The sentimental, rather shy songwriter has had quite an unusual and explosive romance of his own. In 1926, he married a socialite, Ellin Mackay, despite the furious protests of her father, the president of the Postal Telegraph H.30 Company.

The marriage was Page One news - - and very much a success. The happy couple had three daughters.

Berlin has always been ardently patriotic. At times he has turned over proceeds from his songs to such organizations as the Boy Scouts, Red Cross, and military relief organizations.

His "God Bless America" has become one of our most-sung patriotic melodies. Actually, he wrote it during the first war, but it wasn't published until 24 years later.

Irving Berlin is one of those men with a peculiar genius, hard to define, for catching the public's mood. He has added greatly to our pleasure for many years. It's nice to report that he's still going strong.

Salute to a Brave Man

At the very end of his "See It Now" program which was devoted entirely to Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, Edward R. Murrow looked straight in the eye of his audience and delivered an editorial which was, in essence, a severe and searching criticism of his own listeners—or at least some of them.

John Crosby

Now it takes great courage to attack Sen. McCarthy in the first place (though why every one is so afraid of that bumbler I can't imagine), but it takes far greater courage to look you and me in the face and say it's our fault. But he put his finger squarely on the root of the true evil of McCarthyism, which is its corrosive effects on the souls of hitherto honest men.

"This is no time for men who oppose Sen. McCarthy's methods to keep silent. Or for those who approve. We can deny our heritage and our history—but we cannot escape responsibility for the result. There is no way for a citizen of the republic to abdicate his responsibilities. As a nation we have come into our full inheritance at an early age. We proclaim ourselves—as indeed we are—the defenders of the free world, what's left of it.

"We cannot defend freedom abroad by deserting it at home. The actions of the junior Senator from Wisconsin have caused alarm and dismay among our allies abroad and given comfort to our enemies. And whose fault is that? Not really his. He didn't create the situation of fear, merely exploited it, and skillfully. Cassius was right. 'The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars but in ourselves.' "

Right there television came of age. At least I can never recall any other time when a network—and Ed Murrow is a director as well as one of the chief spokesmen for the Columbia Broadcasting System—has told its listeners to straighten up and act like free men with the clear implication that they are not now doing so.

It was a great program in every sense that a program can be great, including plain ordinary showmanship. In tackling McCarthy, Murrow took on the most explosive and controversial guy in the country. He did it without even a pretense of impartiality. "If the Senator thinks we do violence to him, he can come on this program and answer," said Murrow—and then proceeded to do great violence to him.

McCarthy was shown as a liar, telling a witness that the American Civil Liberties Union is a Communist-front organization, which it certainly is not. (I heard the original broadcast of that statement, and I thought I wasn't hearing right.) McCarthy was shown as a teller of meaningless half truths. (McCarthy once tried to link Adlai Stevenson with Alger Hiss because Hiss had recommended Stevenson to attend the Mont Tremblant conference. Murrow pointed out that Hiss recommended some one from the office of either Stimson or Knox, two stalwart Republicans, and Stevenson was Knox's special assistant.)

McCarthy was shown telling newsmen that he was being attacked (after the Zwicker incident) only by "the extreme Left-Wing press" and radio commentators. Murrow then read excerpts from this "extreme Left-Wing press," which included the New York Herald Tribune, "The New York Times," "The Chicago Tribune" and "The St. Louis Post-Dispatch."

But the greatest witness against McCarthy was McCarthy himself. Sneering, truculent and wholly evil, he rumbled his evasions and hesitations and lies (the boys in the business call him Mr. Mumbles) in a way that must have been a little shocking even to staunch McCarthyites. A couple of times he was caught huffing and chuckling in a way that sounded as if he were just a little nutty.

McCarthy, of course, is following the Hitler technique. Hitler invented the Jewish problem in Germany. (The Jews were traitors, too, remember?) There is a Communist problem, all right, but the main problem lies outside the country, not inside it. Dividing the country, making Americans distrust other Americans, weakening our alliances and ruining the effectiveness of our State Department and our Army are hardly effective ways of combating Communism.

But I doubt that McCarthy will have Hitler's success. The difference is simply that Germany was a defeated country and a broke country. The United States is neither defeated nor broke, and, if you have faith in your countrymen—and Murrow obviously has—you can lick McCarthy by telling the people what a complete phony he is.

At this writing the response from the viewers is overwhelmingly anti-McCarthy, which only goes to show—as Abraham Lincoln once said—you can't fool all the people all of the time.

MATTER OF FACT

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP

McCarthy on the Run

WASHINGTON.

There is no longer any doubt about it. Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy is in very bad trouble indeed. Moreover, he knows it. McCarthy and his partisans are now making desperate efforts to negotiate some sort of deal in order to head off the forthcoming hearings on McCarthy's battle with the Army.

Last week, for example, Richard Berlin, a powerful executive in the Hearst newspaper chain, came to Washington on a special mission. Berlin is one of the original McCarthy backers, and he sponsored Roy Cohn as counsel of the McCarthy Committee. At a carefully pre-arranged dinner party, Berlin and McCarthy were brought together with Brig. Gen. A. J. Drexel Biddle, who is personally close to both Gen. Matthew Ridgway and Secretary of the Army Robert Stevens.

The pitch was made over the brandy and cigars. Surely, Berlin said, some reasonable way out of the mess could be found. Perhaps both Cohn and Army Counsel John Adams could be fired, and the matter then dropped. Or perhaps an arbitrator of national stature could be found, to adjudicate the whole matter privately. McCarthy said that this would be "O. K. with him." But Biddle, apparently, did not rise to the fly.

Other attempts to work out a deal have also failed so far but they still go on. Since the Berlin visit, there have been hints that Cohn might be fired, and that McCarthy would not even insist that the Army fire Adams in exchange, if only the whole affair could be buried. There have also been not very veiled threats to the effect that there is plenty of material in the McCarthy files to ruin certain highly placed Defense Department officials, if the Administration "really wants to play rough."

At the same time, an attempt to divorce McCarthy completely from the whole affair is also going forward. McCarthy himself always refers to the "Cohn-Adams hassle," and airily implies that he has nothing to do with this minor mixup. He says that he has "nothing against Bob Stevens or any one else in the Administration," the whole business is just trouble-making by "left-wingers." This line is being dutifully parroted by all those who still find it the better part of wisdom to sing whatever tune McCarthy calls.

Yet it is difficult to believe that any one will be fooled. McCarthy has in effect called Stevens a) a liar, b) a blackmailer, and c) so contemptible a poltroon as to offer to supply "dirt" on the other services in order to buy immunity for himself. Stevens, a naive but honorable man, is not so naive as to believe that all this is in the spirit of good clean fun. "This time," he has told friends, "I'm in it to the end."

This time, moreover, the whole Administration has its guard up. The most careful preparation has been made for the forthcoming contest. Complete substantiation has been found for everything in the Army report on the McCarthy-Cohn matter. For example, according to the report, McCarthy told Adams and Stevens that David Schine was a "pest" and a "nuisance," and then hastily asked them not to repeat these views to Cohn. At least two other individuals, who have precisely the same experience with McCarthy ("but for God's sakes don't tell Roy Cohn") have been found, and are available to testify.

The Administration forces thus believe that McCarthy cannot seriously shake the Army's story. They also believe that the McCarthy story can be shaken and shaken hard — there are even serious internal contradictions in the memoranda so hastily released by McCarthy. Moreover, the Administration has weapons in reserve.

As previously reported here, some very damning material was not included in the Army report. What is more, the Army has compiled another report, described as "devastating," on the effects on morale at Ft. Dix of the special favors for Schine demanded by Cohn and McCarthy.

All in all, it is not surprising that McCarthy and company are eager to come to terms. It is not impossible, of course, that the still numerous McCarthy appeasers in the Administration will agree to make a deal with McCarthy, "in the interests of party harmony." But, at least, the opportunity does now clearly exist to restore sanity to the country by defeating once and for all McCarthy's bid to seize control of the Republican party.

The final outcome, of course, depends on one man, as it always has. Here it may be worth recounting an incident which occurred during a recent correspondents' dinner in Washington. Television broadcaster Ed Murrow suddenly felt a strong hand on his back. He turned to recognize a familiar grin.

"Hello, Ed," said the President, "I was just feeling your back to see if there were any knives sticking in it." The reference was obviously to Murrow's brilliant broadcast on McCarthy. Both men laughed, and then Murrow said, "From here on out, it's up to you, Mr. President." No truer word was ever spoken. With McCarthy on the run, the President has a golden opportunity to show once and for all who is the real leader of the Republican party, and of the United States.

THE NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REVIEW

AS A NEW McCARTHY CONTROVERSY ROCKS WASHINGTON—THE 'UNDERSTANDING' ON CAPITOL HILL

The New York Times (by George Tames)

Reporters and cameramen with Secretary Stevens (center), Senator Dirksen and Senator McCarthy (extreme right) after "Memorandum of Understanding" was read.

Tumultuous Issue

McCarthy vs. Eisenhower

Four years and nineteen days ago the junior U. S. Senator from Wisconsin—a former judge and Marine veteran, then a relatively obscure figure on Capitol Hill—stood before a Republican audience in Wheeling, W. Va. Joseph R. McCarthy said: "* * * I have here in my hands a list of 205 [the Senator in his book has since said he used the figure fifty-seven]—a list of names that were made known to the Secretary of State as being members of the Communist Party and who nevertheless are still working and shaping policy in the State Department."

The Wheeling speech opened one of the most extraordinary chapters in U. S. political history. In the years since, the very name McCarthy has come to symbolize an issue of great force. The Senator has charged the Democratic Administrations with a record of "twenty years of treason." Now armed with broad investigating power in a Republican Congress, he has challenged the fronts, contending that it needs prodding to get Communists out of Government.

The McCarthy question has deeply divided and enflamed American opinion. On the one hand are those who cheer the Senator on with the cry that "McCarthy knows how to handle these Reds." On the other hand are those who deplore him as a demagogue who is imperiling American liberties.

Dispute Over Dentist

Last week Washington rocked with the most tumultuous controversy so far between Senator McCarthy and the Eisenhower Administration. The controversy grew out of a relatively narrow question—why the Army allowed a dental officer, whom it suspected of being a Communist, to leave the service with an honorable discharge. It gathered heat rapidly the week before last when the Senator scathingly rebuked Army personnel involved, and Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens moved for a showdown on the question of Executive versus Legislative authority.

At the beginning of last week Mr. Stevens seemed to be looking forward to the showdown with confidence. Then something happened. There were reports that Republican professionals were cautioning against the effect of an open row in the party in an election year. In midweek, the Secretary and the Senator came to what was called an "understanding." But its terms were widely interpreted as a "surrender," and a wave of shock went across the nation. The intensity of the reaction set in motion efforts in the White House and on the Hill to salvage the Secretary's position. Thursday he issued a statement claiming that he had not yielded, and President Eisenhower backed him up "100 per cent." But Senator McCarthy stuck to his guns also.

Thus at the week-end it appeared that a battle had been fought but the war would go on. In Congress Republican leaders talked of restraints on the Senator's investigative tactics. There were doubts that the party professionals, who have regarded Mr. McCarthy as a campaign asset, would be eager to curb him seriously. But at the same time the feeling was that the President would now be under pressure to draw a firmer line on Mr. McCarthy's incursions into the fields of Executive authority and Presidential leadership. In the apparent hope of giving full play to these conflicting forces within the G. O. P. most Democrats, all during last week's furor, were conspicuously silent.

The Setting

These are the facts in the case that led to the McCarthy-Army controversy last week:

In October, 1952, Dr. Irving Peress, a dentist from Queens in New York City, was notified he would be drafted under the medical draft law. He applied for and got a reserve commission as a captain. On Oct. 28 he was given a standard questionnaire on, among other things, his loyalty. In the space provided for answers on loyalty he claimed the privilege under the Fifth Amendment of refusing to answer. Army regulations did not then require complete answers.

On Jan. 3, 1953, Peress was called to active duty. A month later his refusals to answer were noted and the Army started a loyalty investigation as required by Army regulations. In June, 1953, as a result of the investigation, the Commandant at Camp Kilmer, N. J., where Peress was stationed, recommended that he be dismissed. The Army says that, in accordance with procedure, the case was referred to the Army personnel board, which notified Peress of the evidence against him and invited his reply. Many weeks passed in the interchange of communications. When Peress again cited the Fifth Amendment, the Army studied what to do next. In a separate action in October, 1953, Peress was promoted to major under automatic provisions of the law requiring advancement of medical men according to age and professional experience.

On Dec. 3, the McCarthy committee opened an investigation of Peress. On Dec. 30, the Army decided to discharge him. On Jan. 18 orders were sent to Peress' Kilmer commandant—now Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker—for his honorable discharge at his own pleasure within ninety days.

On Jan. 30, Senator McCarthy questioned Peress at a hearing in New York. Peress refused to answer most questions, citing the Fifth Amendment. The Senator demanded that Peress be held in the Army for court-martial. On Feb. 2, at Peress' own request, he was honorably discharged.

The discharge incensed Mr. McCarthy. He wrote Secretary Stevens demanding that the officers involved in the Peress promotion and discharge be investigated for possible court-martial. Mr. Stevens conceded that the Peress case had revealed defects in Army procedure, promised vigorous action if an inquiry disclosed anything irregular in the promotion and discharge, but argued that there had been no grounds for a court-martial of Peress. The Senator termed the answer "double-talk" and called a new hearing ten days ago.

Holds Secret Session

After wrangling with other Army officials, the Senator questioned General Zwicker in secret session. The record of that session was made public last Monday. It showed that the Senator hammered at the general on the questions of why Peress was honorably discharged and who ordered it, that the general replied repeatedly that he had to obey orders and was forbidden, under a Presidential directive, dating back to the Truman Administration, to reveal details of loyalty investigations. The Senator's tone grew sharp. Among the things he said to General Zwicker were:

> General, let's try and be truthful. * * * I cannot help but question either your honesty or your intelligence. * * * Don't you give me that double-talk. * * * Anyone with the brains of a five-year-old child can understand that question. * * * Any [general] who says, 'I will protect another general who protected Communists' is not fit to wear that uniform * * *.

The Senator wound up by ordering General Zwicker and the Adjutant General to appear the following Tuesday. But when word of the Zwicker questioning reached Mr. Stevens, he reacted sharply. He ordered the two officers not to appear Tuesday and said he would testify himself.

Out of the Peress case there had now emerged two main issues and two conflicting points of view. In the McCarthy view the main issue was why Peress was promoted and then honorably discharged despite the fact that the Army for many months had evidence that he was a Communist. The Senator insisted on the right of a Congressional committee to get all the facts.

The Army view was that the main issue was the Senator's tactics in "abusing" and "humiliating" a loyal officer and pillorying him and other officials for carrying out their orders. As to Peress, the Army contended that honorable discharge was the quickest way to get him out of the service. At the same time, Army officials acknowledged privately that the Peress case "looked bad" and was hard to defend—regulations or no regulations.

The Big Week

Thus was the stage set for what was widely billed as "The Showdown" between Senator McCarthy and the Administration. This was the tumultuous week:

SUNDAY

At the White House (the President was still on his golfing holiday in California) the staff was reported to be worried. There was little zest for the approaching battle. A New York Times correspondent sent this description of White House thinking:

"Stevens, of course, would want to talk about Zwicker. But McCarthy was going to talk about Peress, and being chairman, he would ask the questions, and the Secretary would have to answer them. By the time another Senator got a chance to ask about Zwicker, TV time would have been dominated by the Peress discussion."

On the Hill, Republicans were equally worried. They did not relish a public Republican brawl over communism—the issue that was to be used against Democrats. Thus there was growing feeling at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue that perhaps a compromise could be found.

MONDAY

At a Washington Birthday celebration at Valley Forge, Senator Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, a member of the McCarthy committee, talked with Secretary Stevens on a possible patch-up. In Washington, Senator Everett M. Dirksen, another committee member, with the same idea in mind, asked Senator McCarthy to postpone the Stevens hearing until Thursday. Senator McCarthy was willing. He had another iron heating. He summoned Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, an Army employe.

TUESDAY

Mrs. Mary Markward, a former F. B. I. under-cover agent, told the McCarthy subcommittee that an Annie Lee Moss had been on Communist party lists until 1945. Senator McCarthy said that Mrs. Moss was employed as a "code clerk" in the Army message center in the Pentagon, and decoded "top secret" messages. The Army said that Mrs. Moss was merely a "relay machine operator" who fed perforated tape from receiving to transmitting machines; that the coded messages on the tape were unclassified, and that Mrs. Moss had no access to codes or the cryptograph room.

The Moss case gave added impetus to the feeling among Republicans that the McCarthy-Stevens bout should be canceled. According to reports, White House officials, in talking to Mr. Stevens, conveyed the impression that an accommodation should be sought, but there was no suggestion that he yield on principle. In any event, a luncheon was arranged with the Republican members of the committee for Wednesday. The three Democratic members were not invited.

WEDNESDAY

Just before noon Secretary Stevens met with H. Struve Hensel, Defense Department General Counsel, for a run-through on the questions Senator McCarthy would likely fire at the Secretary the next day. When he left, Mr. Stevens said nothing about his upcoming luncheon.

The luncheon—fried chicken—was held in the Capitol Hill office of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee. All the Republican members of the subcommittee were present—Senators McCarthy, Mundt, Dirksen, and Charles E. Potter of Michigan. The meeting lasted two hours.

The Senators, it was reported later, put tremendous heat on Mr. Stevens. According to accounts by his friends, the Senators told him that a public row would jeopardize the party's chances in November, that it would fuzz up the Communist issue, and that he owed it to the party to retreat.

For his part, Mr. Stevens was reported to have asked assurances that Army witnesses would not be mistreated in the future. He later insisted these assurances were given. Two of the Senators supported his account. Senator McCarthy denied that he made any promise.

At 2:55 the doors were opened. Reporters and photographers poured in. Mr. Stevens was poker-faced. Senator McCarthy sat beside him, all smiles. Mr. Mundt read a "Memorandum of Understanding." It was short—only five paragraphs. It made no mention of treatment of witnesses or other concessions. This was the critical paragraph:

> There is complete agreement * * * that the Secretary of the Army will order the Inspector General to complete the investigation * * * in the Peress case as rapidly as possible; and he will give the committee the names of everyone involved in the promotion and honorable discharge of Peress; and that such individuals will be available to appear before the committee.

When Mr. Stevens returned to the Pentagon, he found Roger M. Kyes, Under Secretary of Defense, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, and H. Struve Heusel in his office. He told them he had got what he went for—a promise of fair treatment. General Ridgway shook his hand warmly. The meeting disbanded. But soon after, one of the officials secured the text of the memorandum. Another meeting was called—without Mr. Stevens. It was agreed that the Secretary was in trouble.

Mr. Stevens did not have to wait long to taste the ashes. It was reported to him that Senator McCarthy had told a reporter that Mr. Stevens could not have surrendered "more abjectly if he had got down on his knees." Then the late editions of the afternoon papers hit the streets. Across the nation, the headline verbs were: "SURRENDERS," "CAPITULATES," "RETREATS."

Mr. Stevens was reported "steaming mad" at the press interpretation. He contended that there had been no surrender. He leaked a statement which he had intended to read at the hearing. It said: "I am here today to defend an officer of the United States Army * * * who was humiliated at a hearing before this committee * * *. I feel that the integrity of the entire Army is involved."

On Wednesday night Mr. Stevens called James C. Hagerty, the White House Press Secretary for guidance. He also called several Senators. They told reporters later that he was sobbing, and said he would have to resign because he had "lost standing" at the Pentagon.

THURSDAY

Overnight things had come to a boil. The New York Times headline read: "STEVENS BOWS TO M'CARTHY." Across the country, editorials were protesting the "surrender" in angry words. The Administration had made "a public display of the white feather" (Los Angeles Daily News). It had ordered an "ignominious retreat" (Nashville Tennessean). The "disgraceful cave-in" was not Secretary Steven's responsibility alone—"It goes back to the President" (Washington Post). "[McCarthy's] assault * * * was a supreme test of the ability of men in high office to meet a threat which in other parts of the world has been fatal to liberty itself. They have failed to meet that test" (New York Herald Tribune). Even the pro-McCarthy Chicago Tribune rebuked the Senator: "It seems to us that Sen. McCarthy will better serve his cause if he learns to distinguish the role of investigator from the role of avenging angel."

And the wits of Washington were up early. One said: "The Secretary didn't mean to surrender to the Senators; he merely thought they wanted to look at his sword." An old Western gag was revived—"Then inserting our nose between his teeth, we had him."

The feeling of the Army was vividly portrayed by the remark of a senior staff officer at the Pentagon: "Private David Schine is the only man in the Army today with any morale." (Private Schine, until drafted, was on the McCarthy committee staff.)

Plainly something had to be done to offset the reaction. But the White House staff still hoped to keep the President aloof from the fray. At Vice President Nixon's suggestion, it was reported, President Eisenhower sent for Senator Dirksen. A draft of a statement was given to the Senator. It made the points that Mr. Stevens had not surrendered and that the committee would give assurances that witnesses were to be treated with respect henceforth. The President asked Mr. Dirksen's help in getting the four Republican members to issue the statement.

Mr. Dirksen went back to the Hill. All day the Senators fussed over the language of the statement while the White House waited. Senator McCarthy objected to any language intimating that witnesses had been abused. Finally they agreed.

About 4 P. M. Vice President Nixon brought the Senators' amended version to the White House. A conference was assembled in the East Wing. Present were the Vice President, Mr. Kyes, Mr. Stevens, Sherman Adams, White House chief of staff, and several other Pentagon and White House officials. The President, who often finds release from tension in exercise, was practicing chip shots on the South Lawn.

The Senators' statement was not acceptable to Mr. Stevens. At 5:30 the meeting broke up. A smaller group then met for thirty minutes with the President in the second floor study. It was decided that Mr. Stevens should issue his own statement. He also carried his point—which he had been fighting for since the night before—that he must have the President's full support. A statement was drawn up. The President approved it.

In Hagerty's Office

At 6:15, reporters were admitted to Mr. Hagerty's office. Mr. Kyes, who as late as that afternoon, was reported as saying that Mr. Stevens had no other course but to resign, was standing beside the Army Secretary. Mr. Stevens began reading in a steady voice:

> I did not at that meeting [recede] * * * from any of the principles upon which I stand. * * * I shall never accede to [Army personnel] * * * being browbeaten or humiliated. * * * From assurances which I have received from members of the committee, I am confident they will not permit such conditions to develop in the future.

When Mr. Stevens returned to the Pentagon, his staff applauded him. Mr. Stevens was smiling broadly. He said: "We've certainly got a Commander in Chief. He stepped right up and hit a home run."

Up on the Hill, Senator McCarthy said Mr. Stevens had made a "completely false statement" about the assurances. He denied there had been any abuse. But, he said, he had made it clear to Mr. Stevens that if witnesses "are not frank and truthful * * * they will be examined vigorously to get the truth."

Now the issue was joined.

FRIDAY

Republicans began moving in behind the President. Senators Mundt and Potter said Mr. Stevens rightly claimed that assurances had been given against the abuse of witnesses. A meeting of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, hastily summoned by Chairman Homer Ferguson, unanimously voted a study of the rules for investigating committees. Republicans made no secret of the fact that the study had grown out of the latest McCarthy fracas and was aimed at curbing one-man inquiries.

Senator McCarthy himself mixed soft and tough talk. He said: "Eisenhower said he was against browbeating witnesses—I am too." But he said he was going to continue exposing Communists "even if it embarrasses my own party." He had no objection to the rules study. He wanted the Democrats to attend hearings.

SATURDAY

A high Administration source said Secretary Stevens would remain. The attorney of Annie Lee Moss said she had been suspended from her job, pending adjudication. Otherwise all was momentarily quiet on the Potomac.

The Outlook

This was the feeling in Washington after the volley and thunder of the hottest McCarthy-Administration battle had subsided:

The Senator, it was held, had not retreated. He had in fact thrown down a challenge to the Administration and the expectation was that he would put his toe over the line which the Administration had drawn. Therefore, the big question was, would the Administration meet the next challenge?

One school held the Administration must and would meet it because the risks of further concession were too great. It was pointed out that any further retreat would mean that the campaign, regardless of the President's desire to wage it on the Administration's program, would be largely dominated by the Communism-in-Government issue and Senator McCarthy's role as scourge.

The effect on the Republican primaries might be that McCarthy supporters would win over Eisenhower men. And if the Republicans won in the fall—as they well might—the McCarthy following in Congress would be larger than it is now, and the Senator would have a free hand in harrying the Administration.

Risk in Retreat

On the other hand, there was the opposite risk—that another retreat would so put off the independents and "Eisenhower Democrats," that the Republicans would lose. Therefore, this school figured that the Administration, reassured by the editorial reaction last week, would decide that the time had come to move, and would move hard.

The other school, however, held that many of the party professionals were unimpressed by the press reaction. McCarthy supporters might feel that "Joe had gone a little far this time," but they were still behind his campaign. It was further pointed out that many of the Republicans on the Hill were not very keen about the President's program, and with the Democrats preparing to make an issue of the economic decline and taxes, these Republicans would insist on pushing the communism issue to the limit. Thus, it was held, the President would be under great pressure to ignore a challenge.

On one thing, there was agreement. The Democrats were happy to hold the coats for a change.

THE WORLD

U. S. and China Issue

> The American people will not consent to a Far Eastern Munich.
> —Senator WILLIAM F. KNOWLAND.

> We need not, out of fright, lay down the tools of diplomacy. * * * Our cause is not so poor * * * that our nation must seek security by sulking in its tent.
> —Secretary JOHN FOSTER DULLES.

These statements last week by the Senate Majority Leader and the Secretary of State reflected opposing points of view in a long-standing controversy that has welled up again in the aftermath of the Berlin conference of the Big Four. The central issue is the United States policy toward Communist China. In particular it revolves around the Big Four agreement to meet with Communist China in Geneva in April on the problems of the Far East.

In the U. S. the China question has gathered tremendous political force since 1949, when it became plain that communism would sweep over all mainland China. The political heat was generated at first almost entirely by Republicans attacking Democrats. Republicans charged that China was lost because of the Truman Administration's "blunders," or worse, its "softness" toward communism, or worse, "treason" in the Government. The China issue was the springboard from which Senator McCarthy leaped into national prominence.

With the Peiping Government's intervention in the Korean war, and its increased aid to the Vietminh insurgents in Indo-China, the bitterness of feeling against Communist China took a stronger hold on American opinion. The Truman and Eisenhower Administrations in turn took firm positions against concessions to Peiping as the price for Far Eastern settlements—specifically, for example, against Communist China's claim to diplomatic recognition. The policy was, as George C. Marshall first phrased it, that no aggressor should be allowed "to shoot his way into the United Nations."

There has been some difference of opinion, however, over whether this policy might change if Peiping were to come to terms in the Far East. Some Republicans—a group that has come to be called the "China party" in Washington, and which includes Senator Knowland—have scouted any such suggestions as "appeasement." These Republicans have been watching Secretary Dulles warily.

Question of Change

On the other hand, it is argued in some circles that a too-rigid American policy might block any settlements in the Far East and in the long run sour relations among the Western powers. Britain, which has recognized Peiping, is not pressing Washington on the question, but hopes eventually to have normal relations with Communist China, particularly in trade. More immediately, France yearns for an end of the Indo-China war and would be less reluctant than the U. S. to pay Communist China the price of diplomatic recognition.

It was against this background that Secretary Dulles ten days ago in Berlin joined in the agreement to negotiate with Communist China in Geneva on Korea and Indo-China. On his insistence, to which Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov yielded in the final hour of the Berlin meeting, the Big Four communiqué stipulated: "It is understood that [the agreement shall not] be deemed to imply diplomatic recognition in any case where it has not already been accorded."

In Washington last week it was plain that many Congressmen of both parties had serious misgivings about the agreement to meet in Geneva, notwithstanding the Dulles stipulation. There was much head-shaking and talk of possible "slips" in Geneva. Representative Lawrence H. Smith, a Wisconsin Republican, said, "I'm not so sure that we aren't going to be euchered into a position" of being forced to admit Peiping to the U. N. Senators Richard B. Russell and Walter F. George, leading Southern Democrats, spoke respectively on "a foot in the door" and an "entering wedge" for Communist China. The most outspoken criticism was Senator Knowland's, delivered Monday at a Republican dinner in New York. He said:

> The question the American people, as well as the Congress, will want answered is what price is expected to be paid. * * * Throughout the entire Far East the admission of Communist China to the United Nations would be looked upon as a Far Eastern Munich and a great victory for international communism.

Dulles' View

Mr. Dulles replied to these questionings in sessions with leaders of both parties on Monday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee Tuesday, and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday. He pounded the table as he protested to the Senators against criticism of what he regarded as achievements in Berlin. That night, in a radio-TV report to the nation on the Berlin meetings, he dwelt at length on the Far East problem. He said:

> The Communist regime [in China] will not come to Geneva to be honored by us, but rather to account before the bar of world opinion. * * * I recognize, of course, that the Soviet Union would not have accepted, 100 per cent, our terms * * * unless it expected to benefit thereby. But so do we.

Despite Mr. Dulles' reassurances, the general attitude in Congress on the Geneva meeting still was distinctly reserved. There were predictions that both parties will keep a close watch on Geneva for any American "slips." Accordingly, the expectation is that the Administration will be under pressures that may severely test its political and diplomatic skill. Its problem will be to avoid political pitfalls at home—in an election year—while at the same time dealing with the pressures from the other nations of the free world for some progress toward settlements with the Communists.

Europe After Berlin

The controversy stirred by Berlin in the U. S. had a parallel in Europe. The Western foreign ministers came away from Berlin united in the conviction that Russia was unwilling to negotiate for a unified and sovereign Germany. In the absence of such willingness Western policy has been to rearm West Germany through the European Defense Community (E. D. C.) treaty providing for the integration of a West German force with the forces of five other West European countries in a unified command under NATO. In his broadcast last Wednesday Secretary Dulles threw new U. S. support to E. D. C., saying "Berlin cleared the way for * * * the unification and the strengthening of West Europe."

But last week developments in France, West Germany and Britain made it plain that though the Governments in power supported E. D. C. there was still a hard knot of oppostion to the treaty. These were the developments:

In France on Tuesday Foreign Minister Georges Bidault reported to Premier Joseph Laniel and his Cabinet on the Berlin conference. M. Bidault recommended strongly that the E. D. C. treaty, now in the committee stage in the French Assembly, be put to a vote without new delay or conditions. But in the Assembly there were indications of sentiment in all parties for delaying a vote on E. D. C. until the outlook for a truce in Indo-China could be determined at the Geneva meeting.

In West Germany on Friday the Bundestag (lower house of Parliament) wound up a three-day debate by giving the Government, 334—144, the two-thirds majority necessary for amending the Bonn constitution to permit rearmament under E.D.C. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, speaking in favor of the motion, declared that the Berlin conference made it "more than ever necessary * * * that the European Defense Community should become a reality." But the Social Democrats voted against the motion on the ground that E. D. C. would only deepen the division of Germany.

In Britain on Thursday and Friday there was a debate in Commons on the Berlin conference. Foreign Minister Anthony Eden declared himself strongly for E. D. C., saying that its early establishment was "of the utmost importance and urgency." His stand was endorsed by the official leadership of the Labor Opposition under Clement Attlee. But in a Labor caucus on Tuesday Mr. Attlee mustered only 112 votes, against 108 for a dissident faction, rallying under the standard of Aneurin Bevan, which opposes German rearmament and favors new negotiations on Germany with Moscow. And Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill, though standing by E. D. C., gave new grist to the Bevanite mills by emphasizing the possibility of further negotiations with the Soviet, particularly on the matter of trade.

The upshot of these developments was to make it plain that the Western unity established in the face of the Communists at Berlin was still menaced by internal splits on E. D. C. That condition appeared to suit the Communists down to the ground. From the Soviet Union last week there came no new pronouncements on Berlin. The Russians, it seemed, were resting on their oars, presumably in the hope that the splits in the West would give them good openings for maneuver when the Geneva conference gets under way on April 26.

Turkey-Pakistan Pact

While the Western Alliance has been gradually strengthening its European defenses over the past three years, it has made much slower progress in closing "the Middle East gap"—the gap which stretches from the Caucasus to the Himalayas. In October, 1951, the West proposed a Middle East Defense Command, built around a core of the U. S., Britain, France, Turkey and Egypt. The plan quickly foundered in the political cross-currents of the Mideast—Arab hostility to the French in North Africa, the Anglo-Egyptian dispute over Suez, and Arab-Israel suspicions.

Last November, U. S. planners broached a new plan—the granting of military aid to Pakistan so as to strengthen the eastern end of the gap. (U. S. military aid to Turkey has already stiffened the western end.) Exploratory conversations were held in Washington and Karachi. There were reports that Pakistan was to give bases to the U. S. Moscow protested to Pakistan. So did New Delhi. Karachi denied that any bases were involved, or that it intended to enter an "aggressive alliance" against the Soviet Union or any other power. But Prime Minister Nehru strongly objected to any U. S. military aid for Pakistan, holding that it would upset the balance of power between India and Pakistan, bring the cold war to the Indian frontier, and pave the way for the return of colonialism.

A month ago came reports, leaked in Karachi, Istanbul and Washington, of still another plan for Middle East defense. This was a Turko-Pakistani military and economic pact. These reports were confirmed ten days ago when dispatches from Karachi said that negotiations were already under way with a Turkish delegation. Last Tuesday, in anticipation of the signing of the pact, Pakistan made formal application for U. S. military assistance.

On Thursday President Eisenhower said that the military assistance would be granted. He did not say how much aid Pakistan would get but reports were that it would be substantial. A U. S. military assistance team will go to Pakistan to determine what kind of aid is required to turn Pakistan's army—partly demobilized last year for lack of funds—into an effective fighting force.

Although the precise terms of the U. S. agreement were not disclosed by the President it is known that, in contrast to the agreement with Spain, Pakistan will make no bases available to the U. S. in exchange for aid.

Before announcing the grant to Pakistan, President Eisenhower sent Prime Minister Nehru a letter assuring him that "this step does not in any way affect the friendship we feel for India." As the week ended, Indian reaction to the move was at a lower pitch than previous protests had indicated. Most Indians were skeptical about American assurances that Pakistan bases would not be used for American planes. On the other hand, President Eisenhower's personal assurance to Prime Minister Nehru that he would take all measures to prevent American arms from being used against India was reported to have had a calming effect. Statements made during a visit to New Delhi in midweek by Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent of Canada, fellow member with India in the Commonwealth, were also believed to have provided some reassurance to Indian public opinion. Mr. St Laurent did not comment directly on the U. S. agreement with Pakistan, but he declared, "I am sure the desire of the United States is to lessen tension [in Asia]." Although there is still agitation in the Indian Parliament to expand Indian forces as a counter-move to the Pakistani gain from the U. S., observers in New Delhi reported no signs of such expansion yet.

Turmoil in Near East

The U. S. decision to base Near Eastern defense on the pacts with Turkey and Pakistan pointed up the political instability prevailing in the other Moslem countries of the area. Behind this unrest lie a multitude of popular discontents—with defeat in the Palestine war; with grossly uneven distribution of wealth; with prevailing political corruption. In these circumstances, parliamentary government, never strong in the Middle East, has tended to be discredited. It has been relatively easy for military juntas to stage successful coups. But the soldiers, though evidently sincere proponents of reform, have come up against the problem of winning popular support for their regimes.

Last week that problem appeared to be at the root of political turmoil in Egypt and Syria. These are details of the developments:

EGYPT

The chief figures in the trouble were Lieut. Col. Gamel Abdel Nasser, 36, and Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib, 53. Colonel Nasser was the head of a group of younger officers, the Military Revolutionary Council, which organized the coup forcing King Farouk from power in July, 1952. But immediately thereafter he took a back seat—by title at least—as Deputy Premier. As Premier of the new regime the officers' council named General Naguib. Though not a party to the coup, General Naguib had achieved wide popularity in the war against Israel.

For months it appeared that the general and the colonel were working smoothly together. General Naguib toured the country repeatedly, drawing large enthusiastic crowds. At the beginning of last year Egypt was declared a republic, and Naguib was named its first President. Meanwhile, Colonel Nasser did the work-a-day business in the Military Council.

Naguib Resigns

Last Thursday the Military Council suddenly announced that three days earlier General Naguib had resigned as President and Premier and been replaced in the latter office by Colonel Nasser. The announcement said that for the past ten months the Council had been resisting demands by General Naguib for veto power over all decisions; that over the last week-end he had made his tenure of office conditional on these demands; and that the Council, rather than give way, had accepted the resignation. It indicated that General Naguib had been placed under what was, in effect, house arrest.

Almost immediately there were signs of trouble. In Cairo armed troops patrolled the streets as an obvious precaution against popular protests. Rumors flew that a pro-Naguib faction inside the army was plotting a counter-coup against Colonel Nasser. Yeterday, in the face of this pressure, it appeared that Colonel Nasser had given ground. A spokesman for the Council said that a compromise had been struck whereby Naguib would continue as President and chief of state, and Nasser would move up to Premier.

SYRIA

The chief figure in the shake-up was Brig. Gen. Adib Shishekly. Long a power behind the scenes, he emerged as top man in Syria after a military coup in December, 1951. At the outset, he clamped down hard, dissolving Parliament, putting political leaders in jail. But in the face of popular grumbling, General Shishekly began to make concessions. Early last year he issued a new contitution, re-establishing parliament. In July, there were Presidential elections in which General Shishekly was returned with over 99 per cent of the vote. From the army there came grumblings that the "strong man" was going out of his way to curry popular favor.

For a brief time, at the beginning of this year, it appeared he might have to get tough again. In January, a revolt of the Druse, a tribe long disaffected from the central government, broke out, and the President declared martial law and ordered the army to crush the dissident tribesmen. But as soon as the revolt subsided, General Shishekly returned to his mild ways. Two weeks ago he began negotiating with the jailed political leaders, presumably on terms for their possible return to politics.

That evidently was the last straw for the army. On Thursday a military revolt broke out. In quick order the army seized most of northern Syria, and, threatening a march on the capital at Damascus, demanded the President's resignation. Before the day was out President Shishekly had resigned and taken refuge across the border in the Saudi Arabian Embassy in Lebanon. He left political chaos in his wake.

Pick New President

On Friday the Syrian Parliament elected its speaker, Dr. Mohammed al Kuwatly, as President, [illegible] shekly constitution. [illegible] was supported by the army garrison in Damascus. But the old political leaders, released from jail, met outside Damascus and demanded a return to the pre-Shishekly constitution. The army rebels in the north, insisting on a brand new regime, demanded that Dr. Kuzbari resign immediately. Yesterday they sent planes over Damascus and inside the city violent struggles raged.

At the week-end, in both Egypt and Syria, it was still touch and go as to who would secure control. Whoever wins, however, will be faced with the problem of building public support. And in the West there is some fear that this may produce an attempt to tap popular nationalism by anti-Western measures or new ventures against Israel.

Concern Over Pope

Fifteen years ago this Tuesday, a Cardinal proclaimed to a multitude before St. Peters, "We have a Pope"—the announcement of the election of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli as Pope Pius XII. It was the new Pope's birthday, his sixty-third. Since then, as spiritual sovereign of 375 million Catholics throughout the world, he has worked tirelessly, sixteen to seventeen hours a day.

About a month ago the Pope's labors were interrupted by a severe attack of what was described as gastritis. Later he appeared to be recovering and, against his physicians' advice, went back to work. Last week there was new anxiety in the Vatican over the Pope's health. The Secretariat of State announced that, contrary to previous optimistic reports, the Pope's convalescence was not complete. He had been ordered back to bed, the bulletin stated, and continual treatment remains "indispensable."

As the week drew on, the Pope's condition appeared "slightly improved," and he insisted upon getting into his arm chair to work on a mass of Vatican documents. At the week-end it was reported from the Vatican, however, that he was still not well enough to hold the barium fluid necessary for radioscope examination to determine the real cause of his illness.

FIRST ROUND: In Italy last week a democratic coalition government, the first since elections last summer, scored an initial triumph. In Parliament Prime Minister Mario Scelba, a Christian Democrat, sought a vote of confidence for a Government that promises economic and social reforms and early ratification of the European Defense Community (E. D. C.) pact. On Friday night, after a week of Senate debate, Mr. Scelba won. The count was 123 in favor, 110 against. On Tuesday the debate will move to the Chamber of Deputies where the critical test of Government strength will take place. There another Scelba victory, but by a narrow margin, is expected.

POLES OUT: The normal function of consulates is to protect the interests and foster the commercial affairs of their nationals resident in a foreign country. They are maintained at the discretion of the host country. Over the past five years, the U. S. has been gradually closing down the consulates of Iron Curtain countries in the United States. State Department officials have pointed out that the consulates have ceased to serve any legitimate purpose since virtually all relations between the U. S. and Iron Curtain countries are now on the Government level and thus are handled by the embassies and legations in Washington. Moreover, they have charged the consulates with carrying on propaganda and espionage activities in abuse of their diplomatic privileges. The only remaining Soviet or satellite consulates in the U. S. are the Polish consulates general in New York, Chicago and Detroit. Last week Secretary of State John Foster Dulles asked Polish Ambassador Josef Winiewicz to close the three offices as soon as possible.

THE NATION

Bricker Beaten

A few minutes before 7 P. M. last Friday, the final vote apparently had been tallied in the Senate on a proposal to change the President's treaty-making powers under the Constitution. The count stood at 60 to 30 for the proposal, precisely the two-thirds majority required to set the Constitution-amending process in motion. To delay momentarily announcement of the result, a Senator rose to ask the clerk how his vote had been recorded. At that moment, Senator Harley Kilgore, Democrat of West Virginia, strode into the chamber and cried out "No!" With that vote, a two-year effort to amend the Constitution went down to defeat.

The long controversy over a treaty amendment has ranged from scholarly Constitutional debate, to violent partisan conflict and name-calling. The original proposal, put forward in 1952 by Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio, would have amended the Constitution to make a treaty effective as internal law in the United States "only through legislation which would be valid in the absence of [the] treaty." Initially, the Bricker amendment had the endorsement of sixty-four Senators, many of whom were genuinely concerned about possible encroachment of the Executive on the legislative powers of Congress and the states through treaties and executive agreements. But it also had the support of extreme nationalist and isolationist groups who campaigned for it under such slogans as "Get the U. S. A. out of the United Nations! Get the United Nations out of the U. S. A.!"

The original Bricker amendment died an early death when the Senate opened debate on the issue five weeks ago. Supporters fell away in the face of a firm White House stand opposing the amendment on grounds that it would imperil the President's power to deal with critical questions in foreign affairs and subject treaties to possible veto by each of the forty-eight states. In place of the Bricker draft, a variety of substitutes were put forward. The two main ones were an amendment sponsored by Majority Leader William F. Knowland, which the White House was willing to "accept," reaffirming that treaties must be made "in pursuance of the Constitution;" and an amendment sponsored by Senator Walter George, Democrat of Georgia, which the White House opposed, making executive agreements—but not treaties—effective as internal law only through acts of Congress.

Take Final Vote

By last Friday evening, the only proposal still alive was the George amendment and the stage was set for the final vote. Thirty-two Republicans, including Mr. Knowland who left his leadership seat to cast his ballot, and twenty-eight Democrats, voted for it; fourteen Republicans and seventeen Democrats, including Mr. Kilgore's last-minute decisive ballot, were opposed.

While the result itself was a "victory" for the White House, there was little disposition to cheer in Administration circles. On a major issue, the Administration's own Senate leadership had deserted it and substantial help was required from the Democrats to offset the opposition of three-fourths of the Republicans. Thus possible large problems were foreshadowed for the Administration in getting Congressional backing on other foreign and domestic issues. Moreover, the fact that sixty Senators voted in favor of curbing the President's treaty powers indicated that the issue was far from dead in the country. Senator Bricker said the issue would be "in every * * * Senate and Congressional campaign next fall."

Congress and Taxes

One of the rudimentary precepts on Capitol Hill is to think twice before voting on a tax question in an election year. This election year Congressmen are likely to think twice and twice again. To the normal potency of the tax issue has been added the fear of recession, in which controversy over tax policy is a key factor.

The controversy centers on the question of whether the best way to give a boost to the sagging U. S. economy is through tax measures designed to stimulate business activity and investment, or to increase consumer purchasing power. The Administration's tax program inclines toward the stimulate-business school. Two key measures in its tax reform bill now in the hands of the House Ways and Means Committee would permit more rapid tax write-offs for capital investment, and tax credits on dividend earnings for stockholders.

The Democrats, on the other hand, have lined up in support of a proposal by Senator Walter George of Georgia to raise personal exemptions on income taxes from the current $600 to $800 this year and to $1,000 in 1955. They argue that the 10 per cent cut in personal income taxes that went into effect Jan. 1 did not materially increase consumer purchasing power because it was canceled out for the lower income groups by the increase in social security rates.

Apart from the merits of the economic argument, the George proposal has great political magnetism, and more than one Republican has bent to the pull. Last week, however, the Administration made plain that it was against any such step now.

Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey, in a formal statement Thursday, said the Administration would "vigorously oppose blanket increases in exemptions that will throw us back into substantial deficit financing." It has been estimated that the George proposal would cost the Government $5.6 billion the first year and upwards of $10 billion when the exemption went to $1,000. The President has estimated the deficit next year under his own tax program at $2.9 billion.

The Ways and Means Committee last week was putting the finishing touches on a tax reform bill along the general lines proposed by the Administration. But it had under preparation a measure calling for a $1 billion reduction in excise (sales) taxes on a variety of items, principally those classified as "luxuries." The Republican leader's strategy apparently will be to bring the excise bill to the House floor before the reform bill. Their hope is that passage of the excise cut will help to forestall Democratic efforts to attach the George proposal to the reform bill, since Government revenues will already have been reduced by $1 billion.

Most Republicans concede that the strategy is not without its dangers. They fear that if the George proposal is defeated and then subsequently proves necessary because of a continued business decline, the Democrats will reap the benefits at the polls next November.

Warren Approved

There never has been any serious doubt that Earl Warren eventually would be confirmed as Chief Justice of the United States. But for the past seven weeks, a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, headed by William Langer, Republican of North Dakota, has been holding up confirmation while it investigated "charges" against Mr. Warren. Two weeks ago Mr. Langer caused a storm of protest when he made the charges public. They consisted of ten unverified and unsworn statements accusing Mr. Warren of derelictions ranging from corruption to subversion.

Last Wednesday the man chiefly responsible for making the charges, Roderick J. Wilson, a self-styled candidate for Governor of California, showed up in Washington to testify before the full judiciary committee. At the conclusion of his testimony, he was arrested on the basis of a telegram from the San Francisco police stating that they had a felony warrant against him for perjury in connection with an automobile accident. By the end of the day, Mr. Wilson had been released (a Washington court ruled that the telegram was insuficient evidence to hold him) and Mr. Warren had been approved by the Judiciary Committee, 12 to 3. The Senate is expected to vote on the nomination tomorrow.

New Ship Charges

Under an administrative decision of the U. S. Maritime Commission in 1947—subsequently made law by Congress—foreigners were prohibited from purchasing and operating U. S. war surplus ships. For the past three years, a number of surplus ship deals have been under Congressional and grand jury scrutiny for possible violation of the 1947 ruling. At issue has been the question of whether the individuals who purchased the ships falsely swore that they represented American interests, whereas real ownership of the vessels was in the hands of foreigners, mainly Greeks. Three weeks ago, Joseph E. Casey, former Democratic Representative from Massachusetts, nine other persons and six corporations were named in indictments of conspiring to defraud the Government on ship deals.

Last week a second series of indictments—numbering twenty-five, some of them including Mr. Casey—was disclosed in connection with the ship transactions. Among those named was Julius C. Holmes, former U. S. Minister to London and now special assistant to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles on the Trieste dispute. Mr. Holmes, who asked for a leave of absence from his State Department post when he learned of the indictment, called the charges against him a "ghastly mistake."

VOTES FOR YOUNG: There was talk around Wall Street last week that any connection between the unusual amount of trading in New York Central stock and the fact that Robert Young was trying to get control of the railroad was hardly coincidental. Mr. Young launched the fight a month ago when the Central's directors turned down his request that, as the road's largest single stockholder (he owns an estimated 2 per cent personally), they make him a director and chairman of the board. His objective is to get by proxy or ownership, the control of a majority of the road's 6,000,000 shares of stock, owned by some 40,000 individuals, in preparation for a stockholders' meeting in May. Last week his cause apparently got a big boost. Two Texas oil men acquired 800,000 shares of Central—12½ per cent of the total—from the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad for $20,000,000. Mr. Young acknowledged that the Texans were "good friends" of his.

MR. BASKETBALL: After Nat Holman became basketball coach at the College of the City of New York in 1919, his teams piled up a record of 395 wins to 139 losses. This earned sports fame for C. C. N. Y. and the title of "Mr. Basketball" for Nat Holman. C. C. N. Y.'s best year was 1950, when a team captained by Ed Warner became the first to win the National Invitation and National College Athletic Association championships in the same year. A year later, Warner and seven team-mates were convicted of "fixing" scores for bribes. In subsequent investigations it was charged that Holman and his assistant coach, Harry Sand, knew that their boys were being exposed to temptation, but did nothing about it. Both coaches were suspended in November, 1952. Last week a special trial committee of the Board of Higher Education, governing body of the four municipal colleges, exonerated Holman on all charges. Sand was found guilty of conduct unbecoming a teacher in arranging opportunities for team members to play for money. The committee recommended that Holman be reinstated as associate professor at an annual salary of $9,000 retroactive to the date of his suspension. C. C. N. Y. officials said it was doubtful that he would coach again.

Who's Who? FIFTEEN NEWS QUESTIONS What's What?

1. What momentous event took place a year ago this Friday?

2. Prominent figures in the McCarthy-Army controversy last week were Mary Markward, Ralph C. Zwicker, Irving Peress and Annie Lee Moss. Which of them is (a) an officer sharply rebuked by Senator McCarthy; (b) an Army civilian employe accused of being a Communist; (c) a former undercover informer for the F. B. I.; (d) an officer whose honorable discharge was criticized?

3. Pair these figures in the McCarthy-Army controversy (Senator McCarthy, Secretary Stevens, General Zwicker) with these statements: (a) "The American people do not believe in unwarranted abuse of our loyal officers * * *;" (b) "There are certain things I'm not permitted to do"; (c) "Anyone with the brains of a 5-year-old child can understand that question."

4. Senator William F. Knowland warned last week that the coming Asian conference in Geneva could lead to a "Far Eastern Munich." At the famous Munich conference in 1938 the Western Powers gave in to Hitler on the question of (a) the Saar, (b) the Czechoslovakian Sudetenland or (c) Danzig. Which?

5. Besides themselves and Communist China, the Big Four at Berlin specified only two other governments by name to be invited to Geneva to talk about Korea. What two?

6. The defeat of the Bricker amendment last week means that there will be no Twenty-third Amendment—for a while, anyway. What does the Twenty-second deal with?

7. The Inter-American Conference opens tomorrow at Caracas, capital of Venezuela. Of which other participating countries are these the capitals: Santiago, Montevideo, Quito?

8. At the Caracas conference the United States is expected to bring up the question of "Communist influence" in the Guatemalan Government. Is the President of Guatemala Adolfo Ruiz Cortines, Jacobo Arbenz Guzman, Carlos Ibañez or Getulio Vargas?

9. An analysis of Russian imports from the West published last week snowed that the Soviet had imported large quantities of herring, meat, textiles and citrus fruits from Argentina, Belgium, Iceland and Italy. From what you know of their national economies, pair the countries with the commodities.

10. Gen. Mohammed Naguib, central figure in the Egyptian political crisis last week, first came to power as a result of national elections, interim appointment, or an Army coup. Which?

11. Fifteen years ago Tuesday Eugenio Pacelli was elected to a high office. What office?

12. Last week Ayatollah Sayed Abolghassem Kashani, a religious leader, attacked the Government of Fazlollah Zahedi, a general. In what country?

13. Under Secretary of State Walter Bedell Smith last week said he personally favored establishment of diplomatic relations between the U. S. and the Vatican. From 1940 to 1950 Thomas J. Watson, Myron C. Taylor or Mark Clark was a Presidential envoy to the Pope. Which?

14. In the Panama Canal Zone last week it was decided to make Spanish a second language in the elementary schools. What is the first language?

15. According to the 1953 Statistical Yearbook released by the United Nations last week, the country with the world's lowest infant mortality rate is a European constitutional monarchy, with a tradition of neutrality, lying north of 55 degrees N. Lat. What is the country?

PRESIDENT LEANS HEAVILY ON STAFF

Top-Level Conference Drafted Statement McCarthy Rejected

By ANTHONY LEVIERO
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—When the fog of war had cleared this week-end in the McCarthy-Stevens dispute, the feeling here was that the White House had contrived an uneasy truce. President Eisenhower had been drawn into the conflict, but the outcome was still in doubt.

The attention of the entire nation was focused on the President, for the issue was one of the [illegible] in many years, and [illegible] Stevens had abated but not resolved his quarrel with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy over the issue of Communists in the Army.

Administration View

In working out the shaky settlement the Administration took the view that it was dealing primarily with an intra-party dispute. But editorial reaction across the country indicated the public regarded the issue as far broader than that.

Many observers saw the honor of the Army compromised, and the Army consists of a big bloc of Americans. Considerable sympathy centered on Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, a war hero, after Senator McCarthy gave him a rough going-over.

Questions of moral standards were raised. Why did Mr. Stevens capitulate after his stanch defiance of Senator McCarthy in defense of the Army's officers? Did the President lead or was he pushed into a solution for reasons of political expediency? When was the Senate going to begin exercising some self-discipline? Would the President ever force a showdown with the rambunctious Senator from Wisconsin?

Staff Work

In dealing with problems as complex as this the President of necessity must rely to a great extent on his political and staff advisers. These advisers inevitably exercise considerable influence on public policy, especially if the President is unsure of himself in the political arena.

In some instances, when the issue is crystal clear, the President sees the answer largely as a matter of instinct. In those cases the advisers serve mostly to implement whatever action he decides on.

Swift Action

It was done the other way this time. A task force was formed at the White House. This group came up with what was essentially a staff recommendation and the President accepted it. The settlement left Mr. Stevens in office as Secretary of the Army, though the Army was now resentful of him.

In the ordinary course of business at the White House a problem is submitted to a more or less routine treatment. One or more specialists tackle it under the direction of Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President, who is essentially a chief of staff. Public opinion, political factors, the general welfare and legal questions, are weighed before a proposed solution is handed up to the President.

The present dispute created an extraordinary situation, requiring swift action. Secretary Stevens was threatening to resign if he did not get public support from the President. On the other hand, there was a clamor demanding that the President fire Mr. Stevens for capitulating.

From the beginning it was apparent that the attitude of the President's immediate advisers coincided with that of Congressional Republican leaders. The aim was to keep Mr. Stevens from resigning and to bring him into some kind of face-saving agreement with Senator McCarthy.

President Eisenhower [illegible] President's behest, Senator Dirksen sought and failed to get a new edition of the "Memorandum of Understanding" that was mutually acceptable to Mr. Stevens and Mr. McCarthy.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who had intervened on other occasions as a pacifying agent between Senator McCarthy and the White House, also paid an unannounced visit to the White House on Thursday morning, trying to bring about a solution.

'Task Force' Formed

Having failed in this first effort to resolve a fight that threatened to shake the Republican party, the President turned to his staff again.

A special "task force" was formed and it went into seclusion in the east wing of the White House, away from the intensely curious press.

It was late afternoon by then. Mr. Adams, as usual, was at the center. The armed forces were represented by Mr. Stevens and his superior, Roger M. Kyes, Under Secretary of Defense. Much of the President's political guidance comes from the so-called Thomas E. Dewey faction of the Republican party. Its chief representative in the Administration is Herbert Brownell Jr., the Attorney General, and he sent his deputy, William P. Rogers, to the conferences. James C. Hagerty, White House Press Secretary, was present; his political derivation is from Governor Dewey, too, and, of course, he was looking out for the public opinion factors.

Fred A. Seaton, a former Senator and now [illegible], and now [illegible] was [illegible] also joined the group.

"Kitchen Cabinet"

And to complete the group there were three members of the President's kitchen cabinet who specialize in Congressional liaison; Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, a retired regular, who formerly represented the Army on Capitol Hill; I. Jack Martin, who received considerable indoctrination in Congressional affairs as executive assistant to the late Senator Robert A. Taft; and Gerald D. Morgan, who has been consultant to Congressional committees.

Apart from the dominating concept that party unity should be preserved, this group was also motivated by a conviction that, commendable as Mr. Stevens' defense of General Zwicker was, the Army Secretary had not selected a "good" case for a showdown fight. That was the cause of the promotion and honorable discharge of Maj. Irving Peress, who had declined to answer certain questions about his affiliations in his loyalty questionnaire.

The consensus was that Mr. Stevens ultimately would have to tell the full story of Major Peress to the subcommittee, as a matter of fact [illegible] balls on the [illegible] White House. It was a nice day for his favorite game, but he probably was working off steam. He works at high intensity anyway, and his doctor thinks he should take frequent breaks from his work. It was known that he was boiling mad at Senator McCarthy, primarily for his treatment of General Zwicker, who was personally known as a hero of the Battle of the Bulge to the former Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in World War II.

The task force, after ninety minutes of intensive work, produced a five-paragraph statement. This was taken to the President in his study, after his practice golf was finished, by Vice President Nixon, Acting Secretary Kyes, Secretary Stevens and Mr. Adams. They emerged after a half hour, the statement approved by the President.

In this statement Secretary Stevens said he would "never accede to the abuse of Army personnel under any circumstances, including committee hearings." He also said he had assurances from subcommittee members that they would not permit such abuses in the future.

[illegible] that he would remain [illegible] At the week-end, however, it was generally acknowledged that Mr. Stevens was in a shaky position and that the actions of Senator McCarthy may yet toss him out of it.

The subcommittee chairman, who had denounced General Zwicker as "a disgrace to the uniform" and as one who was "shielding Communist" suspects, denied that he had browbeaten or humiliated witnesses. Therefore, he said, he could not give assurances against that because he would not agree that anybody had been badly treated in the past.

Thus any hazing of an Army witness before the McCarthy committee would appear to call for Mr. Stevens' resignation. That would leave continuance of the conflict up to General Eisenhower. For in endorsing the stand taken by Mr. Stevens, the President had committed himself to battle, but Senator McCarthy has chosen the terrain.

THE McCARTHY SUBCOMMITTEE

Last week's developments in the McCarthy-Stevens controversy served to focus new attention on the Senate's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations which is headed by the Senator from Wisconsin. Other members of the subcommittee are:

Karl E. Mundt	Republican	South Dakota
Everett M. Dirksen	Republican	Illinois
Charles E. Potter	Republican	Michigan
John L. McClellan	Democrat	Arkansas
Henry M. Jackson	Democrat	Washington
Stuart Symington	Democrat	Missouri

PROBLEM OF 'UNEVALUATED CHARGES'

McCarthy and Langer Inquiries Sharply Raise the Issue

By LUTHER A. HUSTON
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—New controversy flared in Washington this week over the use of "unevaluated" material in Congressional investigations.

The issue arose sharply in Senate Judiciary hearings on confirmation of Earl Warren as Chief Justice of the United States. Less directly, it was involved in the dispute between Robert T. Stevens, Secretary of the Army, and Senator Joseph R. McCarthy over the treatment of Army officer [illegible]

[illegible] man of the [illegible] committee, permitted [illegible] against Chief Justice Warren to be introduced at a public hearing. It was acknowledged that the material from which the "charges" were drawn had not been "evaluated" by the committee's staff.

Procedure Criticized

The procedure was assailed as an unwarranted "smear" of the Chief Justice by the admission of statements unsupported by sworn testimony or credible evidence.

In the McCarthy-Stevens row it likewise was pointed out that Maj. Irving Peress had been called a Communist by the Wisconsin Senator without public proof of the charges. Senator McCarthy then had berated a general for answers he deemed unsatisfactory to questions regarding the Army's actions in promoting Major Peress and granting him an honorable discharge.

These controversies focussed attention on bulging files of the Executive departments and agencies and of Congressional committees, containing the data used to determine the loyalty of a Government employe, the fitness of an appointee to a Government office or the right of a Federal worker to hold his job.

Differing Methods

When it comes to the Govern[illegible] group and the Executive departments and agencies, there is no [illegible] the case of the Federal Bureau of Investigation there is no mandatory uniform procedure.

In cases involving internal security, the subversive cases, all material that is received by the F. B. I., except for the obviously unreliable, is sent to the Internal Security Section of the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice. There it is "evaluated" to determine if criminal prosecution is warranted.

If such prosecution is decided upon that takes the matter out of the hands of the F. B. I., or the department or agency involved.

If a Law Is Broken

Most of the data that goes to the F. B. I. is studied somewhere in the Department of Justice. If it involved a violation of the anti-trust laws, for instance, it would go to the Anti-trust Division.

The F. B. I. screens everything, discards nothing but the patently trivial. That is not necessarily so in other branches of the Executive Department. And it is to the employe's department or agency that a derogatory letter, telegram or formal statement about the employe is usually sent by the accuser. (If it is Congressional confirmation of an appointment that is involved, the communication might go to a Senator or Representative, but eventually it would find its way to the committee to which the nomination was referred.)

If the security officer of an Executive department or agency should want to, he may toss aside a letter impugning the loyalty or fitness of an employe [illegible] communications that are sent direct to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In the case of those sent originally to Executive departments or agencies, most of them eventually wind up in the F. B. I.

Role of F. B. I.

"Evaluation," however, is involved in this process. In any Executive department all communications pertaining to employes or prospective employes are sent to the departmental security officer. The law requires that if they contain derogatory information, that data must be sent to the F. B. I.

When the question of motives arises, a question of "evaluation" also intrudes. Who is to say, for sure, whether a man who writes that a certain individual is unfit to be a United States Attorney is concerned with the country's welfare or is nursing a grudge? Who is to balance the merit of a signed communication against an anonymous letter?

In sorting out the derogatory matter, however, the security officer is not "evaluating" it in the accepted sense of the term. That sifting is merely a mandatory step in the over-all procedure.

The F. B. I., however, does not "evaluate" in the sense that it makes a formal appraisal of the material it assembles. When the F. B. I. has completed its investigation it sends a report to the unit of the Executive department from which it originally came.

The "evaluating" process begins when the F. B. I. report is turned over to the Executive department in which the accused individual works or is applying for work.

President Eisenhower's Executive Order establishing the current personnel security system set minimum standards. The methods to be used in applying those standards are mostly at the discretion of administrative officials.

Elements of Danger

Officials acknowledge that this procedure has elements of danger. Injustices are possible and some have occurred.

Officials assert, however, that the requirement that an employe be told what the charges against him are and have a hearing at which he may answer the charges, coupled with Civil Service regulations, afford a reasonable protection against injustice. This view is not shared by all critics of the Government's security program.

The procedure in the Executive departments does not apply to the legislative branch. Information received by Congressional committees does not go to the F. B. I., automatically, nor do F. B. I. reports go to Congress except upon special request and upon the authorization of the Attorney General.

In such matters, Congressional committees and their staffs are a law unto themselves, and do their own "evaluating."

M'CARTHY: A CHRONOLOGY SINCE 1950

Feb. 9—At a Lincoln Day dinner in Wheeling, W. Va., Senator McCarthy tells his audience: "* * * I have here in my hands a list of 205—a list of names that were made known to the Secretary of State as being members of the Communist party and who nevertheless are still working and shaping policy in the State Department."

Feb. 20—Because some Democrats had challenged him to "put up or shut up," he reiterates his Wheeling charges in a six-hour speech on the floor of the Senate but in much more temperate terms. The number of names has been reduced to eighty-ones. (Later he cut it to fifty-seven.)

Feb. 21—Senate approves resolution asking Foreign Relations Committee to investigate McCarthy charges. Senator Millard E. Tydings, Democrat of Maryland, is named chairman of the special subcommittee.

March 8—Public hearings begin in Senate Caucus Room before overflow audience. Among ten persons named by McCarthy at that time as being tinged by varying degrees of communism are Ambassador at Large Philip Jessup, Prof. Owen Lattimore, Prof. Harlow Shapley and Foreign Service Officer John Stewart Service.

June 28—Service is cleared on both loyalty and security counts by State Department loyalty board.

July 18—Tydings subcommittee files its final report with the Foreign Relations Committee. It clears all persons charged with Communist sympathies by McCarthy, and excoriates him for "irresponsible" and "untruthful" accusations.

Nov. 7—Tydings is defeated for re-election by 43,111 votes by John Marshall Butler, Republican unknown, who has received massive support from Senator McCarthy.

Jan. 22—Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections agrees to investigate charges of corruption by Butler forces in defeat of Tydings. Testimony, extending over period of two months, identifies Senator McCarthy and several members of his staff, as "master-minding" the Butler campaign.

April 10—Mrs. Esther Brunauer, whose loyalty has been publicly questioned by McCarthy, is suspended from her job in the State Department.

June 14—Reads 60,000-word Senate speech attacking Gen. George C. Marshall. "I ask in all gravity," he says, "whether a man so steeped in falsehood, who has recourse to the lie whenever it suits his convenience, is fit to hold so exalted a place * * * "

Aug. 6—Senator William Benton, Democrat of Connecticut, introduces resolution calling for further investigation of McCarthy's participation in the Butler-Tydings campaign and "into his other acts since election to the Senate." He accuses McCarthy of perjury.

Aug. 10—In Senate speech McCarthy gives the names of twenty-seven persons currently employed at the State Department whose loyalty, he says, is open to question. Among them are Ambassador Jessup, John Paton Davies, Minister to Tangier, John Carter Vincent, career foreign service officer.

Sept. 27—Makes first of two appearances before Foreign Relations subcommittee in opposition to Jessup's nomination as United States representative to the United Nations.

Oct. 18—Subcommittee rejects the Jessup nomination. This is widely regarded as a triumph for McCarthy. (Jessup receives a recess appointment from President Truman on Oct. 22).

Dec. 13—John Stewart Service is dismissed from the State Department on loyalty grounds.

1952

March 26—Brings $2,000,000 libel suit against Senator Benton for corruption charges which Benton made in Senate under waiver of immunity.

May 12—Privileges and Elections subcommittee begins hearings on Benton's ouster charge against McCarthy.

Sept. 10—Wins smashing primary victory in Wisconsin with margin of 100,000 more votes than other five candidates combined.

Nov. 4—Re-elected to Senate (by 54 per cent of total vote as opposed to about 70 per cent in the primary contest). Benton, against whom McCarthy campaigned in Connecticut, is defeated by 40,000.

Jan. 3—In organization of the Repu[illegible] controlled Eighty-third Congress [illegible] McCarthy gains the most powerful post of his career, chairmanship of the Permanent Investigations Committee with jurisdiction to "police" the executive agencies.

Feb. 12—Starts investigation into alleged Communist influence in the State Department's United States Information Service. His attention focuses primarily on books by Communist authors in overseas libraries.

Feb. 23—In wake of this controversy, Secretary of State Dulles asserts, in what is generally taken to be an expression of Administration policy, that the responsibilities of running the department are his own, "and I expect to exercise them." This has no observable effect on the vigor of Senator McCarthy's examination of Information Service officials.

March 2—Senator announces that he will oppose nomination of Charles E. Bohlen, career diplomat, as Ambassador to Moscow.

March 20—Asserts in Senate speech on Bohlen nomination that Secretary Dulles' statement that he had examined the F. B. I. files on Bohlen "would appear to be untrue." (Bohlen is confirmed on March 27. This is heralded as a "defeat" for McCarthy in his conflict with President Eisenhower).

March 27—Announces on television program that his committee has "negotiated" with group of Greek shipowners to stop carrying cargoes to Communist China.

March 28—In committee hearing, Foreign Operations Administration Director Harold E. Stassen complains that McCarthy's deal with the shipowners is "undermining" the Administration efforts to cut off trade with China.

April 2—Following a Cabinet meeting Mr. Stassen recants, saying he supposes he meant that Senator McCarthy was "infringing," not "undermining," the Administration's position.

May 11—Theodore Kaghan, Deputy Director for Public Affairs to the United States High Commissioner for Germany, resigns after a long series of stormy hearings before the McCarthy committee. He says he was forced to resign in spite of the lack of any substantial evidence of disloyalty or unfitness.

[illegible] three Democratic members of McCarthy's subcommittee quit in protest over the chairman's insistence that he has the sole right to hire and dismiss committee personnel.

Oct. 14—The Senator gives the first of a long series of "briefings" to New York reporters on information he says is being extracted from witnesses in closed hearings on espionage at Fort Monmouth, N. J. His allegations are soon followed by announcements that twenty-seven employes at the great signal center have been suspended.

Nov. 13—Secretary Stevens says in Washington: "We have been unable to find anything relating to espionage" in the Army's own investigation at Monmouth. Senator McCarthy retorts: "More detailed hearings will begin around December 1." However, they never come off.

Nov. 24—In a national television broadcast (answering former President Truman's comments on the Harry Dexter White disclosures) McCarthy assails the Administration's conduct of foreign policy and, in effect, challenges President Eisenhower to a "popularity contest" over whose position is better on the Communist issue.

Jan. 25—He agrees to all terms demanded by the Democratic former members of his committee for their return to the committee.

Feb. 5—Sets out on a week-long Lincoln Day speaking tour using the theme of "Twenty Years of Treason" to belabor the Democrats.

Feb. 18—In New York hearings, sitting as a one-man subcommittee in the case of Maj. Irving Peress, the Senator castigates Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, Peress' commanding officer, saying he "should be removed from any command."

Feb. 21—Secretary Stevens strikes back indignantly at such "unwarranted abuse" of Zwickes. He says he is willing to appear, himself, at a session of the McCarthy committee to answer questions about the Peress case. At the same time he issues instructions for other officers to disregard Senator McCarthy's request for testimony.

Feb. 24—After a two-hour luncheon at the Capitol, Senator McCarthy and Secretary Stevens called in the press for a session at which the now-famous "Memorandum of Understanding" was read.

SENATE TO INVESTIGATE INVESTIGATING METHODS

Latest McCarthy Conflict Prompts G. O. P. Efforts to End Inquiries By One-Man Subcommittees

HOPE TO AVOID PARTY SPLIT

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—One direct and constructive effect of the controversy between Senator Joseph R. McCarthy and the Department of the Army was the decision of the Senate Republican Policy Committee to review the methods of Senate investigators with the object of improving them—notably by ending inquiries by one-man subcommittees. Examination of witnesses by one Senator, particularly McCarthy, is a principal source of the abuse of individual rights to decent treatment that precipitated the immediate controversy.

The Republican party members in Congress have been slow to attempt the policing of their own ranks that McCarthy's inquiry tactics, culminating in his denunciation of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, made it their obligation to undertake long ago. This is partly attributable to fear of reprisals from the Wisconsin Senator in which many Senators, especially Republicans facing a re-election campaign, stand in dread. It is partly attributable also to a Republican conviction and a Democratic apprehension that McCarthy is the effective political symbol of the effort to expose and root out Communist infiltration in government, an issue to which Republican politicians look for victory in the Congressional elections of 1954. But the other factor which produced the long delay of the Senate in tackling the problem of inquiry methods typified by McCarthy is the disinclination of a Senator to curb another lest he be curbed in return. That attitude is what has made the Senate known as "the most exclusive and fraternal club in the world."

Langer's Action Cited

The power of a single Senator under the free-and-easy regulations of that body has recently been illustrated in a way to explain why his colleagues are loath to attempt discipline. Senator William Langer, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, was able by that authority to delay unconscionably a report on the nomination of the Chief Justice of the United States and to spread on the public record a series of unsupported attacks on the character of Earl Warren. Senator Wayne Morse has frequently demonstrated that one member of the body, acting on whatever motive, can halt the entire Senate machinery. Hence the Senate attitude of I-tickle-you-you-tickle-me is founded on experience.

So deeply founded is it that the current attempt to reform inquiry procedures and curb McCarthy in especial would never have been launched by the Republican Policy Committee if the McCarthy-Stevens episode had not presented to the people an unmistakable Republican picture of weak administration and low legislative standards. Plainly, the reputation of the President, his regime and the party was impeached by the episode, and under the urging of Vice President Nixon the Republican leaders flogged themselves into doing something to redeem it.

The situation had developed to a point where a statement of fact and intent by the Secretary of the Army, accepted "100 per cent" by the President and carefully staged against the background of the White House, was declared by McCarthy—though he took it back after reading the statement—to be "completely false." And as the situation had developed Secretary Stevens, the responsible head of a great Government department, was revealed as, at the best, feeble and naïve, and, at the worst, a deserter under fire from the very battlefield he had chosen.

Party Position

The party position then was this: The Republican Administration was humbled by a Republican Senator, and the President's former colleagues in the Army were surrendered to the same outrageous treatment McCarthy gave Zwicker.

Two facts then became incontrovertible to the Republican leaders in Congress and the managing party politicians. One was that the President and the party could not be left in this position without heavy risk of repudiation of the party by the people. The other was that, if no disciplinary move against McCarthy were made at the Capitol, the President might take the field against him in person, involving the heavier risk of a Republican split that could not be mended by election day.

Under Surface Moves

In an effort to correct the one and forestall the other, Republican Senators led by Homer Ferguson of Michigan made their move and made it with unexpected promptness. After the resolution adopted by the Policy Committee Ferguson prepared letters to all committee chairmen, asking for their ideas on the proper procedures of inquiries. And beneath the surface these further moves were made:

(1) The other Republicans on McCarthy's subcommittee that is inquiring into Army matters were urged to view it as their duty, and in their self-interest as well as in the interest of the Senate as a whole, to restrain McCarthy from such outbursts as that against Zwicker. They were urged hereafter not all to absent themselves from the subcommittee hearings, thus allowing it to be a one-man show by McCarthy. On these counsels progress was reported.

(2) The leaders further proposed that steps be taken soon to sever Roy Cohn from his post as counsel to the McCarthy subcommittee. They justified this on the ground that he has encouraged his chief in his attacks on the Army, and traced Cohn's animation to his differences with the Army over David Schine, Cohn's young associate who was drafted some time ago. The other Republican subcommitteemen were told that there is a record of Cohn's interventions with the Army with respect to Schine that will become public and will certainly be no asset to them. This record, it is said, shows that McCarthy took care to have no part in Cohn's efforts for Schine. But a chairman and his group cannot wholly disassociate themselves from criticism of their counsel.

(3) Progress on the plan to remove Cohn from his subcommittee post was also reported by the leaders to representatives of the Administration.

Burke's Advice Recalled

In these and other ways the Republican leaders, working to repair the damages inflicted by the Stevens affair on the Administration and the party, are following Edmund Burke's prescription—ignored by George III—for avoiding the war between Britain and her American colonies: "Cure the condition by removing the causes." And it was Stevens' misadventure and the storm of criticism it evoked that will deserve the credit for whatever good may come of the work of the reparations crew.

Two things, however, are beyond their power to achieve. McCarthy, a chief "cause" of the "condition" they seek to cure, cannot be "removed" by them: they can only hope to tame him by a proof that reform is in his interest. And they cannot restore the prestige of Stevens; only he can do that, and it will be a difficult task.

M'CARTHY VS. EISENHOWER: SHOWDOWN AGAIN OFF

Senator Gains Power by Frequent Challenges to the Administration

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—It is a long way from Peoria to the Pentagon, but a lot of politicians here are convinced that there is a close connection between the two places in any complete story of the relations between President Eisenhower and Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Wisconsin Republican.

They think that a chain of events which began at Peoria on Oct. 2, 1952, pre-ordained the stunning decision that was taken this week for Robert T. Stevens, the Secretary of the Army, to drop suddenly his defiance of the McCarthy investigating committee after it had been built up into a national issue. Surrender was the harsh verdict of most of Mr. Stevens' friends as well as his enemies.

Peoria is important because it was the scene of the first showdown between General Eisenhower, then the Presidential candidate headed for a landslide victory, and Senator McCarthy—and when the quarrel was over it was General Eisenhower, not Senator McCarthy, who gave ground.

General Eisenhower, at that time, was heading into Wisconsin to give what his campaign aides called a reluctant endorsement of Senator McCarthy for re-election. He wished to couple this endorsement with an attack upon Senator McCarthy's methods.

A Speech for Milwaukee

Some of the Eisenhower supporters in the East, who detested Senator McCarthy as well as his methods, believed the General best could dramatize his distaste for Senator McCarthy's record by including in his Milwaukee speech the following night a glowing endorsement of his old friend, General of the Army George C. Marshall.

Senator McCarthy had charged on the Senate floor that General Marshall had been responsible for an "unbroken series of decisions and acts, contributing so greatly to the strategy of defeat" for the United States and global supremacy for the Soviet Union.

In a hotel room that October night General Eisenhower read to Senator McCarthy what he proposed to say at Milwaukee. Defiant as always, the Senator told the Republican nominee he could say whatever he wished, but he suggested Milwaukee or Wisconsin wasn't the place to say it. He said the candidate might, in fact, be booed.

The two men were closeted over this problem with Arthur E. Summerfield, now the Postmaster General but then the Republican National Chairman, for about an hour. Their meeting broke up on an indecisive note.

Some of Eisenhower's exuberant aides were telling newsmen through the night that the nominee had a first-rate speech for Milwaukee which included the high praise to Marshall as a direct rebuke to Senator McCarthy.

Senator McCarthy kept his silence publicly but mobilized his powerful political friends in the state to put new pressure on General Eisenhower to remove the offending paragraph.

When the speech was made the Marshall paragraph was missing. General Eisenhower claimed later it was omitted at the suggestion of Gov. Walter J. Kohler and other party leaders who were his hosts in Wisconsin.

Later, it was learned that Senator McCarthy had suggested that if General Eisenhower wanted to praise General Marshall again he would find it politically more profitable to do it in New York or New Jersey. Later, in fact, General Eisenhower did praise General Marshall in New Jersey.

Senator and President-Elect

From that time on, McCarthy had little fear of Dwight Eisenhower. The landslide election victory the general scored and the fact that he ran well ahead of Senator McCarthy in the Senator's home state of Wisconsin didn't change McCarthy's attitude.

That Senator McCarthy has gone on from there to one victory after another over the Eisenhower Administration has convinced quite a number of Republicans and Democrats (a few publicly, but more privately) that appeasement doesn't pay any more dividends in intra-party politics than it does in international power politics.

Certainly each new concession has only whetted Senator McCarthy's appetite to a point where he does not hesitate to say that a White House-approved statement is "completely false."

There is little doubt that McCarthy truly is a powerful influence in and out of the Senate, especially in the "right wing" of the Republican party.

Few men have the courage to take him on publicly. The Eisenhower wing of the party, so far at any rate, has been unwilling to curb his excesses or to slap back at him when he tackles the President personally or any other high official of the Republican Administration.

Viewed in its broadest [illegible] tween Senator McCarthy and Secretary Stevens raised these main questions:

When, if ever, will the Administration have a genuine and decisive showdown with Senator McCarthy?

Can another Administration "surrender" to Senator McCarthy have any effect other than to add to his already powerful position in Congress?

Will the 1954 Congressional election campaign be fought, as the President hoped, on the main issue of his legislative program, [illegible] Senator McCarthy's Communist-hunting issue?

There are quite a few politicians who believe that the Administration rapidly is running out of opportunities on which it can grasp the initiative and fight it out once and for all with the junior Republican Senator from Wisconsin.

There certainly was nothing in Congress this week either in the handling of the Stevens affair or even in the defeat of the Bricker amendment that added appreciably to the strength of the so-called Eisenhower wing of the Republican party.

There was, on the contrary, clear evidence that the Republican "right wing," of which Senator McCarthy is an increasingly powerful leader, was gaining in strength. A certain result is to put him in the forefront of the fall campaign. A majority of the Republicans in Congress have indicated unquestionably that they would rather wage the campaign on their kind of issues than to stress the Eisenhower program.

Communism in Government

With Senator McCarthy out front, these Republicans certainly will stress the issue of "communism in Government" and hammer at the theme that the preceding Democratic Administrations added up to "twenty years of treason," to a far greater extent than the less partisan President Eisenhower would prefer.

Such a campaign, if it is popular in party primaries as well as in the November elections, might produce a Republican group that is even more anti-Eisenhower than the present crop, most of whose members in 1952 backed the Presidential aspirations of the late Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

Some of these conservative Republicans now talk about President Eisenhower in the extravagant terms [illegible] once has been a "traitor" to the party that nominated him, both because of the policies he has advocated and the civil servants he has declined to remove from office.

Yet, it is equally true that nothing the Administration did in the Stevens case was calculated to encourage Democrats to move into an exposed position and stick out their necks to help out either the President or his high appointees when they come under heavy Republican attack in the future.

Late last week, and early in this one, Secretary Stevens actively was soliciting help from the Democratic members of Senator McCarthy's subcommittee when it seemed certain he would publicly go to the mat with the Wisconsin Republican in a no-holds-barred showdown.

The Democrats were willing to give him this support. Yet the minority members were not invited to the luncheon where the issue finally was settled, and Mr. Stevens did not give them even the courtesy of a warning before he pulled out of the fight.

It is not likely, therefore, that any Democrat will burn his hands in the future reaching for Republican chestnuts in a fire—especially when the Administration may decide suddenly that it does not want those particular chestnuts rescued anyway.

Republican Problem

At the week's end, the official Democratic view was that Senator McCarthy was more than ever a problem peculiar to the Republican party and one with which that party would have to deal by itself.

There were, on the other hand, a small group of persons who felt that the McCarthy victory was not as sweeping as it seemed at first, and that overstatement of its true meaning — as Senator McCarthy was doing—might in the long run boomerang on him and produce a larger measure of support for the Administration than had seemed possible Wednesday when the deal was made.

Some who saw it this way admitted quite frankly they were engaging in wishful thinking. Others thought there was a more realistic basis for believing that steps finally were under way to curb Senator McCarthy in the decision of the Senate Republican leadership to consider a revision of the rules to end one-man subcommittee investigations.

Time alone can tell whether Senator McCarthy's greatest victory may turn out in the long run to be a prelude to a big defeat, but the road that has been traveled from Peoria to the Pentagon contains no evidence that such will be the case.

E. D. C. ACTION UNLIKELY BEFORE GENEVA TALKS

Indications Are That Italy, France Will Defer Decision Until Moscow Shows Hand at Conference

RUSSIANS' AIM IS TO STALL

By C. L. SULZBERGER

FLORENCE, Italy, Feb. 27—It is now beginning to look as if Soviet diplomacy has managed to stave off once again enactment of the European Defense Community, that essential aspiration of Washington's present diplomatic policy and therefore Moscow's bugbear.

The ultimate decision as to whether the Western Continental countries shall unite militarily must be taken in Italy and France. But there appears to be an increasing likelihood the matter will be deferred anew, until the Geneva conference on Far Eastern affairs indicates whether the Kremlin is or is not interested in Asian peace.

Early during the recent Big Four talks in Berlin, Secretary of State Dulles warned Mr. Molotov that the democratic powers had not come to the council table merely for the purpose of calling another conference. Yet this is precisely what they did do in the end.

They were unable to budge the impassive Soviet representative from his unyielding position on Germany and Austria. Finally, for a variety of reasons, they agreed to the Geneva conference commencing on April 26—the only agreement of Berlin.

Nobody has any idea how long the Geneva discussions are likely to last. Yet their duration is bound to be a point of exceptional importance. It is clearly to the advantage of the Kremlin, so earnestly intent on preventing ratification of E. D. C., to draw out for as long as possible any maneuver that stands a chance of holding that project up.

Mr. Molotov may have concluded that if he cannot rely upon killing the E. D. C. in a frontal assault he can, at any rate, do his best by delaying and stalling maneuvers to try to let time nibble that bold project to death. This strategy is being fostered by the Kremlin's faithful servants, the Italian and French Communists.

Outlook For E. D. C.

In Italy the actual parlimentary outlook for ratification of E. D. C. is statistically good. That is to say, political experts calculate that if the uneasy Government of Signor Scelba lasts long enough and is skillful and persevering enough to bring the matter to a vote, it will pass with the necessary majority.

But neither goodwill nor fortune is going to suffice to make the process speedy. The parliamentary procedure still necessary for ratification—almost two years after Italy, France, West Germany and the Benelux nations initialled E. D. C. in Paris—will be drawn out. It is certain that Signor Togliatti's large Communist bloc of Deputies will conduct a time-consuming filibuster, hoping in the end to divide the Government's uneasy ranks.

On paper the prospects of Italy's ratification are improved despite the paradox that Rome's Government is getting weaker while the Communist opposition to it and E. D. C. is getting stronger. The project has been placed at the top of the legislative program. Even without the backing of the Monarchists and the neo-Fascist M. S. I., it appears to have enough voting support. And the right-wing Deputies, bitterly anti-Communist, may vote for it in the end even if their stated conditions are not fully satisfied.

Secret Understanding

For months there had been suspicion in many chanceries—above all that of the West German Republic—that a secret understanding existed between France and Italy whereby Rome promised not to act on E. D. C. until Paris had done so, in exchange for French support on Italy's Trieste claims.

Despite denials, some observers saw confirmation of such a deal—designed to keep France from diplomatic isolation in the eyes of the United States Congress—in Rome's expressed view that no approval for E. D. C. could be expected until Italian claims on Trieste had been met.

Signor Scelba's coalition has, however, dropped this disturbing precondition. Furthermore it does not appear to be insisting, as does France, on revision or modification of the agreements initialed by the six E. D. C. Governments.

Thus, in appearance, the European army's chances seem to be in good shape so far as Italian politics go. But not even the most optimistic analyst of Rome's Parliament thinks the agreement will be ratified until after the Geneva conference because of Communist filibustering.

The key to the destiny of E. D. C. and therefore of the relationship of Western Europe to the United States, still remains in France. There, as has so often proved the case under the Fourth Republic, prospects remain confused.

French Debate

Unlike the Italian Government, which has abandoned insistence on a prior Trieste settlement, that of France has not relinquished claims to a Saar agreement with Germany preceding E. D. C. ratification. Likewise, the French, despite the brave and sometimes brilliant talk of M. Bidault, are still arguing about the need to modify the present European army statute and to extract further assurances of support and association from the United States and Britain.

By his obduracy at Berlin, if Mr. Molotov lost some support from the ranks of non-Communist opponents of E. D. C. in the French Assembly, he gained two valuable tactical points. He induced Messrs. Dulles, Eden and Bidault all to spell out promises that when Germany is eventually reunited it will not be bound by any prior commitment of the Bonn Federal Republic—a thought which scares many worried Frenchmen, reluctant to give the Germans guns. And he secured agreement for the Geneva conference on Asia. Already various currents of French opinion are saying it would be a poor idea to ratify E. D. C. until after the Geneva meeting—for fear of irritating Moscow and spoiling whatever hopes exist for peace in Indo-China.

Fears for Indo-China

Whether this new whisper demanding delay had been anticipated by Mr. Molotov cannot be known. Nevertheless, it is having an influence. Furthermore, some far-sighted diplomats fear Geneva must ultimately produce failure, as far as France's Indo-China hopes are concerned; that a resulting French defeatism would react badly in Washington, inspiring tension in the relationships of the United States and France.

The long-postponed E. D. C. cannot stand the strain of quarrels between the French, who invented it, and the Americans, who are pressing so hard for its realization. Europe has not forgotten Mr. Dulles' warning that failure of the plan might force an "agonizing reappraisal" of United States policy. But Europe, the slave of France's parliamentary paralysis, does not know what to do about it.

Through the irritations that might result from this delay, Moscow hopes to promote its great objective—the withdrawal from this continent of American armed forces and political influence.

Dr. Roberts Is Right

Dr. Warren Roberts, Wabash College professor, put his finger on an important educational principle at a meeting of the Indiana State Board of Education's Commission on General Education. He proposed to fellow members that teachers be encouraged to take more training in the subjects they teach instead of in unrelated subjects. Specifically he proposed that state regulations be changed to require that the commission for a first class school be given to schools whose teachers have the equivalent of a college major in the subjects they teach. He also proposed that the masters degrees of the required 50 per cent contain at least a minor in such subjects. He pointed out that a teacher of government in public school could have a master's degree and yet have spent a total of only three semester hours in political science in college.

Dr. Roberts brings up an issue that involves the whole philosophy of what a good education and what a good teacher is. The M.A. degree entitles a teacher to higher pay. But if a teacher takes an M.A. in physical education or in the theory of education, that does not necessarily make him a better teacher in his field. Isn't the best way for a teacher to improve his teaching to advance his knowledge and understanding of his subject? Doesn't a teacher get more than enough educational theory in courses in educational psychology, philosophy, history and educational methodology in the multitude of such courses in undergraduate study? Should not undergraduate teacher training stress subject matter more than methodology? Good teachers are not necessarily those who have become expert in the theory of teaching. Good teachers are those who become expert in the practice of teaching. Surely continued study in the field in which one teaches is essential to improvement of a teacher in the classroom. An M.A. in history certainly qualifies a history teacher better than an M.A. in educational psychology.

Today an M.A. held by a teacher does not necessarily mean that teacher is either better or as good a teacher as his compatriot who does not have one. It doesn't mean anything except that he gets more money and his school gets a higher rating.

Dr. Roberts is right. The whole system should be re-examined with the aim of providing better trained, better educated teachers for our schools. The present system does not encourage teachers to become experts in their field. It encourages them to take the easy road to a degree that may add nothing whatsoever to his ability to teach. Some changes are in order.

Red Kiss For Mikemen

Former Indianapolis radio newsman, Frank Edwards, now broadcasting nationally for the AFL, is held in high esteem by John Martin, radio critic for the Communist Daily Worker. "Frank Edwards is about the best of the news commentators allowed on the national airways," he writes in a recent Daily Worker column which also mentions two contemporaries, Verbose John W. Vandercook, newly employed CIO radio newsman, and Edward R. Murrow of radio, video and innuendo. Edwards and Vandercook, says Mr. Martin, are exceptions to the "loud hysterical echoes inflaming the cold war atmosphere or covering up for the Eisenhower Administration." He credits Mr. Murrow with "magnificent See It Now sequences on TV."

Well, now we know how Messrs. Edwards, Murrow and Vandercook stand with Moscow's mouthpiece in America, the Daily Worker. We also know where that Red rag stands with most Americans, including Messrs. Edwards, Murrow and Vandercook. We're reminded, however, that both Edwards and Murrow are adept at establishing relative values from which they may evolve cutting analysis—if it suits their purpose. Both will surely disregard this one. For some reason all this reminds us of Proverbs 36:5, which goes like this: "A man that flattereth his neighbor spreadeth a net for his feet."

Later on, Roosevelt [illegible] revenue on Lewis and an operative who frankly calls himself a hatchet man, ran up quite a report on John L.'s income tax situation. But Lewis had plenty on Roosevelt so the report on John Longwords was put to sleep.

Dan Tobin, the grand exalted fathead of the teamsters, announced one year when there was a congressional election that he would spend out of the teamsters' treasury just as much as it might take to elect a Democratic majority to support Roosevelt.

You may say, "Yes, but Tobin and Lewis got the teamsters and miners big raises in pay." That is right. And the hat-check babe takes good care of your hat, too. And a smile goes with the package. What more do you want for a quarter?

Yes, but the night club gag is a gyp. They fix it so you have to check your hat. All right—and the government's union deal is a gyp, too. The government fixed it so you have to join the union or starve.

At this point we leave the analogy. The hat-check girl never comes into the joint to yell at some customer with his girl or wife, "that bum tried to pinch me" or anything like that.

Blackmail And Brigandage

But the union concessions have run an organized blackmail and brigandage for the last 20 years. They picket factories, stores and lunch wagons with dirty lies, drive off customers, beat up and shoot non-joiners and even joiners, too, put stink-bombs in the ventilators and impose sales taxes on merchandise, including food.

What they do is fascism at its worst, operated by licensees without the slightest claim of public recognition. They pulled thousands of strikes in war industries during the second war and ran up our bill by literally billions.

Why would it be "bad" fascism for the government, itself, to collect this easy money if you are willing to grant that it is okay for the unions to collect it? Why would it be "bad" fascism for the government to prevent strikes by executive decision if you are willinig to defend the right of Jimmy Petrillo or Walter Reuther to pull strikes by dictatorial edict? Especially when the workers don't want to strike.

Alien Motorist Couldn't Do Worse

We've brooded for a week over the case of the German-born motorist who came out second best in a brush with local authorities. Of course, his fracture of the traffic laws apparently was compounded by charges that would be equally serious for domestic or imported drivers, but much was made of the point that he had been issued a beginner's license despite the fact that he couldn't read, write or speak English.

What we'd like to know is why this should be considered important. We'll grant that anyone in this country two years should be able to identify such plain and simple English words as "stop," "go," "walk," "slow," "curve" and "danger—men working" that suggest caution at intersections.

But these signals are effective only in so far as they flash an immediate warning in the motorist's control tower. His reaction has to be practically automatic. If he must hesitate to read signs to get his directions, he's just waiting for an accident to happen.

Dean Erwin N. Griswold's Speech On Fifth Amendment

(The following speech was delivered by Dean Erwin N. Griswold at the Winter Meeting of the Massachusetts Bar Association held in Springfield, Massachusetts, on Friday, February 5, 1954.

It is Reprinted as a Courtesy of The Harvard Law School Record, Student weekly Publication.

President Bodfish, Distinguished Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Old friends are good friends. Yet even with the best of friends problems sometimes arise. I have the feeling that that is in a sense the situation we find ourselves in with respect to the Fifth Amendment. It has been with us a long time. It is rather comforting to have around. Yet in the past few years it has come to our consciousness as it rarely has before, and it has been troublesome to many members of the public. It has seemed to me worth while, therefore, to undertake a review of the Fifth Amendment with the thought that ordinarily the better we understand something in human experience, the less fearsome it becomes.

Before going further it may be well to introduce our old friend itself. The Fifth Amendment contains a number of provisions which are commonplace. It is the source of our constitutional rule that serious criminal charges must be made by indictment of a grand jury. It provides against double jeopardy, against the taking of property without due process of law, and against the taking of private property for public use without just compensation. Along with these other provisions is the phrase which has currently come to the fore: "No person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." In this connection, it is well to mention the fact that the Massachusetts Constitution has a corresponding provision, which antedates that in the Federal Constitution. Article XII of the Bill of Rights in the Massachusetts Constitution, adopted in 1780, provides that "No subject shall . . . be compelled to accuse, or furnish evidence against himself." We are not dealing with either an alien or a novel doctrine.

Historians can trace the origin of this privilege back to the twelfth century. Apparently it began in controversies between the king and the bishops. The bishops sought to examine people about a wide variety of alleged offenses, and the king sought to limit the bishops to purely ecclesiastical subjects. By the sixteenth century the idea had been reduced to a latin maxim which was rather frequently voiced, but which does not seem by any means to have reflected the practice of that period. This maxim is: Nemo tenetur prodere se ipsum – or, in English, No one should be required to accuse himself. As early as 1589, the young Coke apparently obtained a writ of prohibition against proceedings in the spiritual courts, on this ground. Cullier and Cullier, Cro. Eliz. 201 (1589). But the maxim was then little more than an idea. Over the next 50 years, it was apparently standard practice not only to make suspected persons give evidence against themselves, but also to use torture to make sure that the accused would speak. Indeed, it appears that Coke himself at times participated in the administration of torture for this purpose. As we think of the development of the privilege as it has continued to this day, we should not overlook the fact of its close connection with the struggle to eliminate torture as a governmental practice.

It seems quite clear that we owe the privilege of today primarily to Freeborn John Lilburn. He was a cantankerous person, the sort to whom we owe much for many of our basic rights. One of his contemporaries said that "if all the world was emptied of all but John Lilburn, Lilburn would quarrel with John and John with Lilburn." Like most contentious people, he was stubborn. In 1637, he was haled before the Star Chamber on a charge of having imported certain heretical and seditious books. He refused to take the oath to answer truly, and the Council of the Star Chamber condemned him to be whipped and pilloried, for his "boldness in refusing to take a legal oath," without which many offences might go "undiscovered and unpunished." And in 1638, the sentence was carried out.

But Lilburn persisted. He filed a petition with Parliament, and in 1641 the House of Commons voted that the sentence was "illegal and against the liberty of the subject." Later, the House of Lords concurred with this view, and ordered an indemnity paid to him in the amount of £3,000, which was a very large sum in those days.

This event seems to have been enough to establish the privilege against self-incrimination as a part of the common law. By the latter half of the seventeenth century, we find many occasions when the privilege was recognized by the English courts, and it has been recognized ever since. Indeed, it is still a matter of common law in England. But it is very deeply imbedded in the common law.

Thus, the privilege came to this continent as a part of the legal heritage of our early settlers. Some trace of the privilege is found in this Commonwealth as early as 1637, in the trial of Anne Hutchinson and John Wheelwright. It was also recognized in the other colonies, although the evidences are rather scarce.

Let me read to you a record which has come down to us from Pennsylvania in 1689. In that year, William Bradford was summoned before the Governor and Council of the Province of Pennsylvania. Bradford was the man who introduced the art of printing to the middle provinces of America. He was about twenty-six years old when this episode occurred.

At the instance of one of the citizens of Pennsylvania, Bradford had printed the Charter of the Province so that people could see their rights. He had not put his name on the pamphlet, apparently anticipating some trouble. Here is the examination, chiefly by the Governor. You may want to consider whether you have ever heard anything like it before.

"Governour.–Why, sir, I would know by what power of authority you thus print? Here is the Charter printed!

"Bradford.–It was by Governour Penn's encouragment I came to this Province, and by his license I print.

"Governour.–What, sir, had you license to print the Charter? I desire to know from you, whether you did print the Charter or not, and who set you to work?

"Bradford.–Governour, it is an impracticable thing for any man to accuse himself; thou knows it very well.

"Governour.–Well, I shall not much press you to it, but if you were so ingenuous as to confess, it should go the better with you.

"Bradford.–Governour, I desire to know my accusers; I think it very hard to be put upon accusing myself.

"Governour.–Can you deny that you printed it? I do know you did print it, and by whose directions, and will prove it, and make you smart for it, too, since you are so stubborn.

"John Hill.–I am informed that one hundred and sixty were printed yesterday, and that Jos. Growden saith he gave 20s for his part towards the printing it.

"Bradford.–It's nothing to me, what 'Jos. Growden saith.' Let me know my accusers, and I shall know the better how to make my defence."

Little is heard about self-incrimination during the eighteenth century. This may well have been because the privilege was generally recognized in the colonies after it had become established as a part of the common law of England. Violation of the privilege did not figure as one of the major grievances of the colonists, although there are occasional references to "Inquisitional Courts," and there was complaint about the roving jurisdiction of the admiralty courts during the controversy over the Stamp Acts. The Privilege was included in the Virginia Bill of Rights of 1776 drafted by George Mason, and, apparently largely because of its presence there, it made its way, in various forms, into the constitutions of six or seven of the original States. When the Federal Constitution was ratified, a number of the States proposed amendments, and the privilege against self-incrimination was specifically mentioned. Accordingly, it was included in the proposals made by Congress which became the Fifth Amendment in 1791, and it has been there unchanged ever since. It is truly an old friend, with an ancient and I believe useful history.

A good many efforts have been made to rationlaize the privilege, to explain why it is a desirable or essential part of our basic law. These have been carefully reviewed by Wigmore, and he concludes that none of the explanations is wholly satisfactory. I am going to offer my own attempt to express the reason for the Fifth Amendment, and why I think it is a sound provision of our basic laws, both Federal and State.

I would like to venture the suggestion that the privilege against self-incrimination is one of the great landmarks in man's struggle to make himself civilized. As I have already pointed out, the establishment of the privilege is closely linked historically with the abolition of torture. Now we look upon torture with abhorrence. But torture was once used by honest and conscientious public servants as a means of obtaining information about crimes which could not otherwise be disclosed. We want none of that today, I am sure. For a very similar reason, we do not make even the most hardened criminal sign his own death warrant, or dig his grave, or pull the lever that springs the trap on which he stands. We have through the course of history developed a considerable feeling of the dignity and intrinsic importance of the individual man. Even the evil man is a human being.

If a man has done wrong, he should be punished. But the evidence against him should be produced, and evaluated by a proper court in a fair trial. Neither torture nor an oath nor the threat of punishment such as imprisonment for contempt should be used to compel him to provide the evidence to accuse or to convict himself. If his crime is a serious one careful and often laborious police work may be required to prove it by other evidence. Sometimes no other evidence can be found. But for about three centuries in the Anglo-American legal system, we have accepted the standard that even then we do not compel the accused to provide that evidence. I believe that is a good standard, and that it is an expression of one of the fundamental decencies in the relation we have developed between government and man.

As said by that old tartar, Mr. Justice Stephen J. Field, who was reared in western Massachusetts, "The essential and inherent cruelty of compelling a man to expose his own guilt is obvious to every one, and needs no illustration." And in words which he approved, it is the "result of the long struggle between the opposing forces of the spirit of individual liberty on the one hand and the collective power of the State on the other." Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 591, 637 (1896).

Where matters of a man's belief, or opinions or political views are essential elements in the charge, it may be most difficult to get evidence from sources other than the suspected or accused person himself. Hence, the significance of the privilege over the years has perhaps been greatest in connection with resistance to prosecution for such offences as heresy or political crimes. In these areas the privilege against self-incrimination has been a protection for freedom of thought, and a hindrance to any government which might wish to prosecute for thoughts and opinions alone.

But the privilege is broader than that. It is applicable to any sort of crime, even the most sordid. Don't we go too far in giving this protection to criminals? Isn't the claim of the privilege the clearest sort of proof that the person who claims it is guilty of a crime? This has been asserted by high authority, but I do not believe it is true.

Apart from its expression of our view of civilized governmental conduct, another purpose of the Fifth Amendment is to protect the innocent. But how can a man claim the privilege if he is innocent? How can a man fear he will incriminate himself if he knows he has committed no crime? Judge Magruder of our own First Circuit Court of Appeals has recently given some illustrations of this in his illuminating opinion in the Maffie case, decided last month.

There is, for example, the case of the man who has killed another in self defense, or by accident, without design or fault. He has committed no crime, yet his answer to the question whether he killed the man may well incriminate him. At the very least it will in effect shift the burden of proof to him so that he will have to prove his own innocence. Indeed, the privilege against self-incrimination may well be thought of as a companion of our established rule that a man is innocent until he has been proven guilty.

In this connection let me quote from a Supreme Court decision written long before our present troubles. In Burdick v. United States, 236 U. S. 79 (1915, Mr. Justice McKenna wrote, "If it be objected that [Burdick's] refusal to answer was an implication of crime, we answer, not necessarily in fact, not at all in theory of law."

Now let us turn to an area which is closer to that which has recently been of concern. I am going to ask you to assume two sets of facts. You may think that both of the sets of facts are unlikely, and that they do not correspond with any case you have ever heard of. All I ask is that you assume the facts. I am simply putting a hypothetical case; and the facts are not the facts of any specific case.

Here is Case 1. A man is a college teacher. He is an idealist and perhaps slow to recognize realities as idealists sometimes are. He has a great urge for what he regards as social reform. He is native born, went to American schools, and loves his country despite what he regards as its imperfections. You may not agree with his ideas but you would respect his honesty and sincerity. He believes himself thoroughly attached to the country and the Constitution, and he abhors anything involving force and violence. He is a good teacher and works hard on his subjects. He has always believed that as a good citizen he should be interested in politics. Neither of the established political parties provided what he wanted. In the relatively calm period of the past middle 1930's, on the solicitation of a friend, he went to a communist meeting and soon joined the Communist Party. At that time the Communist Party was perfectly legal and regularly appeared on our ballot. He thought he was simply joining a political party. One of the reasons that led him to join was because he regarded fascism as highly immoral and a great danger to the world, and he felt that the communists were fighting fascism in Spain at this time. His interest was not merely in protecting Spain, but because he thought that fighting fascism there was an important means of guarding against such a danger here

Now you may say that this is all very unlikely. To this I reply that I am, for the moment, only assuming a hypothetical case, and I should be able to assume any hypothetical case I want. So these are the facts I put before you. You may feel that such a man must have been very naive or lacking in intelligence. To that I would make two replies: First, to say that involves the use of a large amount of hindsight. A man's actions at any time should be evaluated on the basis of the facts then available to him, and the state of his own mind on the basis of what he actually knew, and not by facts we learn later that were not known to him. And my second reply would be that the man may have been naive or obtuse. I would say that he was at least misguided and unwise. But I would point out that being obtuse or naive is a very different thing from being a traitor or a spy.

Let me add a few more facts, assumed by me as before. Our teacher was in a communist cell, with other teachers. The communists had great plans for this group. They wanted to use it to infiltrate American education. However, the communist command was canny. They knew that many or all of the members of this cell of teachers were politically innocent, and that they would recoil quickly from any proposals for sabotage or the use of force and violence. So they treated this group with great care. The group was never subjected to the rigors of communist discipline. It was a study group, and its discussions were kept on a high intellectual plane. The more sordid features of the Marxist doctrine were kept thoroughly in the background. Our teacher never engaged in espionage or sabotage or anything like that, and never saw or heard of any such activities by any member of his group. He would have been horrified by any such actions.

Nevertheless, there were things from time to time which he did not like. He rationalized them in various ways–nothing can be perfect; the thing to do is to stay inside and work against excesses; and so on. Besides he was a stubborn fellow. Once having started out on something he thought was good, he did not lightly give it up. But he became troubled; and after the war he slowly drifted away from the group. He never formally resigned. He just turned away. By the time of the Korean invasion in 1950, he was thoroughly disgusted and saw that he had been used as a dupe. But he was also convinced in his own heart of the rectitude of his actions, if not of their wisdom; and he did not doubt that many of the people who had been associated with him in the venture were just as innocent of wrong-doing as he was sure he was.

Remember I am doing the assuming. You may feel that these facts do not fit an actual case. But I am not trying to state an actual case. I am just assuming a hypothetical case, which is one of the ancient rights of any law teacher.

Now let me turn to Case 2. This man is also a college teacher. He never joined the Communist Party. He never thought of joining the Communist Party. He knew a good deal about the realities of communism, and he was thoroughly opposed to it. He was, however, a man who was interested in causes. His father had been a minister, who had dedicated his life to helping people. He himself had a great urge to participate in activities which he felt would help to alleviate suffering or contribute to social progress. In fact he was a sucker for almost any kind of an appeal. He contributed modest amounts to China Relief. He had always had a warm feeling for the Chinese. Sometimes he found himself on some of the letterheads of some of these organizations as a sponsor. He was not sure that he remembered giving permission to use his name this way; but the cause, as indicated by the attractive name of the organization, was one that appealed to him, and he did not bother himself much about it. After a while he heard some rumblings that there might be some communist influence in these organizations, but he was slow to believe that that could true. In some of the organizations, he had been on committees with thoroughly respectable fellow citizens. He did not want to pull out, because he felt that this would let his friends down. Eventually he heard that some of these organizations had been ruled to be subversive by the Attorney General. But he, too, was a stubborn fellow. He believed in the stated objectives of these organizations. He was also a freeborn American, proud of his country's great traditions, and he allowed his name to be used by some of these organizations, as has been said in a recent article, "as a gesture of opposition to the procedure of proscribing organizations without giving them the right to be heard."

Well, that is the end of my assuming. Let us see what happens to these two individuals. Remember that both of these individuals feel that they are innocent of any wrongdoing. Each one is pure in heart, and perhaps a little too certain of his own rectitude. Each one may now regret some of the things he did, but he does not think that they were wrong. Each one is certain that he is morally innocent of any crime.

We can consider Case 1 first. He is the man who was a member of the Communist Party. He is summoned to appear before a Congressional committee, and is asked whether he is a communist. He answers truthfully: "No." Then he is asked whether he ever was a communist. He is now surely subjected to a substantial risk, even though he honestly believes that he has committed no crime. He knows that a number of communists have been convicted under the Smith Act of 1940, and more have been indicted. Our teacher perhaps magnifies his own predicament. He sees the jail doors opening up if he gives himself the evidence that he was once a communist. Interestingly enough, Section 4(f) of the Internal Security Act of 1950 (commonly known as the McCarran Act) provides specifically that "Neither the holding of office nor membership in any communist organization by any person shall constitute per se a violation of . . . this section or of any other criminal statute." But this was enacted after his period of Party membership. It has been declared to be a crime to be a communist in Massachusetts since 1951, but there may be some possible room to question the effectiveness of this statute in view of the provision of the Federal Act. That the Federal statutes may displace State action is indicated by a decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania just last week.

After much internal torment, the witness finally decides to claim the privilege of the Fifth Amendment with respect to the question of his past membership in the Communist Party. Putting aside the question of his wisdom in doing this, can there be any doubt that the claim is legally proper? Past membership in the Communist Party is not a crime in itself; but admitting such membership may well be a link in a chain of proof of a criminal charge against him. Persons have been prosecuted under the Smith Act for membership in the Communist Party plus something else. If he supplies the proof of his own membership in the Party, he does not know what other evidence may then be brought against him to show that he has committed a crime. Thus, an answer to the question will definitely incriminate him, that is, provide evidence which could be used in a prosecution against him. Yet, remember that he thoroughly believes that he is not guilty of any crime; and on the facts I have given he is not guilty of a crime.

There are other factors that influence his conclusion. His own experience is an ordeal. He does not want his friends to be subjected to it. He believes in their innocence of any crime. If he thought that they had committed crimes, he would promptly tell the proper officers of the government. By claiming the privilege against self-incrimination, he can refrain from naming any of his associates. He feels a strong sense of loyalty to them. He feels a strong sense of loyalty to his country, too; but since he is convinced that neither he nor his associates have in fact done anything wrong, his desire to protect them from having to experience his own predicament seems to him to have prevailing weight in the actual circumstances.

He claims the privilege. He cannot be prosecuted on the basis of any evidence he has provided. There can be no doubt, I believe, that his claim of privilege is legally justified. Yet, note that on the facts I have assumed he is not guilty of any crime. Of course his claim of privilege as to his membership in the Communist Party means that he must also claim the privilege as to all other questions which relate in any way to what he did, or to his associates in the activity. For if he answers any of those questions, it will clearly connote his own communist activity.

There is one small point which might be brought in here. It is sometimes said that the privilege may only be rightly claimed if the answer to the incriminating question would be "yes." I do not believe that is true. Our man in Case 1 has testified that he is not now a communist. He claims the privilege as to a question which asks him if he ever was a member of the Communist Party. He is then asked: "When did you cease to be a member?" He must claim the privilege as to this, or else his answer will disclose that he once was a member, as to which he has legitimately claimed the privilege. Then the examiner starts a new line. He says: "Were you a member of the Communist Party yesterday?" Now the answer is "No." But the witness who has taken this line cannot answer that question. For if he does, the questions will be continued: "Were you a member of the Party last year?—two years ago?—three years ago?" If he answers any of these accurately with a "no," he will come to the place where he must claim the privilege if he is to maintain his basic position. In this way, the date of his withdrawal could be pinpointed, thus giving valuable information for a possible prosecution. Moreover, he may not be sure just when he withdrew; it was a gradual process. And he may have legitimate fears that an honest answer he might give to a question relating to the transitional period might get him involved in a prosecution for perjury. At any rate, it seems clear that questions of this sort are an illustration of a type of question as to which the privilege may be legitimately claimed, as far as the law is concerned, even though the answer to the question would be "no."

Let us turn to Case 2, which we can dispose of briefly. You will remember that that was the man who had lent his name to causes, and had contributed money; and the causes have now turned out to be communist fronts, although they were attractively named, and many good Americans were, at one time or another, associated with them. But he was never a member of the Communist Party.

This man likewise is summoned before a Congressional investigating committee. The mere fact that he is summoned shows that he is suspected of something rather serious, and he is badly worried. He is asked whether he is now a member of the Communist Party; and he answers "No." Then he is asked whether he ever was in the past. The answer is in fact "no," as we have seen. But he is now in great fear. If he says "No," then he may be subjecting himself to a real risk of a prosecution for perjury. He may rightly fear that proof of the fact of his joining and contributing to so many agencies which have turned out to be front organizations might lead a jury to believe that he actually was a communist.

Now it is probably true that fear of a prosecution for perjury for an answer given to a question is not a proper basis for a claim of the privilege. If it was, almost any witness could claim the privilege as to any question. But our man is in a somewhat different situation. If he says "No," to the question of communist membership, then in his own interest he may have to undertake to state and explain his membership and activities in the various front organizations. The net result may be that he will have to give much evidence which could be used against him in an attempt to prove that he was a member of the communist conspiracy. It would appear, therefore, that he can properly claim the privilege even though his answer to the question as to Communist Party membership at any time would honestly and rightly be "No."

In both of the cases I have put, the privilege may be claimed although the individual was guilty of no crime. In the second case it may be claimed although the person was never a member of the Communist Party. In each case, the inference which would be taken from the claim of the privilege would in fact be unwarranted. The claim of the privilege is surely a serious business, but it is equally surely not the equivalent of an admission of criminal conduct.

There are other reasons why a person may claim the privilege in a particular case. He might get bad advice; but I do not want to press that, as I think that in many of these cases the individual's troubles are caused in part by the fact that he chooses to make his own decisions and does not accept sound advice. But we should not forget that a person on the witness stand may be badly frightened, even though he is wholly innocent. For example, the Supreme Court of the United States has said, in Wilson v. United States, 149 U.S. 60, 66 (1893):

"It is not every one who can safely venture on the witness stand though entirely innocent of the charge against him. Excessive timidity, nervousness when facing others and attempting to explain transactions of a suspicious character, and offences charged against him, will often confuse and embarrass him to such a degree as to increase rather than remove prejudices against him. It is not every one, however honest, who would, therefore, willingly be placed on the witness stand."

A witness lost in fear and confusion might turn to the privilege as a means of sanctuary from a situation which he feels himself incompetent to handle. Consider also how much the chance of a witness losing his calm and collected demeanor is enhanced by such things as television, radio microphones, movie cameras, flashing flash bulbs, and procedures which may not seem to him to be based upon the finest spirit of fairness. In connection with this I might mention the recent decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Aiuppa v. United States, 201 F.2d 287, 300 (1952), where we find the following language in the opinion:

"But, in concluding, we think it may not be amiss to say that, notwithstanding the pronouncements of the committee chairman as to intended fairness, the courts of the United States could not emulate the committee's example and maintain even a semblance of fair and dispassionate conduct of trials in criminal cases.

"Despite the enjoyment by millions of spectators and auditors of the exhibition by television of the confusion and writhings of widely known malefactors and criminals, when sharply questioned as to their nefarious activities, we are unable to give judicial sanction, in the teeth of the Fifth Amendment, to the employment by a committee of the United States Senate of methods of examination of witnesses constituting a triple threat: answer truly and you have given evidence leading to your conviction for a violation of federal law; answer falsely and you will be convicted of perjury; refuse to answer and you will be found guilty of criminal contempt and punished by fine and imprisonment. In our humble judgment, to place a person not even on trial for a specified crime in such predicament is not only not a manifestation of fair play, but is in direct violation of the Fifth Amendment to our national Constitution."

Ordinarily when the privilege of the Fifth Amendment is exercised, it is in a criminal trial. There a specific charge has been made, and the prosecution has by evidence established a prima facie case of guilt of the particular crime charged in the complaint or indictment. Under such circumstances there is much more than the mere claim of the privilege on which to rest an inference of guilt.

In investigations, however, there are no carefully formulated charges. Evidence to support such charges has not been introduced and made known to the witness before he is called upon to answer. He has no opportunity for cross-examination of other witnesses, and often little or no opportunity to make explanations which might have a material bearing on the whole situation. In the setting of an investigation, therefore, the basis for the inference from a claim of privilege against self incrimination is much less than it is when the privilege is exercised in an ordinary criminal trial.

There are two more matters to which I should like to make brief reference. The first of these is the rather technical legal doctrine known as waiver of the privilege. A clear instance of waiver occurs when a defendant in a criminal case voluntarily takes the stand. He then becomes subject to cross-examination, and must answer relevant questions. So far as witnesses at investigations are concerned, our current learning on this is based largely on the Supreme Court's decision in Rogers v. United States, 340 U.S. 367 (1951). In that case, a witness testified that she had been treasurer of a local communist party, had had possession of the records, and had turned them over to another person. She then declined to name the person to whom she had given them, claiming the privilege under the Fifth Amendment. The Supreme Court held that by giving the testimony she did she had waived the privilege, and that she was guilty of contempt for refusing to answer the further questions. There was a dissenting opinion by Justices Black, Frankfurter, and Douglas.

My own view is that this decision was not soundly reasoned, and that it has led to unfortunate results. To me the analogy of an adversary proceeding is not apt when applied to an investigation. As a consequence of this case, witnesses who have legitimate fears of prosecution, but who might be willing to cooperate as far as they could, are induced (if not actually compelled) to refuse to answer any questions at all. For if they do answer a single question, it may be contended that they have waived the privilege so that thereafter they may be compelled to testify against themselves. This threat of waiver is not an imaginary matter. It may be found frequently in the transcripts of the proceedings of Congressional committees.

My guess as to the law is that the Rogers case applies only where the witness has given an incriminating answer to a prior question. I do not think it would apply if a witness was asked if he had been a member of the Communist Party in 1945, and he said "No." By the latter answer he has not opened up anything which he refuses to explain. Nevertheless, it will take a Supreme Court decision to provide this clarification of the Rogers case; and counsel advising a client may well hesitate to make his client bear the risk and expense of taking a case all the way to the Supreme Court. With the Rogers case on the books, the only safe advice may be to claim the privilege at the earliest possible moment, so as to be sure to avoid a charge of waiver.

This doctrine of waiver is, I believe, the true explanation of the refusal of some witnesses to answer such questions as "Have you ever taught communist doctrine in your classroom?" or "Have you ever solicited students to join the Communist Party? These refusals have been deeply disturbing to the public. Wet, answers to these questions may be "No;" but the witness nevertheless fears that he cannot give that answer without its being said that he has waived the privilege as to questions about other sorts of communist activity. Here again we have a situation where the obvious inference from the refusal to answer the question may be completely unwarranted.

Finally, I would like to make reference to one more problem which is collateral to that of the Fifth Amendment. Suppose a witness is summoned before an investigating committee. He does not claim a privilege against self-incrimination, and talks freely about himself, answering all questions about his own activity. He takes the position, however, that he will not answer questions about others. Or suppose a person first refuses to answer virtually all questions, claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege, but he later decides to waive the privilege as to himself. However, he refuses as a matter which he regards as one of principle to identify other people. What should be the situation with respect to such a person?

There have been a number of people who have been summoned before investigating committees and taken this position from the outset. They have answered all questions about themselves, and have refused to identify others. As far as I know, no academic person who has done this has been cited for contempt; nor has any such person lost his job. Should it be any different where the witness has first relied on the Fifth Amendment, but has later changed his position, waiving the privilege as to himself, but still refusing to answer as to others?

The problem is undeniably a difficult one. So long as the witness was claiming the privilege, it could be argued that he had done no wrong. If he had committed any crime, the evidence should be brought forth in the proper way and tried out in court. His refusal to answer was not evidence of any crime. This argument, however, is not available where he waives the privilege by refusing to answer questions relating to other persons. Then his Fifth Amendment privilege is wholly gone, and his situation presents new and rather different problems.

Whether he has committed a crime by his refusal to testify may be extremely difficult to tell. Even if he is cited by the legislative body, it will still be for the grand jury to decide whether to indict; it will remain to the courts to decide such questions as whether the committee was properly constituted, and whether the question asked was relevant to the inquiry. We should not forget that a prosecution for contempt was set aside within the past year by the Supreme Court on the ground that the questions asked the witness—as to the identity of his contributors—were not relevant to the particular inquiry. United States v. Rumeley, 345 U.S. 41 (1953).

However such questions go, though, would it not seem that such a person is at least in no worse a position morally than he was when he stood on the Fifth Amendment? He should not be worse off for being willing to speak fully and frankly about himself than he was when he would not talk at all. His refusal to tell on his friends may be both contrary to valid law and unwise. Nevertheless, it may be based on strong grounds of conscience.

Let me do a little more assuming: Let us assume that the witness feels positive in his own mind that the persons with whom he was associated did no wrong to our country. They did not engage in espionage or sabotage or anything like that. They were merely hopeful but misguided people, as he was. Let us assume, too, that this is all far in the past. The persons in question are in other work. They have families to support. If their names are disclosed, they will surely lose their jobs. He must then resolve for himself the question whether he will give their names and subject them to the same sort of ordeal he has been through in order to save himself from further difficulty and possible prosecution. He may be wrong if he decides that he should not protect himself by sacrificing them. I recognize the legal obligation to testify as to others, and the general importance of this both in trials and in investigations. But can it be said clearly that his action is always immoral?

Of course he may be wrong in his judgment of these other people. They may be worse than he thinks they are. But we all have to use judgment on such things. A man may honestly feel that he cannot bring suffering to others in order to save himself. To a considerable extent such questions can only be resolved in a man's own conscience. We are a society which has long depended on and applauded the virtues of the rugged individualist.

I do not justify the past or present conduct of anyone. I seek only to explain. Because of claims of privilege under the Fifth Amendment, and refusal to answer questions, many members of the general public have come to have fear of our educational institutions, and general mistrust of academic people. I firmly believe that these fears are unwarranted. I have tried tonight to show how some of the things that have happened could have happened without there being anything rotten in the universities. It may be a serious error of judgment for an academic person to claim the privilege of the Fifth Amendment, or to refuse to answer questions; but the conduct, regrettable as it is, does not show the existence of treason, espionage, sabotage, or any other serious crime.

The great misfortune from all this, I believe, is that charges are made against our universities and other educational institutions, and more or less believed by some segments of our people. I think myself that it is easy to overestimate the extent of that belief, but it cannot be denied that there is disagreement, uneasiness and even fear in some quarters. As I have said, I think these fears are not soundly based. This is my twentieth year as a Faculty member at Harvard University, and I am thoroughly convinced that the University has acquitted itself well, and that it has been of great value to the country during that time. It is an injustice not only to the faculty members but to the country to allow any conclusion to stand that they are not good Americans or that they do not serve their country well. I think that the Harvard Law School with which I am intimately connected, is a great asset to the country and to the Commonwealth, and, in essence, one of the great conservative influences in our land. If there are any who think otherwise, let them examine the facts, carefully and thoughtfully.

As conservative a judge as Pierce Butler once wrote (Sinclair v. United States, 279 U.S. 135, 178 (1927)):

> "It has always been recognized in this country, and it is well to remember, that few if any of the rights of the people guarded by fundamental law are of greater importance to their happiness and safety than the right to be exempt from all unauthorized, arbitrary or unreasonable inquiries and disclosures in respect of their personal and private affairs."

On this matter some final observations may be in order, based on our traditional practices and rules. In our criminal courts, we would never think of requiring an accused person to answer questions. He doesn't have to take the stand at all, and if he does do so, he has the protection of an impartial judge, and the right to have his counsel speak in court in his behalf.

Why should it be so different in a legislative inquiry, when the information that is sought relates to the witness' own conduct? I recognize fully the power of the Senate and the House of Representatives, the lineal descendants of the Houses of Parliament. These are deliberative bodies, and all points of view are usually represented among their members. Their actions are taken after debate, and represent the judgment of many people from all parts of the country.

I recognize also that these bodies have to operate through committees. A committee in the common acceptance of the term is a group of persons, usually appointed to represent various points of view. Its actions reflect collective judgment taken after consideration and deliberation. In this light, I ask a question: Should these broad investigative powers ever be held by a single person, even though he is formally clothed with the title of a sub-committee?

The more I think about this, the more it seems to me to be an unsound practice. There is nothing about the nature of membership in the Senate or the House of Representatives which should give each member a general commission to go through the length and breadth of the land, far from his own state or district, far from the seat of the general government, making inquiry about any subject, even on formal delegation to him from his House or one of its committees. Committees I am willing to accept. Sub-committees of one give me pause. It may well be that only the Houses of Congress can effectively deal with this problem, but I respectfully commend it to them for their consideration.

And so I come back where I started. The privilege against self incrimination embodied in the Fifth Amendment and in the Commonwealth's Bill of Rights has been a long time with us. It is, I believe, a good friend as well as an old friend. It embodies a sound value which we should preserve. As we increase our understanding of it, and the part it has long played in protecting the individual against the collective power of the state, we will have better appreciation of some of the basic problems of our time.

How to Lose Prestige in Europe

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Distinguished news-commentator asks correspondents to sum up effect on Allies of Senator McCarthy's skirmish with United States Army; reactions range from plain disgust to fear of fascism; press abroad sees damage to America's reputation.

Edward C. Murrow in a News Commentary on the Columbia Broadcasting System

I cabled four of our correspondents in Europe, asking them to summarize reaction in the countries where they are stationed to Senator McCarthy's recent actions. Their cables are here in front of me. Permit me to quote from some of these cables. The first one comes from David Schoenbrun in Paris.

"'Senator McCarthy and Marilyn Monroe Attack United States Army on Two Fronts,' is the headline feature piece from Washington in Paris influential Le Monde tonight. Their correspondent cabled: 'The spectacle presented by McCarthy committee is sheer buffoonery.' And the correspondent concludes: 'Despite protests, Senator McCarthy will continue to exercise his talents, for, in fact, a large part of the American Administration, including Secretary Stevens and the unfortunate Gen. Zwicker, themselves approve the general line and objectives of McCarthy, reserving their criticism only for his methods'."

Schoenbrun says: "This is the general tenor of French observation about McCarthy, and most French believe this is a serious error on the part of Americans. They don't think a line can be drawn between objectives and methods, particularly when methods, as in the McCarthy case, are so spectacular and destructive that they obviously achieve objectives far removed from the avowed one.

On Burning Down the Barn

"It's a case of burning down the barn to catch a rat, one French editor told me, pointing out that it's ridiculous to say you approve rat-catching, although you deplore the fact that the barn burned down. You can't separate the two, any more than you can say that you approved Hitler's army while deploring his uncouth [illegible]

[illegible] Government officials and [illegible] refuse on-the-record comment, telling they have no right to express opinions on American domestic politics. But all, without exception, express privately consternation at the loss of American prestige among masses of people here, leading to serious doubts about the authority and constancy of American policy.

Vienna's Reaction to McCarthy

"One French statesman told me: 'I hope you won't make too much of French criticism of McCarthy, because you will be sure to make him a hero back home if we attack him'."

The second cable comes from Howard K. Smith in London and he says: "The British happen to be acutely alarmed at Senator McCarthy presently, as their concern for the demoralization of the United States Army, whereon all free Europe depends, coincides with the first close-up experience of one of the Senator's investigations." And Smith says that in a TV program scheduled months ago, a former MP, Aden Crawley, night before last, narrated shots of McCarthy questioning Reed Harris, and the press reacted to what they term 'the smear-and-run methods' with disgust, with a disgust that one feels examining creatures on the moist underside of a garden rock for the first time.

The News Chronicle correspondent in London says: 'It's one thing to read about a witch-hunt and quite another to see it at close quarters. It's not very pretty but it's very instructive.'

Smith's cable continues: "The Senator's assault on the Army alarms a wide range of press. The Conservative Evening News today says: 'Were this merely a domestic scandal in a friendly country, no comment would be called for. But, clearly, it's a matter of principle which concerns all who want to both maintain freedom and order in the democratic society and to fight Communism.'

British Alarm Over Army Morale

"And the Conservative Daily Telegraph says: 'Even the most understanding friends of America abroad find it hard to preserve a sense of balance about activities epitomized in the name of Senator McCarthy. His attacks on America's allies, notably the 'blood trade' business, the smearing of Britain, have produced something worse than irritation. World Communism couldn't ask for richer ore than pours into its propaganda machine every time Senator McCarthy makes an utterance'."

There's another cable, from Alex Kendrick in Vienna, in which he says: "It must be trite by now to recall that this part of Europe was responsible for Hitler and saw Nazism come to power in the guise of an anti-Communist crusade. Yet, just for that reason people here who have been pushed around for 20 years, first by their own native fascists and then by Hitler and then by the Russians, have come to dislike those who do the pushing, especially when it's to the detriment of democratic processes and government."

Kendrick says: "That sums up the attitude hereabout toward McCarthy. He is not regarded as an international threat, like Hitler proved, but as one of the primary reasons for the serious loss of American prestige in an area where such prestige is important because we are here to face with the Communists [illegible]

[illegible] headqu[illegible] Eisenhower has not stepped up to what McCarthy is trying to do to the Army, which, after all, as one senior officer said: 'It isn't only our Army, but it's supposed to be his army too'.

CREDIT TO SEN. HENNINGS

The fight provoked by the proposed Bricker amendment to the Constitution is over—at least for the time being. Senator George's substitute, which was either confusing, dangerous or unnecessary, or perhaps all three, went down in the voting.

Much of the credit for the rejection of the George plan goes to Senator Thomas C. Hennings of Missouri, who is serving his first term in the upper house at the comparatively youthful age of 50. As William S. White wrote in this newspaper:

"For weeks Mr. Hennings, sometimes almost alone, had carried the brief for the anti-amendment forces, though this required him to challenge Senator George, who is a patriarchal figure to nearly all the Democrats, Northern and Southern alike." It was good to see courage in a room and at a time where many men are timid.

With this preposterous issue out of the way Congress may be able to get on with its other work. If any Senators or any citizens still believe that treaties are made rashly and ratified in haste under present procedures the remedy surely lies with the Senators themselves. They don't have to be rash and they don't have to be hasty.

Trials of the Presidency

THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT, by Sidney Hyman. (Harper & Bros., 242 pgs., $4.)

The voluminous literature about the presidency of the United States has a new addition which the publishers, according to the dust jacket, believe to be "the most valuable book yet written" in this field. Sidney Hyman's "The American President" is, undoubtedly, a good book, but it is not definitive, it is not complete, and it is not the best.

The author has been identified closely with the Democratic party for a number of years. He was a helper in Adlai Stevenson's governorship campaign in 1948, an assistant to Senator Douglas, Director of Research of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation, and a personal campaign staff member with Stevenson in the 1952 presidential race. Hyman does a fair job in keeping his preferences out of the book, though perhaps his incompetents are more often Republicans and his heroes more often Democrats.

This study of the presidency contains some valuable insights. Hyman emphasizes the value of public relations sense on the President's part; in fact, he overemphasizes this point by insisting that the real differentiation between strong and weak Presidents is the capacity to manage . . . "the slippery imponderables of public opinion." This is an oversimplification, but the significance of the idea is readily apparent, when Hyman points out the need for each President to develop a "pro-tem majority in Congress composed of members of both parties with a substantial popular backing throughout the country. Mr. Eisenhower should be able to testify vigorously in support of this proposition.

Another aspect of the presidency, often overlooked, is the simple impossibility of pleasing everyone. The predicament is well sketched: "If he leads, he is a dictator. If he follows, he is a weakling. If he appoints old friends to high places, he governs by crony. If he gets rid of them when they prove unequal to their new places, he "uses" people. If he speaks directly to the nation, he is a demagogue. If he waits for a proper moment to disclose bits of news, he withholds vital information a free people must have if it is to make wise decisions. And so on."

There is an interesting [illegible] of several current electoral reforms, proposals of which Hyman generally approves. Later, he defends [illegible] initia[illegible] [illegible] quoted, the [illegible] [illegible] political [illegible] [illegible] President's effo[illegible] the interested citizen, it will be [illegible] able reading.

R. R. MACKENZIE

Facts Twisted to Fancy

THE NEGRO IN SOUTHERN AGRICULTURE, by Victor Perlo (International Publishers, New York, 128 pgs., $1.75).

Here is a book which states many facts that thoughtful people recognize as true about Southern agriculture. But it twists their significance to serve the author's purpose. The author is an economist who recently, on request, contributed an article to Pravda picturing the United States as threatened with depression. He has been named in congressional investigations as involved in Soviet espionage activities, has denied under oath any current membership in a Soviet espionage ring but refused to answer questions about Communist affiliations.

It appears quite natural to him to quote Lenin, link the current condition of Southern Negroes in agriculture with Wall Street, paint a picture of "misery in the midst of plenty," seek to inflate the whole situation into a national and international issue. This enables him to attack United States programs to aid underdeveloped countries and imply that Americans have no business to talk about exploitation in other lands.

Railroad Engineer's Son Shows Up 'Joe'

Murrow Sees Fakery In Senator's Drive

One of the most telling blows sustained by Senator "Jumping Joe" McCarthy during the past week was delivered by the son of a veteran railroad engineer—that is, by Edward R. Murrow, noted radio-television commentator.

Murrow's father, now retired, was first a brakeman and fireman, then an engineer on a private logging camp railroad near Blanchard, Wash. As a youth, Ed himself worked as a fireman on a donkey engine in that camp.

Ed, now famous for his "See It Now" television programs, devoted one of them to documenting McCarthy's tactics. He showed how "Jumping Joe" played fast and loose with the facts; how he used congressional immunity to persecute individuals who are not Reds; how he utilized "half truths" to confuse the public.

Murrow's broadcast drew the wrath of McCarthy, but it also brought many thousands of congratulatory phone calls, wires and letters. The deluge ran almost 20 to 1 pro-Murrow.

On the program, Joe was pictured in news films making various statements. Then Murrow demonstrated from the record the falsity of the statements.

"We must not confuse dissent with disloyalty," Murrow pointed out. "We must remember always that accusation is not proof and that conviction depends upon evidence and due process of law.

"It is necessary to investigate before legislating, but the line between investigating and persecuting is a very fine one, and the junior senator from Wisconsin has stepped over it repeatedly."

Murrow invited McCarthy—who in the past has praised the fairness of Murrow's programs—to make a reply on "See It Now." Instead, "Joe" went on another radio program in an effort to smear Murrow as a "Red."

He did this by raking up a story that in 1935 Murrow had been a member of an American advisory council for a summer school at Moscow University.

Murrow replied, however, that the Russians had cancelled the summer school, so it never took place. He explained, too, that the proposed school was part of a student and professor exchange program sponsored by the Institute of International Education—of which John Foster Dulles, now Secretary of State, and Thomas Lamont, Wall Street banker, were trustees.

The proposed summer school, Murrow added, would have allowed American teachers and graduate students to probe Russian life—which is apparently why the Soviets cancelled it. Meantime, Murrow renewed his invitation to McCarthy personally to answer the previous "See It Now" program.

McCarthy finally agreed, in a telegram charging Murrow had "consciously served the Communist cause." Murrow retorted that "the record when it is finished will show who has served the Communist cause, you or I."

This suggestion that McCarthy is in fact serving the Communist cause was documented recently by James Kearney, editor and publisher of the Trenton (N. J.) Times. Kearney is also a prominent Catholic layman..

In a widely-reprinted editorial, Kearney pointed out that McCarthy has "undermined the people who work in our embassies abroad," has "convinced public opinion in Europe that there is little if any freedom left in the U. S.," has "spread doubts through American public life," has undermined Army morale and has "sidetracked" and "undermined the effectiveness of the FBI."

All these results, Kearney emphasized, are precisely the aims of the Communist party.

Moreover, Kearney continued, "Senator McCarthy, for all of his charges, has yet to uncover a Communist in a high or important place. Isn't it a desire of the Communists to spread confusion without endangering the really important members of the Communist party?

Kearney charged that "Senator McCarthy has been doing the work of the Communist party," and concluded: "Isn't it proper now to ask, Is Senator McCarthy really a Communist?"

THE McCARTHY STRONGHOLDS

I—IMPRESSIONS OF A TOUR IN THE MIDDLE WEST

From Our Special Correspondent

The British traveller in the Middle West can soon lose his bearings, especially if he is on the track of Senator McCarthy. He will find little sign, except in an utter confusion of thought and sentiment, of the fear psychosis that is supposed to lie over the land. The old adage about smoke and fire is produced every day with an air of profundity; but the smoke of the Middle West probably rises as much from its own frictions, its teeming productivity, and an inescapable consciousness of the outside world, as from any internal fires of the Communist conspiracy. No one is disposed to link the American Communists, for instance, with organized crime in Chicago, though Communism as a definable term has taken on more shades of meaning in the American mind than a plot to overthrow the Government.

In the middle of the fumes stands the grimed, compelling figure of Mr. McCarthy, and people are beginning to perceive that his investigations are making rather more smoke than the Communist fires uncovered by Mr. Edgar Hoover's agents. He emerges less clearly from his background in the Middle West than from the broader sophistication of New York or Washington, which have perhaps a keener ear for his sound and fury. Here the assessment of Mr. McCarthy, at best a study in intangibles, is necessarily more concerned with a Middle West state of mind, or climate, than with the obscurantism of a quick-footed politician whose ambitions, according to his confidants, do not stop short of the White House.

Such an approach in these strongholds of authentic Americanism suggests a number of reasons for Mr. McCarthy's long reach besides the obvious fact that he was returned to Congress by the State of Wisconsin. One of them, an apparent paradox, is that he almost defies intelligent discussion among all but his avowed opponents, who are relatively as numerous, and often as passive, in Chicago or Milwaukee as in most American cities.

FEAR AND PREJUDICE

The observer is at first baffled by this Middle West unawareness of the to "complaining foreigners." He should tell them that, thank God, the United States had no one like Thorez and Duclos, or Togliatti. "Nor do we have to apologize for millions of traitorous Communists all over the country." This is a fairly popular attitude.

It may be that the menace of "McCarthyism" to free speech and thought is prone to exaggeration, just as the fear of domestic Communism on which it feeds has no defined substance; that both are manifestations of a mass neurosis often depicted as an inevitable phase of the great American transition. The stage has now been reached by the Hearst Press and its allies where almost any resistance to the Senator's privileged attacks is seen to be tarred with the Communist brush.

MANY VICTIMS

It is depressing that so few in the Middle West seem to be aware that the victims of "McCarthyism" are strewn over the whole field of American public and cultural life, often at the cost of their livelihood and certainly of their reputation. It took a member of the Illinois State Senate, who must know something of congressional immunity, to remark that if Mr. McCarthy had harmed anyone unjustly he had yet to be taken to court. The United Nations may be pictured as a nest of spies and saboteurs, or treacherous charges may be laid against individuals of high repute without proof or trial. The careers of actors and writers, especially in radio and television—the legitimate stage is freer from the prejudices of sponsors—may be wrecked by a telephone call or a reference to Red Channels. Scores of these people, it is stated, are on the streets, victims of "faceless, nameless" accusations, as one critic calls them.

Dispatches from the capital on the havoc he is said to be creating within the Government say that all over Europe and Washington there are American public servants with resignations "signed, sealed and pocketed" against the day when other posts are found and family affairs set in order. Mr. Theodore Kaghan, describing the European adventures of Mr. Cohn and Mr. Schine which preceded his forced resignation from the American High

One of them, an apparent paradox, is that he almost defies intelligent discussion among all but his avowed opponents, who are relatively as numerous, and often as passive, in Chicago or Milwaukee as in most American cities.

FEAR AND PREJUDICE

The observer is at first baffled by this Middle West unawareness of the McCarthy phenomenon and of implications that evoke perplexed interest, if not haunting comparisons, across the Atlantic. It is an unawareness that strongly indicates how much of Mr. McCarthy's appeal is to the unthinking, to their fears and prejudices and to a conformist urge that is probably the most potent factor in American assimilation. These emotions, by no means peculiar to the Middle West, make a doubly sharp impact on the vast inner lands emerging more slowly than might be thought from their long traditions of isolation, where all foreign influences, whether they emanate from London or Washington, are still deeply distrusted and the word "internationalist" is used as an epithet.

For all the concentrations of industry on the shores of the Great Lakes, the Middle West states are essentially agricultural. The big blocks of German, Scandinavian, Polish, Italian, and Irish immigrants with their innate attitudes and instincts have not responded so completely to the "melting-pot" process as to have yet lost their identity. They have evolved an aggressive Americanism of their own, and it must be presumed that Mr. McCarthy, whatever his political tactics and ambitions, speaks with the shrill voice of the Middle West. If it be objected that an area which would swallow most countries of Europe is incapable of ready definition, it can still be no accident that such lesser prosecutors of the heresy hunt as Senator Jenner, Senator Dirksen, and Representative Velde come from the neighbouring states of Indiana and Illinois. It should also be noted that Mr. Adlai Stevenson, who as Governor of Illinois was known to veto some of the more arrant demands of "McCarthyism," has opened offices in Chicago from which, no doubt, the fight against intolerance will go on.

GIANT-KILLER

Americans returning here from extended Coronation tours are apt to ask why so much fuss is being made over Mr. McCarthy in Britain and Europe. They resent having been forced to defend him—admittedly a rather equivocal position for the average man of affairs, who sees the Senator as a sort of giant-killer among the Communists but like most fair-minded people find his methods a little repugnant. A professor of a different mind recently wrote to the newspapers that Americans abroad were tired of apologizing for Mr. McCarthy. He was quickly furnished with a suitable answer unjustly he had yet to be taken to court. The United Nations may be pictured as a nest of spies and saboteurs, or treacherous charges may be laid against individuals of high repute without proof or trial. The careers of actors and writers, especially in radio and television—the legitimate stage is freer from the prejudices of sponsors—may be wrecked by a telephone call or a reference to Red Channels. Scores of these people, it is stated, are on the streets, victims of "faceless, nameless" accusations, as one critic calls them.

Dispatches from the capital on the havoc he is said to be creating within the Government say that all over Europe and Washington there are American public servants with resignations "signed, sealed and pocketed" against the day when other posts are found and family affairs set in order. Mr. Theodore Kaghan, describing the European adventures of Mr. Cohn and Mr. Schine which preceded his forced resignation from the American High Commission in Bonn, relates how he was warned on his return to Washington not to use the telephone in the State Department. He understood that all calls were tapped; and, Mr. Kaghan states, when a senior official came to his office with advice on the McCarthy hearings he took out a pencil and wrote "Let's get out of here. This place is wired."

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY

The Middle West, it seems, knows little and cares less about these things. If the morale of Washington or the United Nations secretariat be too remote for its concern, the "inquisitors," as Senator Lehman calls them, came nearer home not long ago when the Jenner investigating committee, which spends much time "on the road," held a two-day hearing at Chicago University, a great seat of liberal tradition. It opened as usual with a private session at which Communist suspects were heard. The public hearings were reserved for a number of students and minor members of the faculty who either admitted past membership of the party or, on the constitutional ground of possible self-incrimination, refused to say whether they were or had been Communists. Another witness admitted having belonged to a Communist cell at his university in the 1930s, but declined to name its leader out of repugnance to act as an informer, an attitude that makes him liable to imprisonment for contempt.

It is this reluctance to give names, no doubt, that has led many witnesses to stand on the Fifth Amendment. It is not yet a criminal offence to be a Communist, though current legislation in Illinois tends towards that position. Under the Smith Act, of course, it is possible to maintain that any Communist is necessarily conspiring to "teach and advocate" the forceful overthrow of the Government, and the leaders of the American party are in gaol on that score. Refusal to testify, therefore, is increasingly viewed as an admission of "guilt" and in many instances as ground for dismissal. Mr. Trygve Lie, then Secretary-General of the United Nations, was in the end constrained to dismiss American members of his staff who had taken this position, and the McCarthy camp had struck its first telling blow in the international field. Several universities have since closed their doors to all who refuse to answer the "64-dollar question" of the contemporary American scene.

THE McCARTHY STRONGHOLDS

II—APPEAL TO LOCAL DISTRUST OF FOREIGNERS

From Our Special Correspondent

It is not, perhaps, for the foreign observer to question the American view of the Communist menace or to comment on the evident lack of cases brought to the courts—much less on Mr. McCarthy's presumably shaken faith in the ability of the law to maintain American security. The air is full of contradictions. If the Communist conspiracy is taken for granted in the Middle West, surprisingly few people outside Wisconsin seem firmly convinced that it seriously threatens American internal structures. Within the limits of personal inquiry the case for Mr. McCarthy remains strangely elusive in terms of domestic Communism. His movement can certainly not be fully explained by the looming fear of Russia or the suspected designs of traitors at home, and it probably has to be viewed rather as the response to an American climate than as Mr. McCarthy's creation.

The amazing growth of the Middle West and its surging material prosperity—Milwaukee, not far short of a million inhabitants, was an Indian trading post little more than a century ago—have not produced a political instinct that readily distinguishes "McCarthyism" from inbred antipathies, and a movement that passes for genuine "Americanism" has a ready appeal for a Middle West parochialism still highly distrustful of foreign impacts.

Not that the individual foreigner is received with anything but warm and generous interest. There is a ready audience for the British view of world issues, as your Correspondent found when the regional chief of the British Information Services, Mr. Stafford Barff, flew to Cedar Rapids in Iowa to clarify the Attlee speech. Much more could be done in this direct way to tackle Anglo-American differences at the less formal levels.

BACK TO ISOLATION

For large sections of the Middle West, "McCarthyism" is demonstrably a step back into isolation. They see only the Communist hand or the blindness of "dupes" in the liberal opposition mustering against it. Mr. McCarthy himself insinuated at a recent hearing that no less a body than the American Civil Liberties Union was a subversive society. He might persons claiming American citizenship can assure neo-Nazi elements in west Germany that he and Senator McCarran are their real friends in Washington. Yet, apart from those who elected him, Mr. McCarthy is by no means popular in the Middle West, which knows something of his record in local politics but accepts his pursuit of the Communists as ample justification for tactics that many find embarrassing.

Mr. McCarthy is a clever politician whose career appears to be staked at the moment on finding a Communist under every bush. Whether or not they are there, it does not take long to discover that when some people of substance in the Middle West speak of Communists they are usually alluding to anyone connected with the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, such is their abiding detestation of the New Deal. In identifying himself with this school of thought Mr. McCarthy has achieved no mean political victory. But he is not spoken of in these circles in eminently cordial, even in polite, terms: cleaning the Augean stable is necessarily distasteful work.

PRINT AND IGNORANCE

It would take a study of mass psychology to explain Mr. McCarthy's appeal to the broader and more instinctive elements of Middle West opinion. Time has become the great factor of American life, and part of the answer might be that the general run of people, absorbed in the triumph of material productiveness and vaguely fearful of forces that menace it, are content to accept Mr. McCarthy at his face value, and at the same time avoid the issue. Parts of the Middle West, moreover, are so poorly informed of the international problems on which "McCarthyism" impinges as to exemplify Tolstoy's sorry conclusion that the most powerful weapon of ignorance is the diffusion of printed matter. Mr. McCarthy draws his main support outside Wisconsin from the Chicago Tribune, the most widely read newspaper of the region, which takes hardly an objective view of foreign or domestic affairs and in the narrower field of British relations maintains its hostility with an air

BACK TO ISOLATION

For large sections of the Middle West, "McCarthyism" is demonstrably a step back into isolation. They see only the Communist hand or the blindness of "dupes" in the liberal opposition mustering against it. Mr. McCarthy himself insinuated at a recent hearing that no less a body than the American Civil Liberties Union was a subversive society. He might have known better, for within the previous month his assistant, Mr. Cohn, had addressed one of its meetings. All manner of investigations and a leaning to self-analysis are, it seems, as much a part of the American order as its apparent belief that no form of human conduct is beyond regulation by statute. To this extent there is nothing new about Mr. McCarthy's excursions. Back in 1920 a select commission was investigating "revolutionary radicalism" and people were being sent to prison for "criminal anarchy." Then, as now, a cloud of suspicion hung over the universities and churches, with the perhaps significant difference that the inquiry, based on a survey of European experience, was essentially concerned with "Socialist revolution"—and that, no doubt, is what many Americans still mean when they speak of Communism. Since then the atom bomb has been invented.

The growing view that the current investigations can hardly be sustained indefinitely on damp squibs and a campaign of innuendo would be more reassuring if Mr. McCarthy's political designs and the undoubted power marshalled behind them were likely to be satisfied with the unmasking of all possible Communists. There are those even in Wisconsin who believe that saturation point on the domestic Communist front might find Mr. McCarthy training his guns, for instance, on the delicate areas of Anglo-American relations, a political stratagem that would be directed, again, to the strong anti-British sentiment of the Middle West. His brief incursion into Chinese waters was sufficiently effective to have left the widespread impression here that British ships are transporting Red Chinese troops and that in some evil manner American action in Korea is being subordinated to the interests of British trade with China. In the words of a Wisconsin farm journal, "no so-called ally is actually one unless it is 100 per cent.—and by its own volition." It adds the thought that "with Communism, as with pregnancy, there's no such thing as 'partly.'"

The Senator's forays into foreign affairs, though sometimes rewarding for the humorist, seem hardly calculated to further western unity. It has not gone unremarked in America that if the essential aim of international Communism is to sow alarm and confusion, it is being well served at home and abroad by the McCarthy school.

The future of his movement as a political force involves more imponderable factors than the approving response it evokes in the Middle West. It still consists more in shadows than substance, in suggestiveness than tested evidence. But the admitted success of these methods makes it difficult to accept the short view of those who talk of Huey Long and see Mr. McCarthy's imminent downfall. He might be thought to be riding high when ductiveness and vaguely fearful of forces that menace it, are content to accept Mr. McCarthy at his face value, and at the same time avoid the issue. Parts of the Middle West, moreover, are so poorly informed of the international problems on which "McCarthyism" impinges as to exemplify Tolstoy's sorry conclusion that the most powerful weapon of ignorance is the diffusion of printed matter. Mr. McCarthy draws his main support outside Wisconsin from the Chicago Tribune, the most widely read newspaper of the region, which takes hardly an objective view of foreign or domestic affairs and in the narrower field of British relations maintains its hostility with an air of privileged candour. Its legendary owner, Colonel McCormick (a great admirer of Northcliffe), has a more complex view of British institutions than his newspaper usually suggests; he went to the same English school as the Consul-General in Chicago and is fond of saying that at least patriotism was taught there, which was more than could be said for Grotton. A few memorable minutes with Colonel McCormick brought the disarming question: "Have the British any forces in N.A.T.O.?" Anglo-American relations were very bad, he said; Britain and Canada were trying to let Communist China into the United Nations, and if they succeeded America would have to "throw the United Nations overboard." He saw the secret of Mr. McCarthy's power in his being a Roman Catholic, but he thought he was doing a good job "getting rid of all those Communists."

These random thoughts of Colonel McCormick find more vehement expression in the general opposition of the Chicago Tribune to all American commitment in international affairs and its ability to reduce the problems of the day to incisive terms largely by ignoring their logical premises.

BRITAIN THE CULPRIT

One of its constant themes is that far from moving towards isolation America is being isolated by her allies, who have been of more hindrance than help in Korea with their "running fire of complaints" and are reproached with having deprived the United States of military victory when it was there for the taking. At the same time Mr. Syngman Rhee's threatened defection could be seen as an example of "global meddling." As always, the chief culprit is Britain, whether for seeking "blood money" from the Chinese trade, for being an "aggressor" in Egypt, which was thus prevented from becoming a loyal ally, or merely for being on her "last legs." The "And After?" article published by The Times after the Coronation was used to advance the reflection, under the heading "Wake up, Fairyland," that work is regarded as "demeaning" in Britain and that "hard work and talent rarely can lift a man out of the station in which he was placed by birth." Nearer home, the President's criticism of the book-burners was greeted with the disingenuous question "Who's Burning Books?" Certainly not Mr. McCarthy, but General Eisenhower's own Administration. As for Dr. Einstein's exhortation to the teachers not to answer for their political convictions, he was a "great dunce" outside his own field—and, the Tribune added, "it is a strange inquisition in which no confessions are obtained by torture." "Toujours l'attaque!" could well be the McCarthyist watchword.

A Letter from the President To Mr. Edward R. Murrow

March 10, 1954

Mr. Edward R. Murrow
c/o C.B.S.
485 Madison Avenue
New York City

Dear Mr. Murrow:

Your telecast last night on "See It Now" had the proportions of history and will, I feel certain, be considered as one of the strong influences in the ultimate eradication of McCarthyism in this country.

Your fair and documented presentation of irrefutable facts stated a case convincing to all except the most intransigent. Your appeal to the historic common sense and fairness of the American people will I am certain find a warm general response.

May I add to the many notes of congratulations and appreciation which you must already have received this one, which speaks not only for myself but for the Two Hundred and Thirty-Five Lodges and Chapters and the Fifty Thousand B'nai B'rith men and women who constitute their membership.

It is our earnest hope that you will continue in good health and strength to maintain this battle for the American way of thinking and living.

With all good wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,
William I. Siegel
President

THE METROPOLITAN STAR, MARCH, 1954

With a Small "m"

THEY CALL IT "mccarthyism" with a small "m," but I think that gives one man too much credit. Although he is a principal architect of the current crisis based on Fear and Smear, the hysteria of the day would certainly exist had he never been on the American scene—or were now removed from it. Other men, part of this movement today, senators, congressmen, columnists, commentators, publishers, political opportunists, and financial powers, would surely carry on that irresponsible exploitation of America's fear of communism, known as "mccarthyism," which so seriously threatens our civil liberties and democratic fabric today. When we say "mccarthyism," we do not mean only Senator McCarthy.

The Problem

This country is indebted to the Ed Murrows, the Archibald MacLeishes, the Senator Lehmans, Alson ~~Brothers~~, the Walter Lippmans, the Learned Hands, the Henry Steel Commagers, the Buell Gallaghers, the Walter Millises, the Drew Pearsons, the John Crosbys, and many others for sounding the warning that our precious heritage of liberty is threatened. They point out the basic deadly danger: In the effort to save our country from communism, we may lose it to totalitarianism by giving up, or having taken from us our civil liberties and philosophy of government which have made us great and strong. Fear and Smear, and all which is implicit under the banner of "mccarthyism," may do that to us.

The country is also indebted to Arnold Forster, and Benjamin R. Epstein, leaders of the ADL, whose stirring book "The Troublemakers" sounded the alarm several years ago with a chapter called "The Smear." Their words have a cassandra-like ring of grim prediction:

"The mere accusation of Communism could all but ruin a man's reputation, force him from his job, and lead others to flee association with him. Star-chamber hearings, the use of hearsay evidence, charges made by those determined to prove the Truman administration's alleged sympathy toward Communism—all these contributed to the general atmosphere of fear and hysteria in which the smear flourished."

Then the authors of "The Troublemakers" went on to quote Herbert A. Philbrick, noted FBI counter-agent:

"According to the leaders of the Communist Party, irresponsible anti-Communism has helped them a great deal."

Our Stake

What does this wave of Fear and Smear mean to us as Americans of the Jewish faith, as members of a great voluntary Jewish organization, the B'nai B'rith? To me, several conclusions are inescapable.

Firstly, "mccarthyism" does have a special significance for Jews. The Chairman of the ADL, Henry Edward Schultz, so stated in a recent issue of the ADL Bulletin, answering the inevitable question, "Is Senator McCarthy an anti-Semite?" Speaking bluntly and publicly, Mr. Schultz said that while McCarthy may not be an anti-Semite in the Gerald Smith-Benjamin Freedman sense, "Senator McCarthy's methods have injured many of our democratic institutions . . . upon which the security of our minority groups is largely dependent."

Secondly, it is not without significance that vicious, violent anti-Semitism has fastened itself on most of the controversies of "mccarthyism," especially where Jewish sounding names are involved. Not since the days of the German-American Bund and the Christian Front, have I seen such soul-corroding hatred and frenzied anti-Semitic vituperation as appears in the letters and calls received by "suspect" Jews, and anti-mccarthyist columnists and commentators.

B'nai B'rith Acts

After every grim recital of the aspects and effects of "mccarthyism," B'nai B'rith members inevitably ask, "alright, alright! What's been done and what's to be done?"

Neither the B'nai B'rith nor its ADL objects to congressional investigating committees, as such. They are traditional, valuable arms of the legislative branch of our government. We have and will continue to cooperate with them, all of them, but at the same time, we have the right and responsibility to shout to the high heavens about any abuses in the operation of such committees. We would not label them "fascist" . . . to do so would be to ape the tactics of the extremists of both right and left! . . . but we do speak up against specific wrongful acts and conduct, and urge our fellow Americans to do likewise.

We spoke out strongly and publicly regarding Congressman Velde when, on two separate occasions, he unwittingly allowed his committee to be used as a sounding board for anti-Semitism. We publicly disagreed with Senator McCarthy when he called Senator Monroney an anti-Semite. We joined much of the country in applauding President Eisenhower for his Dartmouth College speech against book-burning. Last month, our representative appeared before the Legislative Procedures Sub-committee of the House Rules Committee and offered seven specific, constructive suggestions to correct abuses by legislative investigating committees.

As for me, I was never more proud of being a member of B'nai B'rith then when I read the letter of our Metropolitan Council President, William I. Siegel, to Edward Murrow commending him, on behalf of all the lodges, chapters, and members of B'nai B'rith, for his magnificent fight against "mccarthyism."

Read that letter of Bill Siegel's reprinted on Page 1 of this issue of The Metropolitan Star and "shep nachis" with me!

Chappaqua Legion Condemns McCarthy

Chappaqua Post American Legion, 453, last Thursday night passed a resolution condemning the methods of Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin and at the same time urged the County Legion to take similar action. The action is believed to be the first of its kind in the county.

Two-thirds of those present voted in favor of the resolution. The Post has about 100 members.

The resolution is as follows:

RESOLVED:

That Post 453 of the American Legion hereby goes on record in opposition to the tactics of Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin:

That Post 453 of the American Legion reiterates once more its determination to promote Americanism as the best possible method of combating the evils of Communism:

That Post 453 of the American Legion believes that anti-Communism is not a substitute for Americanism, and that indeed it is perfectly possible to be anti-Communist without being pro-American:

That Post 453 of the American Legion opposes the Senator from Wisconsin because he has not followed those (tenants) of democracy that make America great—that while ostensibly fighting Communism, he has in fact created a feeling of mistrust in this country that has become a peril approaching the peril of Communism.

That Post 453 of the American Legion urges the County Legion to take a similar stand, so that the millions of Americans who already recognize the Legion as one of the organizations in the forefront of the fight against Communism will also realize that the Legion will not tolerate any lessening of the standards of fair play and decency that have made America a great country.

VARIETY 3/17/54

Like the Ed Murrow show on Sen. Joseph McCarthy last Tuesday (9), "Meet The Press" pulled a journalistic coup Sunday night (14) with the deadline booking of Roy Cohn, chief counsel for the McCarthy committee, right on the heels of the sensational charges and counter-charges in the David Schine case. The confrontation of Cohn and a probing panel of newspapermen was not only ace reporting but high drama as well.

As the focal point in the fight between the Army and Sen. McCarthy over alleged pressure to get favored treatment for Pvt. Schine, Cohn was on the hot seat. That seat wasn't made any cooler by moderator Ned Brooks' opening comment that a direct issue of veracity was involved between the Army civilian officials on one side and McCarthy and Cohn on the other.

If this show hoped to uncover which side was telling the truth, it didn't achieve its aim. Cohn stuck to his guns, reiterating that he was not allowed to go beyond the memoranda released by McCarthy last week and repeating, on all other points concerning his future, that we would abide by decisions made by "older and wiser" people than he. The questioning by the panel of reporters was sharp and sometimes hostile in tone, but definitely not exceeding the allowable limits for newspapermen. Certainly no nasty rumors, which even an immediate denial cannot erase, were let loose by any of the questioners.

The only revelation of any consequence that was made on the show stemmed from a query by May Craig, of the Portland, Me., Press Herald, about a petition being circulated in Cohn's department pledging loyalty to him as chief counsel. Cohn conceded the existence of such a petition but disclaimed responsibility for either launching or stopping it. This line of questioning, however, led to nothing further. The rest of the questions ran over familiar ground and Cohn did not retreat an inch from his position.

In the context of the current political situation, the format of this show was ideal. This was neither a star chamber proceeding nor a hit-and-run attack. If there's any special American way of conducting a decent argument, this was clearly it. Both sides of the dispute were aired on the spot and all accusations could be met directly by the accused.

"Meet The Press" is a sample of the unique public service performed by video in bringing vital questions and personalities to the widest possible audience. This is both news reporting and news-in-the-making, as evidenced by the prominent featuring of the show's record in the Monday morning dailies.

Murrow Spouts Confused Doctrine

More about Edward R. Murrow, radio and TV commentator and latest darling of the Communist press. This final installment from "The New Counterattack, Facts to Combat Communism" is reprinted here with special permission. The emphasis is ours:

Murrow deplores "guilt by association." But he used "innocence by association" to try to explain away the fact that he was on the Advisory Council of the Moscow State university for its 1935 summer session and urged students to go there. A Pittsburgh newspaper on Feb. 18, 1935, said the university taught "the violent overthrow of the entire traditional social order."

Murrow's reply: He was only one of 25 members of the Advisory Council of the Moscow State university summer session that year and most of the others were "distinguished" people. He then named some of them, using their "innocence" to prove his own.

Murrow failed to state that a number of well known fellow travelers were also on the advisory council. Also: He added that some of these persons "are now dead but presumably not yet immune from the senator's attentions." This was another underhanded attempt to put the senator in a bad light. Senator McCarthy had not named any one else on the advisory council. Murrow was the one who brought their names into the controversy.

Murrow says the project was cancelled by Russian authorities, but that does not change the fact he worked for its success.

Murrow didn't tell all about his promotion of · ady and travel in the Soviet Union. In 1933 he was on the Advisory Committee of the Bureau ofr University Travel which was then promoting "The First Russian Seminar". This was a more-than-two-month travel and study tour of the Soviet Union and the Near East, with most of the time spent in Russia—"under the management of Intourist, the official travel agency of the USSR".

The following are quotes from the brochure for this study trip: "The seminar is planned for those who wish 'not only to see but to understand' Russia today offers to the world a new challenge.

"Those for whom the Seminar will be a success —those who will come away heavily laden with thought—provoking experiences and unforgettable memories, will be those—who have entered into the spirit of the seminar. This may be tersely worded as follows: 'We are interested in seeing and understanding. We desire something more lasting than the memory of deluxe accomodations. For these we do not even need to leave our American homes—but Russia has something to show us. Let us try to comprehend.' "

The obvious pro-Soviet tone here provides all the comment that is needed on Murrow's explanation that he served the Moscow State university in 1935 because he believed then, as he does now, that American students and professors can engage in "the clash of ideas with Communists anywhere under peacetime conditions, without becoming contaminated or converted".

Counterattack asks this question: When Hitler rose to power did Murrow promote sympathetic study and travel tours in Germany on the basis that Der Fuehrer offered a new challenge to the world, that he had something to show Americans and that we should try to "see and understand"?

Owen Lattimore, a "conscious articulate instrument of the Soviet conspiracy" according to the United States Senate Judiciary committee wrote as follows of Murrow in his whitewash book, "Ordeal By Slander":

"I also owe a very special debt to men I have never met, or had never met before. I must mention at least Edward R. Murrow. Even when the hysteria was at its height he kept the record straight by repeatedly drawing attention to the fact that nothing had been proved against me. Later, by his program technique or using recordings, he gave me a national forum of my own, so that millions of people could hear me speaking for myself."

Despite the obvious slant in Murrow's programs, he has been the subject of favorable articles in many magazines (Newsweek, Look, McCall's, etc.).

Charles Wertenbaker wrote a complimentary profile of Murrow that was published in "The New Yorker" magazine of Dec. 26, 1953.

Wertenbaker tried to have Whittaker Chambers fired as foreign news editor of Time magazine — because Chambers put anti-Communist material into the news he edited and kept pro-Communist material out.

Wertenbaker's recently published book "The Death of Kings" is a fictionalized account of happenings at Time when Wertenbaker was there. It is also a slick rehash of the Hiss case in a Time setting and with Time personnel. There are many parallels to actual Hiss-Chambers events in Wertenbaker's account which portrays the "Hiss" of the story as an innocent men who is framed by the sinister villain (Chambers).

Murrow plugged the New Yorker on his radio broadcast of last May 13 by quoting extensively from verse written for it by staff member E. B. White. This verse was an attack on loyalty investigations.

Murrow always winds up his radio program with a quotation, usually from some famous person, which helps to drive home his point and gives a tone of wisdom and nobility to his words. One of his recent quotations sheds light on how acute and well-informed Murrow actually is.

He ended his broadcast of last October 27 this way: "Bertold Brecht, German poet—and an exile himself—once put it this way: 'A man can be free even within prison walls. Freedom is something spiritual. And whoever once had it, can never lose it. For while the body can be bound with chains, the spirit can never!"

Worth noting about this quotation are these points:

1—Bertold Brecht is a leading "cultural light" in the Communist world. As a refugee in this country he supported CP fronts, swore before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1947 that he was not and never been a Communist—and then went to East Germany and became an active supporter of Moscow's puppet regime (which has given him awards). He wrote the CP song "United Front," with his long-time colleague, Hans Eisler.

2—The quotation is utter nonsense in the context of today's problems, in spite of the pomposity with which Murrow quotit (do the millions in Soviet labor camps, who once had freedom, have freedom today?)

3—The very idea of quoting a Communist on "freedom" is ridiculous.

It is not at all difficult to see why the CP has praised quite a number of Murrow's programs. He has often handled issues involving communism in a way that helps the party line and makes anti-Communists appear evil.

Counterattack stated of Edward R. Murrow on Feb. 22, 1952:

"He has defended Owen Lattimore on the air and also those who have joined fronts, taking position that nobody should be blamed for that. Though not pro-Communist, he is confused on Communist issues and defends those involved in Communist causes."

Murrow talks on the side of the angels. He is for the highest democratic and humanitarian ideals. But in actual practice he is not above using slick devices he would denounce if used by others. He is a master at slanting his programs while imparting an aura of great objectivity to them.

Murrow preaches dangerous doctrine. He vastly underrates the domestic Communist party menace. To do this is as dangerous as to misjudge the menace of communism abroad. United States will be sunk if it loses to communism in either place. Even on foreign issues, Murrow advocates a policy of dangerous softness in the face of Soviet intrigue * * * and he nas become hysterical about the issue of communism vs. civil liberties here in the United States.

The great acclaim given to Murrow in many quarters in spite of his unsoundness on vital issues concerning communism deserves serious thought. It points up the major weakness of the United States on all fronts in the battle against communism. That weakness is lack of real understanding of Moscow's conspiracy. It is the greatest threat to United States survival.

Edward R. Murrow, unfortunately, represents the dominant voice in all mediat of communications. Too few Americans are getting the unbiased news and the intelligent commentary on it they need so badly.

"Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree, bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."—ST. MATTHEW VII, 16-20.

Alumnae Will Address 'Mount' Career Program

The opening session of the College of Mount St. Vincent "career conference" on Wednesday, March 31, will highlight "the Mount graduate in the Home, in Religion, in a Career and in Volunteer Work."

Mrs. John V. Connorton, wife of the Deputy City Administrator of New York and mother of five children, will speak on women in the Home; Dr. Mary R. Stapleton, recently appointed dean of admissions of Brooklyn College, on women in a Career; Sister Mary David of the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul of New York, on women in Religion, and Mrs. William C. O'Keefe, co-founder of Casita Maria Settlement House, on women in Volunteer Work.

The second hour will be devoted to opportunities for Liberal Arts graduates developing out of the departments of study such as commerce education, English and fine arts, history and social studies, languages, nursing and science and mathematics.

Msgr. Patrick J. Ryan New Chief of Chaplains

ence Francis Cardinal Spellman in command of the Military Ordinariate—was named Chief of Chaplains by the late President Roosevelt in 1937, serving through most of World War II. He retired in April, 1945, and was elevated to the episcopate the following month by the Holy Father.

A priest of the Archdiocese of St. Paul, Chaplain Ryan was educated at St. Thomas College and St. Paul Seminary, St. Paul, and was ordained in 1927. He went on active duty as a Regular Army chaplain a year later, and saw tours of duty at many far-flung Army posts over the years. During World War II he was chaplain of the Fifth Army, serving through the North African and Italian campaings. He is one of the Army's most decorated chaplains, having been awarded the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star and five battle stars, and the Army Commendation Ribbon, as well as Brazil's Medal of War, the Order of the British Empire (O. B. E.), the Order of the Crown of Italy and the Italian Medal of Valor with Star.

Named a Domestic Prelate with the title Right Reverend Monsignor by His Holiness Pope Pius XII in June, 1947, General Ryan has served as Deputy Chief of Chaplains before—from April, 1946 to August, 1948, when he became chief chaplain of the Sixth Army in San Francisco. He stepped back into the job [illegible] years later when his successor, Msgr. (Brig. Gen.) James H. O'Neill reached the retirement age of 60.

No Senate opposition to confirmation of the Litchfield, Minn., native was foreseen.

Fordham Group to Offer Lenten Play by Gheon

The combined Sodalities of the School of Business of Fordham University will present a Lenten play, "The Devil is a Fool," by Henri Gheon on the weekends of Passion Sunday and Palm Sunday. This play by the French Catholic writer is really two one act comedies about the Devil, "Parade at the Devil's Bridge" and "The Sausage Maker's Interlude." They have been shown on the professional theater all over Europe, but this is their first presentation in New York.

The Rev. Alfred J. Barrett, S.J., student counselor, is staging and directing the production, with Rev. Leo P. Monaghan, S.J., as acting coach. Rev. Lawrence M. Wilson, S.J., assistant dean of the Business School, is in charge of promotion and business.

Evening showings will be given in Collins Theater on the Bronx campus, April 3, 4, 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. All proceeds from the play will be used for the Jesuit missions in the Pacific.

Radio & Television

By JOHN O'CONNOR

THE LATE TICKER:

TV will soon have new program concepts coming, at least at NBC. Industries and major firms will concentrate on several major presentations a year—all of the two hour variety. . . . This Sunday the Rogers and Hammerstein program sponsored by General Foods on its 25th anniversary and which will cost $450,000 is a trial CBS balloon. . . . The private utilities will mark the 75th anniversary of the electric light with a million dollar show on three networks in the Fall. . . . NBC will air two 90-minute color shows each week starting in September. . . . The new labor relations man at DuMont is Paul G. O'Friel, a former FBI man who has worked San Francisco and Honolulu after attending St. Francis College in Loretto, Pa. . . . Anita Colby, contributing editor to "The Sign," the national Catholic monthly, will soon be the regular hostess on "The Pepsi Cola Playhouse" . . . Can NBC be serious? They are giving a birthday party to a chimpanzee! . . . Emerson Radio-Phono Corp. will rent you a color TV set for $200 . . . for the first month and $75 for every month thereafter.

[illegible] CAMERA:

The selection of Mickey Spillane as a guest by Ed Murrow could have been more than coincidental, as Spillane is a Roman Catholic who has joined a vague and fanatical sect that is vigorously opposed to the Church. . . . Why not have 'Person to Person', interview Evelyn Waugh for example . . .? One man recommendation: Bing Crosby. Jack Benny and George Burns should do a command performance each month with old vaudeville turns. Benny would come off a poor third, but at least the humor would be clean. The other two are tops. . . . In this writer's opinion color TV is the greatest thing since the invention of printing with movable type. The challenge to the sensuous attraction of color TV: make the presentations intelligent, adult and worthwhile! . . . Next week the ABC network program "Answers for Americans" present guest Martin Dies with the question "Should the Communist Party be outlawed in the United States?" . . . Two 'too bads': that Dizzy Dean's 'Baseball Game of the Week' is excluded from some cities and that NBC's "Keys to the Capital" suffers the same fate. Quip on Capitol Hill: "Some think of Murrow. Others fear tomorrow with too many Murrows."

LIVE MIKE:

"Inheritance"—the new show starting on April 4 and backed by the American Legion will be broadcast over the NBC radio network. It deserves the attention of all Americans this side of the Fifth Amendment refugees. Albert McCleary, one of our top American producers is in charge . . . Jascha Heifitz, the celebrated violin virtuoso, will feature Ravel's "Tzigane" as his major offering on [illegible] on radio next Monday evening (March 29 — NBC). The same show, incidentaly, marks its 15th anniversary on the air on Monday, April 12th. . . NBC has received more than 100,000 requests for a girl's essay on "I Speak for Democracy." The offer will be repeated this coming Monday on 'The Voice of Firestone' program. Drop this column a line if you care for a copy. Readers and superiors may have copies for their classes by writing to this column care of this paper. . . . Sportsmen: if you are interested in a free, 48 page booklet on fishing and angling, etc., drop us a line care of the paper. It is yours for the asking. Nick Carter, 'Master Detective,' will start his 15th year with Mutual this week. Happy detecting!

PERSONALITY PARAGRAPH:

The brunette Fontane to your right on the TV screen is Bea, arranger for the music for America's all-time top trio. . . . Bea sets up the arrangements on a knee-high organ that is many years old—and two and one-half octaves wide. . . . Addicted to good food and attracted towards good golf, Bea finds the ancient game "an 'umblin' experience" as John Ball the ancient Scot defined it . . . single, Bea lives in the center of the Fontanes. . . . Mother and Dad live several miles to the north of her Riverdale, New York, home. . . . Geri is several miles to the south . . . and Marge is over in the reaches of Long Island. . . . Bea, 'the driver of the getaway car' as Geri tagged her, for she is known for the adroitness with which she can start back towards normalcy and home after a day replete with a recording rehearsal and cutting plus eight hours in the TV studio. . . . Bea's claim to have more recipes than Marge remains to be seen. . . . and Pete, her pet parakeet, is to be seen no more! He has been sent to a neighbor for training and greater daytime freedom. Now "Pete II," an obedient cucko in a clock pops out on schedule while his intense, blue-eyed mistress relaxes occasionally as she arranges the music for her sisters—and the rest of the United States.

ONE MAN'S OPINION:

It is not too difficult to understand why some network personnel become enraged because a Senator whose patriotism is above suspicion believes that unpalatable facts should be made public. . . . Perhaps the answer lies in the fact that the education in the '30's was as so many predicted: pale and pragnatic. Also let us add the fact that most of the news commentators read what is handed to them. Few have ever covered a city beat, sweated out items in police precincts or poured over free-lance copy for the discerning eyes of major magazine editors. . . . It is even more disconcerting to realize that many of the trite, offensive and poorly constructed commercials have been put together by an agency executive and a network official—and that such moronic advertising is the product of the meeting of the minds of people who have M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s! But the end product in both cases remains: mediocrity. . . . One wonders what the advertising executives responsible for much of this must think. And you may wonder further what the textbook echoes called "instructors" are telling the students in the various Schools of Business. . . . We'll take realism in this case.

ON THE RECORD:

RCA-Victor has sold more than $8,500,000 worth of opera records, we learn from an outside source. 'Faust' has led in sales, followed by 'Otello,' "Cavelleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci" and "Tristan and Isolde." . . . The record industry distributes a million dollars worth of [illegible] playing records to stations [illegible] good listening on local stations. More than 78 percent of the stations today program some classical music in their daily log. . . . Columbia Records will issue a full line of phonograph records this Spring. . . . RCA-Victor—(this is again from an outside source—NOT from their publicity department)—is planning to introduce pre-recorded tapes for consumer use this summer. . . . Bing Crosby will soon release an album of up-to-the-minute tunes. 'The Groaner' is still up there when he wants to be. . . . Last week this column was pressed for space. Thus: we hereby state that the classical religious record of our time is the "Missa Solemnis," an RCA-Victor effort worthy of your home and most important, productive of meditation, which, according to Jacques Maritain is the highest function of man.

McCARTHY VS. MURROW AND CBS

FOR the past 14 days CBS-TV viewers have been treated to the unusual spectacle of a network indulging in editorializing on a grand one-sided scale. From the early morning to the late evening newscasts, the web's commentators have put aside objectivity when reporting the news as it concerns Senator McCarthy. If a newsreel film shows the Senator making a point, the CBS man follows it with a denial. Most of them feel called upon to defend their colleague, Ed Murrow, even when he doesn't enter the picture.

Bill Coleman

The broad scale on which this net's news department representatives are devoting themselves to attacking McCarthy is unprecedented in broadcasting history. The Federal Communications Commission could study this situation to advantage. There is a world of danger inherent in the conditions which permit such a thing to happen.

Irrespective of the merits of Senator McCarthy's cause and prescinding from the opinion you may hold of his methods, this elected representative of the State of Wisconsin is the target for broadside after broadside from the network itself, a barrage of propaganda which is impossible to answer.

The Senator's personal answer on Murrow's April 6 show should prove interesting.

MAYOR MIKE

I failed to list it last week among the St. Patrick's Day special broadcasts, but a highlight of the March 17 schedule was the appearance of Mike Donovan, CBS headquarters doorman, on the "Robert Q. Lewis Show" (daily, 4:30 p.m.). Mike, who is known as "The Mayor of Madison Avenue," is a landmark there, a cheerful, loquacious Irishman who has been with the network for 12 years. He is a rabid Dodger fan, a pal of the many vice-presidents, who take his kidding good-naturedly, and he hails from Skibbereen, County Cork.

RENZO CESANA

An indication of the true quality of the appeal of "The Continental" (DuMont, Friday, 2:45 p.m.) is contained in the announcement of the winning entry of his recent "Love Letter" contest. A Trenton, N. J., mother wrote the prize letter and it turned out to be a tender, poetic epistle to her four sleeping sons. As a result, Mrs. Mary Masterson will enjoy a seven-week celebrity tour of Europe.

Incidentally, the day Renzo had her on his program he also made a guest appearance at a fund-raising party being held at the St. George Hotel for the Boy's Town of Italy, established by Msgr. Carroll-Abbing, an American priest who has done outstanding work with the youth of Italy.

'CANA, 1954'

When the "Church of the Air" program brings Rev. William J. Shannon of Syracuse, N. Y., to the microphone Sunday, March 21 (CBS, 10:30 a.m.), you'll be hearing a priest who in his college days here in New York City was an outstanding popular crooner. He gave up a promising career as a singer to enter the priesthood but before he did he started another young tenor, named Eugene McNulty, on the road to success. Eugene became the popular Dennis Day, one of the most versatile performers in show business today.

Father Shannon's topic Sunday will be "Cana, 1954," and the program's music will be furnished by the Diocesan Sisters Choir, a group of 75 voices of Sisters representing six Religious orders.

HISTORY DRAMATIZED

The study of history these days is made a lot easier for youngsters by the efforts of radio and video dramatists. Teachers might check the listings for such offerings and make them supplemental assignments. "Cavalcade of America" Tuesday, March 23 (ABC-TV, 7:30 p.m.), offers "Young Andy Jackson," a teleplay about "Young Hickory" as an Irish immigrant lad of 14. On radio, "Hallmark of Fame" Sunday, March 21 (CBS, 9 p.m.), tells a true story of Lord Edmund Burke and his defense fo American freedom during the Revolution. And a little earlier in the day British Lieut. General John Burgoyne will surrender to Major General Gates on "You Are There" (CBS-TV, 6:30 p.m.).

Money Winners: Did you catch that money-winning combination on "Two for the Money" last week? Marc Milano of Brooklyn and Mrs. Mariloise Kelly of Flushing walked off with a cash prize of $4,900, the biggest ever won on the show. Herb Shriner asked them to name words with "th" as the suffix. "Like fourth, for example," the humorist said. The contestants, taking the hint, came up with "fifth, sixth, seventh" and kept going to "eighteenth" when the buzzer cut them off. Each answer word was worth $350.

Latest Report: Then there's the story of the little boy who came home with a poor report card. As he handed it to his dad, he remarked resignedly, "Here's my report card, Pop; I didn't want to watch television anyway."

Vaudevillians: What should be good clean fun is the meeting Sunday, March 21, of Jack Benny and his guests, Bing Crosby and George Burns. They combine their talents on the "Jack Benny Show" (CBS-TV, 7:30 p.m.) in a revival of an old-time vaudevill routine known as "Goldie, Fiel and Glide."

School Issue and Public Education Association

Dear Sir: Frank E. Karelson, vice-president of the Public Education Association, recently stated that home and neighborhood environment, and not only the schools, are seriously to blame for delinquency among our youth. This is true.

It is also true that the Public Education Association has contributed its share to the situation. It has long advocated and supported the ultra-progressive, pragmatic form of education emanating from Teachers' College, Columbia University. It has publicly condemned measures taken by the Board of Education to combat delinquency.

For years it has fought against the released-time program of which the purpose is to give pupils whose parents request it one hour in the school week to attend religious instruction in their respective places of worship. It conducted four surveys of the released-time program, in the last of which it distorted the report of its own investigator with the aim of discrediting the program.

As late as November, 1953, it issued a report highly critical of the "600" day schools. A "600" day school is one for children so emotionally disturbed that they cannot be adjusted to the ordinary school. The report objected to such regulations as the escorting of boys to the subways, of observing set toilet periods, of marching single file to and from classes, and of searching these pupils for knives or other weapons. It particularly condemned the boys being requested to wear white shirts. The report, moreover, demands more "self-government" for these pupils—pupils who have been proven unable to govern themselves!

In these criticisms, the Public Education Association is advocating the theory of permissiveness which has been one of the weaknesses of progressive education most vigorously attacked in the currently published articles on delinquency.

A perusal of its latest report reveals no instances where the Public Education Association has worked for the inculcation of moral and spiritual values and the strengthening of the moral fibre of the pupils. Rather it has concerned itself with the administration of the public school system, the method of the appointment of school officials, school construction and school finance.

One of its chief concerns seems to be selection of school boards and school officials representative of the thinking of the Public Education Association.

Defines Catholic Action In Descriptive Fashion

Dear Sir: Mary Harris, in a letter to THE TABLET of March 13, submits the question: "Will you please tell just what Catholic Action is?" Pops Pius XI defined Catholic Action as "the participation and collaboration of the laity with the apostolic Hierarchy." Donald Attwater, in his "A Catholic Dictionary," tells us: "The scope of Catholic Action is very wide and varies from place to place; it can be manifested in worship, in study, in active apologetics, in the corporal works of mercy and in a dozen other ways, but they must be in a true sense religious ways. . . ."

THE TABLET and other Catholic papers publish outstanding examples of Catholic Action. All one need do is read a Catholic publication, study methods used by various groups and follow in the footsteps of these Catholic Actionists.

I urge every Catholic to enroll in an army of self-designated crusaders and participate in Catholic Action. Communism is not the only menace. Press, radio, television, stage and screen are outlets for offensive and prejudicial propaganda. Offenders may be wilful and deliberate professional hate-mongers or morally depraved disseminators of rot, or just unfortunate and misguided victims of invincible ignorance. Be that as it may, one is equally as dangerous as the other. They can, however, be brought to a standstill through immediate and direct Catholic Action. The time to act is when the offense is committed. If we permit grass to grow under our feet before deciding to act, protests, written or verbal, lose their effectiveness.

How may we engage in Catholic Action? Keep away from questionable stage and screen shows; be on guard against legislation aimed at depriving Catholics of benefits to which all citizens are rightfully entitled; fight advocates of euthanasia; read Catholic publications; support the missions; place Catholic literature in the hands of non-Catholics; assist hospital and prison chaplains in providing patients and inmates with religious articles and decent reading material; speak out when our Church is attacked; organize study clubs and learn more about the Church; join a Catholic society or club. There are other ways, too numerous to mention.

Every Catholic can, and should, do something for Catholic Action. Every Catholic organization should have a "Catholic Action Committee"—not a letterhead committee revealing names of individuals who serve in name only, but a live-wire committee ready to act in any emergency.

Asks Sen. McCarthy Issue Be Kept in Perspective

Dear Sir: Having subscribed to THE TABLET just one month ago, may I mention that I am completely impressed with your thoroughly honest approach to the news.

Your Readers' Forum section is excellent and open-minded and I hope read by practically every one of your subscribers.

My message is a simple one, the shouts of "McCarthyism" are getting louder, his "methods" are being constantly brought to public attention by the "liberals" and left-wingers, which description I use of the aforementioned in keeping with the good taste of the written word.

Having followed Joe McCarthy closely, having read the Congressional Record wherein his spoken word is recorded, having read "McCarthyism, the Fight for America," etc., I feel as though I know just a little about his approach to Communism. I have read and heard Murrow, Hollenbeck, Gray, etc., including many of his most vehement critics. I have talked with my friends, my barber, and my wife about McCarthy and that is the net result.

Let us keep in mind one very important approach to McCarthy. What does he stand for, what are his methods, and how do they apply to us as Catholics?

He stands almost alone in the particular role he is playing in the fight against Communism, constantly subjecting himself to the smears of the left-wingers and "liberal" thinkers. Surely he exposes himself to violence at any time. Thus, a man of courage, uncompromising principle, and unquestionable ability.

His methods are to conduct hearings as chairman of a Senate committee and ascertain whether or not in certain cases people he is questioning are Communists. He asks a simple question and does he get a "yes or no" answer?

Question: "Are you a Communist?"

Answer: "I refuse to answer on the grounds that I might incriminate myself."

Any red-blooded American can answer this question "yes or no." A Communist cannot and will not.

If we must disagree with McCarthy, let us not be so naive as to fall for the "methods" argument. You are either with him or against him; and to be misled in your opinion by an argument which in no way affects the substance of his approach, Godlessness versus God, is to be guilty of having quite a shallow sense of values. Important: Communism vs. God.

The approach is perhaps questionable, but I repeat I may differ with you in how to do it, but never on the main issue; and if I do differ in approach, if we agree in principle, by discussion we can resolve our infinitesimal difference.

Joe McCarthy is doing a job on the legislative level and he should be a reminder to each and every Catholic to observe the plan of Fatima. He is constantly reminding us of the common enemy; and practically every day of his life, he does battle against it. Let us not be disloyal. Defend him immediately when the opportunity arises. As an adjunct, and definitely most important, we must observe the plan of Fatima: penance, prayers, the Rosary, and our daily duty, then we shall experience that certain period of peace.

'Times' Printed Bigoted Remarks But No Reply

Dear Sir: On March 2 I addressed a letter to the editor of the New York "Times." Following a form letter signed by L. P. Huger, letters editor, I addressed him a second letter. Both are enclosed.

JOHN E. McGINNIS.
Allendale, N. J.

(Enclosures)

Dear Sir:

On March 1, you published as a news item an attack by a Dr. McCracken, during a sermon at a Protestant church, upon Senator McCarthy. During the course of his sermon, Dr. McCracken was reported to have told his congregation "not to forget that the Senator is a member of a Church that has never disavowed the Inquisition, that makes a policy of censorship, that insists on conformity."

Would you consider publishing a Catholic's reaction to Dr. McCracken's injection of the Senator's religion into the attack?

First, the Senator has many critics among both the laity and clergy in the Catholic Church. E.g., Father Hartnett of the magazine "America" and Senator Chavez of New Mexico. Now if the doctrines of the Church are the motivating force of McCarthy, whot of his opponents in the same Church?

Second, many of McCarthy's enemies are attacking Messrs. Velde, Jenner, Dies, etc., and these gentlemen are not members of the Catholic Church. Yet the attacks are for the same reasons as are those directed toward Senator McCarthy. Does Dr. McCracken wish us to believe all of these Senators and Congressmen are tarred with the same brush as McCarthy? Or isn't it more logical to believe the common denominator is other than Catholic belief?

Third, Catholics are above attacking the religion of public figures in Catholic pulpits. Have you as editor had to report in your news columns sermons of Catholic clergymen, taking apart the public actions of politicians and attributing such actions to the religion of those involved?

To sum up, I believe the sermon of Dr. McCracken exposed his hand in providing an opportunity for an attack upon the Catholic religion and Senator McCarthy merely provided the excuse. In other words, Dr. McCracken, don't look now, but your bigotry is showing.

Dear Mr. Huger:

Your form letter of March 5 acknowledges receipt of mine of the 2nd in which I asked you to consider my comments on the criticism of the Catholic Church by Dr. McCracken. Your letter indicates my views on this matter will not be published. I had been hoping to see some rejoinder printed, some one else's if not mine. Apparently, if you have received other protests in addition to mine, you have decided not to print any of them.

The conclusion I must draw is that you could spare the space to publish this crack against the religion of 30,000,000 Americans, but not the space for even one poor reply. That sort of business makes a pretty one-sided "Freedom of the Press"—the "Times'" and Dr. McCracken's side only!

Cites Lattimore's Words Of Praise for Murrow

Dear Sir: Edward R. Murrow was only doing what comes naturally when he recently devoted a half-hour TV show to a documentary blasting of the activities of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy. No matter what may be said about McCarthy it is a fact that his supporters include all those who have opposed Communist activities in our Country since the late President Roosevelt recognized the U.S.S.R. And his most articulate opponents include the Communist Party, U.S.A., as well as those individuals and organizations that have protested any and all investigations into Red activities in America.

In March of 1950 Sen. McCarthy charged that Communists had made a deep penetration in our State Department. He named the names, among them being Owen Lattimore, whom he referred to as a "top" Russian spy and Communist agent.

After the Tydings Committee gave Lattimore, and all the others, clean bills of health, Lattimore's book, "Ordeal By Slander," was published (June, 1950). On pages 176 and 177 Lattimore pays tribute to various individuals in press and radio who had aided him, including Elmer Davis, Eric Sevareid, I. F. Stone, Drew Pearson and Martin Agronsky. But the most laudatory tribute was reserved for Lattimore's friend, Edward R. Murrow. Here are Lattimore's words:

"I was kept so busy that I never had time to catch up with all the clippings and so I do not yet know all of those whom I should like to thank individually, but as an example of the way they handled my case I must mention at least Edward R. Murrow.

"Even when the hysteria was at its height, before I could speak for myself, he kept the record straight by repeatedly drawing attention to the fact that nothing had been proved against me.

"Later, by his program technique of using recordings he gave me a national forum of my own, so that millions of people could hear me speaking for myself, in excerpts from my testimony."

In June of 1950, the majority of the Tydings Committee (Tydings, McMahon and Senator Green of Rhode Island, who is up for re-election this year, I believe) said that they had found no evidence that Owen Lattimore was "the 'top Russian spy' or, for that matter, any other sort of spy." The two other members of that committee (Senators Lodge and Hickenlooper) did not sign this report.

But by July of 1952 another Senate committee had conducted an investigation. The seven members—McCarran, Eastland, O'Conor, Smith (N. C.), Ferguson, Watkins and Jenner—expressed their belief that Owen Lattimore since 1930 had been "A conscious, articulate instrument of the Soviet conspiracy."

Moreover, these seven Senators unanimously held that Lattimore had committed perjury on at least six occasions. His case went to the Justice Department and he was indicted in December, 1952. He has never been tried!

And so in March of 1954, four years to the very day that McCarthy launched his crusade against Lattimore and the others, we find Lattimore's pal, Edward R. Murrow, reviewing, not the case of Owen Lattimore, but the case of the man who has exposed more Communists than any other individual, Senator Joe McCarthy!

A Tiger Provides Meat for the Bishop

Raliang, India, March 16—When Bishop Ferrando reached the Salesian mission here for a recent feast, Father Mauri was lamenting that he couldn't find any meat for his important guest.

"Don't let that upset you," the Bishop advised; just as a Christian approached with a basket containing two mutton thighs.

"What's this?" asked Father Mauri.

"For the Bishop," explained the man. "Just half an hour ago, after the Bishop's jeep passed the gate, a tiger attacked and carried off a goat. We ran after it. When the tiger dropped his prize, we found it and divided the meat among ourselves. Here's your share."

"The tigers of Raliang are extremely thoughtful," commented Bishop Ferrando.

Letters to Mr. Murrow Express Disagreement

Dear Sir: Enclosed is a copy of a letter addressed to Edward R. Murrow of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

RALPH R. TRAPANI.
S. Ozone Park.

(Enclosure)

Dear Mr. Murrow:

Your program last night was up to usual standards and only served to strengthen the cause that Senator McCarthy and every other red-blooded American is fighting for and have been fighting for ever since the Revolution.

Why is it that every time a real American comes upon the scene, your kind try their best to smear him. Is it McCarthy's fault for the condition that exists today? Certainly not! He's only trying to do something about it.

Is it the method you don't like? Or, is that just another excuse for attacking the Senator?

What is the issue? Communism or the method of licking Communism and the threat it poses today.

If people of your type would use your facilities toward the end the Senator is trying to achieve, this Country would have no fears of Communism. But, no, you would rather go along with the bleeding hearts and eggheads and scream about methods, character assassinations, etc.

Just name one good American that Senator McCarthy has attacked unjustifiably and don't give me characters like Reed Harris and Adlai Stevenson.

Dear Sir: The enclosed is a copy of a letter sent to Edward R. Murrow.

VIVIAN McMAHON.

(Enclosure)

Dear Mr. Murrow:

I am not one who gets all worked up over things I see and hear on TV, but your last night's program wherein you devoted your time to blasting a man who is exerting all his time and efforts to doing a job he was selected for and who is doing it well, is really beyond my comprehension.

If people, like yourself, would only expend their energy in helping Senator McCarthy clean up America instead of criticizing him every time he opens his mouth, this certainly would be "a land of the free and the home of the brave."

Dear Sir: Here is a copy of a letter that I sent to Edward R. Murrow in reference to his attack on Senator McCarthy.

MICHAEL F. FITZPATRICK.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

(Enclosure)

Mr. Edward R. Murrow
c/o W.C.B.S.
485 Madison Avenue
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

As the Americanism Chairman of the Department of Sanitation Post, No. 1110, American Legion, consisting of 1,000 members, I wish to inform you of the admiration we hold for Senator Joseph McCarthy in his unrelenting fight against Communists and their friends.

Your television show on Tuesday night changed nothing, as far as we are concerned.

It is encouraging to red-blooded Americans that left-wingers who have been in their glory for the last 20 years are now deploring the new turn of events.

Believes 'One Worlders' Are Treated Unjustly

Dear Sir: Recent letters published in THE TABLET (notably the issue of March 13) have made slighting references to "one worlders."

Our Holy Father, Pope Pius XII, in the prayer that he himself composed for the Marian Year, asked that we pray to the Mother of God—"make all men feel the attraction of Christian goodness. In your name, resounding harmoniously in Heaven, may they recognize that they are brothers, and that the nations are members of one family."

What may be doing the decriers of "one world" an injustice, but they seem to me to hold a view contrary to the Christian spirit—so beautifully expressed by our Holy Father.

LAWRENCE DELANEY.
Centerport.

Quotes from Transcript

Dear Sir: Newspapers and air commentators are talking much about the alleged statement of Senator McCarthy that Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker was unworthy to wear the Army uniform. Those repeating this might well memorize the exact wording of the Senator as it appears in the transcript of the hearing:

"Any man who has been given the honor of being promoted to general and says, 'I will protect another general who protected Communists,' is not fit to wear that uniform, general."

ROBERT C. JONES.
Jersey City.

Two Generals

Dear Sir: When General Zwicker was questioned by Senator McCarthy respecting the commissioning and honorable discharge of an accused Communist he refused to answer and the Senator said if any General protected a Red he should take off his uniform. The repercussions were loud and wide. The Senator had insulted a General; he had mocked the uniform; he had injured morale.

Today President Eisenhower in discussing another General who had spent $1,200 to erect a doghouse firmly said: "the General should be made to live in it." Now will there be the same uproar over this nasty remark?

Or is the cover-up of information on a Red a less offense than building a doghouse.

I write as a former Lieutenant in the Army and one who loves it and respects its high officials.

ANTHONY GEIER.
Manhattan.

Suggests U.N. Prayer

Dear Sir: With all the current criticism about the relationship of God to the U.N., we decided to be positive and sent this simple prayer composed to suit the mentalities of all nations to the Secretary General and President of the United Nations and General Assembly, respectively:

O God, Lord of heaven and earth, bless the meetings of this Assembly; rule over the minds and hearts of all delegates; guide all by Thy light, life and truth, so that the family of nations of the world may grow in health, wealth, and love.

I ask that you help to publicize this prayer so that all Catholics may be positive in working to put the Holy Family as the guide of the family of nations in the United Nations.

We are a lay group dedicated to work among the peoples of the Oriental Rite, particularly the Slavs and Moslems.

Y DAY

e exception of Christ- is no day in the year re good will, real fel- nd friendliness exist . Patrick's Day. From night people's hearts mor and mirth are in smiles and laughter gious. There is no igious bar to this n-Irish, including join in being Irish appy and pleasant is the widely for all.

is the tremendous the afternoon—over trong with 2,000,000 ing. Veterans of the parade ert they never saw so many heerful countenances marching to music that stirs the heart and lightens the step. This is one parade which seems to be enjoyed by everybody whether marching or watching. The feeling seems to be one of gladness to be alive, with not an enemy in the world and alive with love of Country and religion and pride of possession of even a drop of Celtic blood. There are no Fifth Amendment marchers, no betrayers or defenders of betrayers of our Country, no "I am not a Communist but—" anti-anti-Communists in line. If such a parade could take place in an Iron Curtain country, there would be no class war, religious war or Communism.

Finally, as evening comes on, many go to dinners to hear from golden tongues the glories of the past, the treasures of the present and the hopes for the future, all couched in tribute to Ireland and in love of America. Then those at home, on television or from the radio once more hear Irish music, watch dancing and liasten to orators, with messages of substance and impregnated with the spirit of the day.

From beginning to end St. Patrick's Day is a great day, a day in which hate and division are supplanted by the goodness and unity which come from the wells of religion. May its ever gripping appeal expand throughout the world and may it continue more than 24 hours.

MR. SOKOLSKY'S ADDRESS

One can understand the tremendous reaction to the address of George Sokolsky last Sunday evening. From every part of the Nation people telephoned and telegraphed the radio stations broadcasting his message and thousands of requests were received for the text. THE TABLET is happy to print it elsewhere in this issue. It speaks for itself and requires no comment of ours.

Meanwhile, in all the widespread publicity and vial of hatred poured on Senator McCarthy, the main point at issue continues to be overlooked. The point is: Who commissioned, promoted and gave an honorable discharge to Major Irving Peress who would not deny he was a Communist agent and who was identified as a Communist? If this question had been answered, instead of avoided, there would have been no such controversy as has been inflicted upon the general public during the past few weeks. Then, too, who was the person who exercised his "influence" to pull Peress off a plane taking him to overseas duty? Peress, accused of being a Communist, gets a commission, promotion, seeming special treatment and an honorable discharge. Private G. David Schine, an anti-Red, was blocked and others are accused of trying to aid him.

The latest news is that a public hearing is to be held to find out whether Attorney Roy M. Cohn or the Army officials were telling the truth and the Senator is to be a witness as to his part in the dispute.

THE TABLET believes that not Mr. Cohn, or Private Schine, or even the Senator himself is the issue facing our Country, but the presence of Communists or bad security risks in Government. The Nation has been betrayed by Alger Hiss, Harry Dexter White and unknown numbers of other agents or friends of Moscow and unless they and their works are destroyed the safety of the Republic is imperiled.

The main issue remains: Communists have occupied Government posts and some still have to be rooted out. The question of veracity in reference to Private Schine, whether or not he avoided KP, or whether or not a commission was asked for him or whether or not he was a hostage, is not something which should distract Americans. The torturers of Americans in Korea were Communists, the victims were anti-Communists. Not anti-Communists but Communists are the enemies of our Nation. We are more interested in the welfare of our 940 airmen held prisoners in China and their captors' allies in this Country rather than a controversy over the request of an Army commission for Schine.

RELIGIOUS FOUNDER

Mother Mary Teresa Tallon was a lay teacher in the West Side of Manhattan, in St. Paul the Apostle parish, for many years. She was particularly distressed at the lack of religious training in many youths and attributed the condition to the negligent home. She had a "Divine discontent" and from her Faith came the practical suggestion of bettering the situation. Unless something is done to preserve the home and family virtue, the souls of children will be lost and they will beget an offspring who will not know of God, she reasoned.

Her solution, the future Mother Mary Teresa thought, was to visit the home, to make contact with parents, to block laxity at its source. A little experience told her the lay person could not do as much as the Religious, for visits would be irregular and a person known as a Religious would invariably receive more respect and attention. From her idealism came the organization known as the Parish Visitors of Mary Immaculate, which assists parish priests with the care of needy families, taking the census and instructing families and classes in religion. Today the Parish Visitors are in nine dioceses and have 150 members.

Mother Mary Teresa was not only a person of deep Faith and foresight, but she had also a keen mind and was an excellent teacher and writer. She set up the Community and provided that its members might live a holy and contemplative life, and transfer some of that religious spirit to others. She was singly devoted to the home in this life, regarding it as a corridor to the permanent home in a future life. Her faith and ability were augmented by keenness of mind and extraordinary industry, which she leaves as an imperishable heritage to her successors.

Our Diocese was one of the beneficiaries of the foresight of Mother Mary Teresa. Since 1947 the Parish Visitors have been here and have been doing untold good. The founder of the Community, who retired two years ago and then became editor of the "Parish Visitor," a monthly, often talked of this Diocese and the endeavor being made here to preserve the faith of the little ones. We join the Parish Visitors in mourning Mother Mary Teresa, a remarkable person of extreme humility, whom God inspired to do a noble work and gave her the strength to carry it on successfully until her 87th year. May she rest in peace.

PUBLIC REACTION

A very large number of readers have sent in communications on Ed Murrow — a number of them place an R before Ed—Columbia Broadcasting commentator and director of the TV program "See It Now," which is sponsored by the Aluminum Company of America. Apparently the one-sidedness of the assault on Senator McCarthy, and the unfairness and bias of the broadcaster, distresses people. One writes: "I saw the selective program of Tuesday evening, March 9, and during the vicious editorialized presentation heard Murrow assert an equal amount of time would be given Senator McCarthy. The Senator agreed to appear April 6 but on Tuesday of this week Murrow made another long, biased, blasting attack on the Senator over TV and also used the C.B.S. radio for the same purpose. That is Murrow's idea of fairness; he will use every Tuesday evening save the one on which the Senator appears to denounce him and at the same time will say 'we gave him a chance to answer.' It is as fair as giving an opposing team in a baseball game one inning to bat and taking eight yourself."

A few of the letters received appear in our Forum this week. It might be better if all the letters were sent — many are — to the Columbia Broadcasting Company, which has a number of anti-anti-Communists on its programs — the anti-McCarthy speakers must be about 10 to 0—and to Alcoa. Tell them this is America and common decency might dictate that they plan at least one anti-Communist speaker—Bill Buckley has been suggested—on their program. The tie-up with the recently expressed program of the Communist Party, namely "fight McCarthyism, attack him continually" is becoming common talk.

CODE GETS BACKING

Joseph Breen, who heads the Motion Picture Producers Association which administers the code, said this week that the rebellion created by Jane Russell and producer Samuel Goldwyn has made his position stronger than ever.

Recently producer Howard Hughes defied Mr. Breen and released Miss Russell in a film minus the seal of approval. Mr. Goldwyn also stirred up a controversy by insisting the code be revised.

But Mr. Breen said the sniping only brought more supporters to the code.

"After the events of the past ten months—'The French Line,' 'The Moon Is Blue,' and Goldwyn—the code is more entrenched than ever before," he declared.

"Those events brought tremendous support from groups all over the Country.

"Recently I was sent two statements in favor of the code made on the floor of the United States Senate," he said.

"There's a tremendous voice for what I call common decency in this Country."

Mr. Breen said he doesn't think producers will leap to making sealless movies now that theaters divorced from studios by anti-trust edict are free to play them.

WHO CAUSES PREJUDICE?

It is difficult to find adequate language to express the disgust felt by decent Americans when a professional politician drags his religion into a speech as a means of achieving his own political ends. Such was done in Troy, N. Y., Wednesday night by Stephen Mitchell, if the Associated Press reported his speech correctly.

Mr. Mitchell, making it clear that he was a Catholic, made the vicious and unjustified charge that a "group of political extremists"—he named no names—are, by their fight to rid the United States of Communists, causing a "revival of religious prejudice" against the Church. Such a statement reveals an appalling ignorance on the part of Mr. Mitchell of the causes of religious prejudice against the Church.

He cited a slur against the Church made by Rev. Dr. Robert J. McCracken, of Riverside Church, Manhattan, in an attack on a Catholic Senator who is probing into Communist activities. The Senator, who does not drag religion into his political speeches, did not make Dr. McCracken a critic of the Church. The minister has a record of being ready to attack the Catholic Church at the drop of a hat since he came to this Country in 1946.

No, Mr. Mitchell, it's not the Catholics who are causing the religious prejudice; it's the same old crowd of professional anti-Catholics that's doing it, and, at the present time, helping to divert public attention from the menace of Communism to our Nation.

PRESENTING THE NEWS

One of our readers, and a frequent correspondent, Leo R. O'Brien of Glenwood Landing, addressed 700 members of the Guild of Court Attaches last Sunday. He reiterated what THE TABLET has frequently stated. The New York "Times" considered many of his remarks news and printed them Monday morning. That recognition of this viewpoint by the "Times" was, indeed, news and for this reason we take pleasure in reprinting on another page the "Times" report of Mr. O'Brien's address.

A. C. L. U. ACTS

On Monday the board of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union adopted a resolution denouncing Communism, declaring that it is a world-wide conspiracy and not just a political theory.

Norman Thomas and Morris L. Ernst led the fight for the anti-Red resolution. The opposition was led by Osmond K. Fraenkel, assisted by Walter Gelhorn and Brigadier General Telford Taylor—who so persistently attacks Senator McCarthy. The opposition finally collapsed, the resolution carrying 18 to 3. The three negative votes were cast by Mr. Fraenkel, Mrs. Dorothy Dunbar Bromley and Dorothy Kenyon—whom Senator McCarthy vigorously criticized some years back. Mr. Gelhorn and General Taylor were not present for the final vote.

"LIBERAL" THINKING

A "Times" editorial of last Saturday says: "It is inconceivable that the McCarthy committee should continue to employ Mr. Cohn." Communists should be continued in employment until convicted. But Mr. Cohn must be fired without a hearing and simply because he has been accused. Good sample of "liberal" thinking.

PASSIONISTS' HEAD

MOST REV. MALCOLM LAVELLE

Union City, N. J., March 15—Most Rev. Malcolm LaVelle, C.P., Superior General of the Passionist Congregation, will fly to Rome from New York on Tuesday, March 23, after a three-month canonical visitation of Passionist monasteries and foundations throughout the East.

At Idlewild Airport to see him off will be Passionist Provincial Ernest Welch, Very Rev. Canisius Hazlett, C.P., and Very Rev. Carrol Ring, C.P., Provincial Consultors, and rectors of the Eastern U. S. Province of the Passionist Fathers, including Very Rev. Cornelius McArdle, C.P., rector, Immaculate Conception Monastery, Jamaica.

Since his arrival in this Country last December, Father LaVelle has travelled several thousand miles during his visitation of 15 monasteries and missions from Canada to North Carolina. The Eastern U. S. Province numbers some 600 Passionists.

A native of Rock Island, Ill., Father LaVelle is the first American chosen Superior General of the Passionist Congregation, having been elected to that post in 1952. He will celebrate his 53rd birthday, April 12.

Catholic Philosophers Schedule Convention

Milwaukee, Wis., March 17 (NC)—The 28th annual meeting of the American Catholic Philosophical Association will be held at the Hotel Pfister here on April 20 and 21, under the patronage of Archbishop Albert C. Meyer of Milwaukee and the Catholic seminaries, universities area.

Marian Theology Lectures

Dominican theologians from the School of Theology of Providence College, Providence, R. I., are giving a monthly Sunday afternoon lecture on Marian Theology at Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, Purchase, New York. These lectures are part of the observance of the 100th anniversary of the promulgation of the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception and are planned to show the reasons for the Marian Year and the vocation of Our Blesed Mother for her great work.

On March 14, Rev. Joseph S. McCormack, O.P., spoke on Mary's preparation in body for her vocation, "Mary Ever Virgin." On April 11, Rev. David A. O'Connell, O.P., will discuss the divine maternity, "Mary, the Mother of God." On May 2, Rev. Thomas H. McBrien, O.P., will explain the consequences of Mary's maternity, "Mary, the Mother of Men." These lectures will be given in the Benzinger Building. They will begin at three o'clock. Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament will follow. All are welcome.

WILL YOU HELP BUILD THIS TRAPPIST ABBEY?

Work has been started on a permanent Trappist Monastery at Conyers, Georgia, near Atlanta. Here over 90 Trappist Monks are living in temporary buildings. The Abbot appeals to you for help in raising the walls of a permanent Abbey of Our Lady of the Holy Ghost.

Father Abbot modestly estimates he will only need about five thousand dollars to maintain the construction work.

The Monks themselves furnish all the labor. It seems a pity that Our Lady's work should be in any way held back when it is the small material costs alone that impede the work.

The Trappists have won the love and affection of their neighbors in the South by their simple lives of prayer and work. These good friends are mostly not of our Faith, and, consequently, can help very little financially. Won't you please help, even if it be only a widow's mite, by sending in your contribution direct to Father Abbot?

God Love You

by MOST REVEREND FULTON J. SHEEN, Ph.D., D.D.

MENCIUS, one of the great pre-Christian philosophers of China, once said: "I feel personally responsible for every man who drowns in China." A saintly man in the same spirit once remarked: "While there is a single man in prison, I am not free." These ideas are only reflections of the Christ-love who personally felt responsibility, not for drownings and imprisonments, but for all the sin and evil in all the world. If you were God, and really felt that sorrow as your own, it would break your heart. Well! it broke His—in the Garden and on the Cross. Scripture puts it this way: "He bore our sins in His own Body on the tree."

From India comes to us this legend. One day a sage of India saw some men beating a water-buffalo. He was so sympathetic to the poor beast that the marks of the sticks appeared on his own back. We do know that St. Paul and St. Francis had the wounds of Christ on their hands and side—so much were they identified with Christ.

Do we but realize during Lent the full impact of what it means to be a Christian! It means feeling empty because two-thirds of the people of the world go to bed hungry every night; it means sharing the lashes the Communists inflict on our missionaries in China; it means aching with the festering wounds of ten million lepers.

How to translate this identification with the suffering except by cutting into your capital, denying ourselves the right to store more wealth in order that the one billion pagans might know the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary.

In Hell everyone says: "I am my own." In Heaven we say: "I am in Love." We prepare for Hell by refusing to bear the burdens of others; we prepare for Heaven by sacrificing for the sake of Our Lord. Deny yourself a luxury.

GOD LOVE YOU to the Foreign Missions Committee of S.C.H.S. for $60. "We sponsored a 'Tag Day' during homecoming week to raise money and the students unanimously agreed to send this money to the Missions." . . . to J.E.B. "During the year 1953, my wife, my little girl and I were blessed with extraordinary favors, so I am enclosing $30 for your work, which is Our Lord's work." . . . to C.H. "Enclosed is $37 I saved by denying myself coffee and desserts." . . . to C.J.G. for $50. "This represents the fee I received as Executor of a small estate which I wish to share with the Missions." . . . to A. O'M, "Continuing my 'dollar for every car sold,' and reporting for October, November and December, I am enclosing $32." . . . to L.M.B. "I had a wristwatch and received one as a gift so I sold the old one for $20. It does my heart good to give this to the Missions instead of buying something for myself." . . . to the Rosary Society of M.H.N. for $35 sent to the Holy Father's Missions. . . . to the Eighth Grade who collected the money spent on valentines ($13.09) and sent it to the Missions. . . . to B.R. for $7. "This is a percentage of tips I received in my work as a hotel maid." . . . to M.K. for $55. "Unknown to our friends and family, I have been cutting my husband's hair for several years. At Christmas he gave his favorite barber $25. I am happy to send this and the amounts I received as gifts to the Missions."

If you would like to join the million already reading MISSION magazine, just request it when you send in your sacrifice. Be sure to include your name and address or the name and address of someone to whom you would like us to send it.

Cut out this column, pin your sacrifice to it and mail it to the Most Reverend Fulton J. Sheen, National Director of The Society for the Propagation of the Faith, 109 East 38th Street, New York 16x, New York, or your Diocesan Director, Most Reverend John J. Boardman, 191 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn 1, New York.

SISTER CATHERINE, a novice with the Basilian Sisters at Zahle, is praying for a friend to help her with the $150 needed for each year of her two years of training. Won't you send her this sum in any payment—weekly, monthly or as you can?

Babs, Rubirosa to End 10-Week Marriage

Mrs. Barbara Hutton Rubirosa, heiress to the Woolworth five-and-ten store fortune, has decided to leave her husband of 10 weeks, Porfirio Rubirosa, it was reported in New York today by the World Telegram and Sun.

The "poor little rich girl," married five times without finding happiness, has made no public announcement but has told members of her family that the rift between her and the erstwhile Dominican diplomat has widened to the extent that separation and probably divorce provide the only answer.

Barbara last night was reported to have left her lavish Palm Beach honeymoon home and moved in with her aunt, Mrs. James P. Donahue, also a Woolworth heiress, at the exclusive Everglades Club.

Rubirosa was up early and drove to Lantana, a small community south of Palm Beach, and took off in his private plane for an unknown destination. He

Nixon Won't Dodge Issues in Air Speech

WASHINGTON, March 12 (AP)—Vice President Nixon said today he will not "dodge the issues" in making the Republican reply tomorrow night to Adlai Stevenson's speech at a Democratic rally in Miami last Saturday.

Nixon discussed his proposed talk with President Eisenhower for 45 minutes after a cabinet meeting that lasted more than two hours.

Nixon will speak on television and radio from notes at 7:30 p. m. (PST). He told reporters he had seen a lot of speculation on the "line" he would take in his speech and commented:

"I'm inclined to think some of that should be taken with a grain of salt."

He said he referred especially to speculation that he would make no reference to the issues that were discussed by Stevenson, who had described the Republican party as "half Eisenhower and half McCarthy."

Link Rich Cop to Past Vice Raids

Sheriff Eugene Biscaluz today ordere an investigation of all vice squad raids during the past 13 months to determine how many houses had been rented by Lockwood Marshall, 48, "millionaire cop" and part-time tennis instructor, for use in the raids.

An investigation of alleged "entrapment" tactics was launched by the sheriff after the arrests of six $100-a-night Hollywood party girls dancing in the nude early Wednesday at a Malibu beach home, rented by Vice Squad Deputy Marshall.

Two new instances of homes rented by Marshall to be used in "knock-overs" by the vice squad came to light today.

Clifford Roos, head of the uniformed division in charge of the vice squad operations by Capt. Robert R. L. Summers, said that six alleged prostitutes had been seized in a "raid" last Sept. 27 in a place rented by

L. A. Girl Goes Along on Plane Ride to Denver

A 20-year-old Los Angeles girl who went to the airport there to watch a young man catch a plane for Denver and decided to go along was greeted by police on her arrival there today. They had been alerted by her parents.

Capt. Leonard Nevin of the Juvenile Bureau said she is Trudi Ray, 20, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ray. Her father operates a sand and gravel firm with offices in Los Angeles and Detroit.

Nevin said the girl told him she was secretly married to Robert Hefner III of Oklahoma City last December in California.

At her parents' request, Nevin said, the girl will be placed aboard a plane leaving here for Los Angeles late today.

Winds Again Whip So. Cal.

Strong, chilly winds continued to whip across the Southland today, clearing the skies of smog, and creating dust and sand storms in desert areas.

The Los Angeles area forecast:

"Occasional cloudiness today, tonight and Saturday, but mostly sunny days. Locally strong winds today and tonight. Warmer weekend."

High temperature today was 63 after a low of 48 at 6:09 a.m.

In a special five-day forecast the Weather Bureau said that no rain is indicated.

Try to Halt Probe of Men In Service

WASHINGTON, March 12 (INS)—Senator Joseph R. McCarthy charged today the army tried to "blackmail" him out of probing subversion in the service by issuing a report on alleged attempts by Roy Cohn and himself to obtain favored treatment for Private G. David Schine.

The Wisconsin Republican described the Army's report as a "twisted, distorted, untrue version" of incidents as reported by the Army's legal counsel, John G. Adams. McCarthy said he is making public memoranda of his own to refute the Army's allegations.

McCarthy told newsmen at a frenzied, jam-packed news conference in his office that Adams "a number of months ago" threatened to make Adams' report public unless McCarthy ended his subcommittee's investigation of alleged "Communists in the army."

McCarthy said:

"I told him we would not be blackmailed."

BARES MEMORANDUM

McCarthy made public a memorandum from his own files which said that last Nov. 6 Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens asked him to "hold up" his hearings on the army and "go after the navy, air force, and the defense department, instead."

The unsigned memorandum said "Stevens said that if we brought out everything" in the Army Signal Corps hearings "we would have to resign. He said he had been in office for 10 months and would have to take responsibility."

The memo continued to say that Stevens "asked that we hold up our public hearings on the army. He suggested we go after the navy, air force and the defense department instead. We said first of all we had no evidence warranting such an investigation of these other departments. Adams said not to worry about that, because there was plenty of dirt there, and they would furnish us the leads. (Stevens) thought this was the answer to his problem."

HAD INFORMATION

The Nov. 6 memorandum said the McCarthy group told Stevens that Schine "was about to enter the army and had much information and material on the reports and investigations that we could not get along without."

"Mr. Stevens," it continued, "said that he would arrange

McCarthy Lashes Adlai, Murrow

(Other Photos, A-8)

WASHINGTON, March 12 (INS)—Senator Joseph R. McCarthy described charges against him by Adlai E. Stevenson as "completely false" and declared open warfare today on radio-television commentator Edward R. Murrow.

He attacked both men last night in a radio interview with Mutual Network Commentator Fulton Lewis jr. and later told newsmen he will have more to say about Stevenson in a March 19 Milwaukee speech to be carried over a radio network of independent stations.

In lashing out at CBS newscaster Murrow for criticizing him Tuesday night on his televised "See It Now" program, the Wisconsin Republican said the commentator might be trying to "smear" him because "he is worried about exposure of some of his friends."

Murrow said he could "deal adequately with Senator McCarthy's latest reckless handling of the truth" on his CBS-radio program at 6:45 p.m. CST tonight.

HITS 3 CRITICS

The Wisconsin Republican hit back at three of his critics — Stevenson, Murrow and Senator Ralph E. Flanders, Republican of Vermont — in his interview with Lewis and charged that the CBS newsman and commentator was once a member of a left-wing organization.

McCarthy cited a quotation from the Pittsburgh Sun-Tele-

Row Grows on Army Efforts to 'Smear' McCarthy Aide

for Dave to complete the work over weekends and after training hours. We said this would be satisfactory and if Dave was willing to do this work after hours, it would help to some extent."

The memordum said after lunch the group reviewed with "General Ridgway (sic)," presumably Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, army chief of staff, and two other generals "our evidence on the Signal Corps for their benefit."

The memo said McCarthy "reiterated in their presence that he would co-operate as much as possible, but that under no circumstances would there be a whitewash of the army situation because one reason a new administration was elected was to prevent the covering-up of Communists and those who protected them."

Among documents McCarthy handed to reporters was a memorandum to him from Frank Carr, subcommittee staff director, dated last Dec. 9. It charged that Adams "refers to Schine as our hostage or the hostage whenever his name comes up."

CLAIMS UNFAIR

"Again today John Adams came down here after the hearings and using clever phrases tried to find out 'what's there in it for us' if he and Stevens did something for Schine," the memo said.

Carr told Adams, according to the memo, he did not care what they did to Schine but thought "it wasn't fair of them to take it out on Schine because we were investigating the army, or to keep using it to try to stop our investigations."

The memo added:

"I am convinced that they will keep right on trying to blackmail us as long as Schine is in the army. Even though they said he deserved the commission, they didn't give it to him because of the left-wing press..."

NEEDED GUARANTEE

A memorandum dated Jan. 14, from Cohn to McCarthy, said:

"Adams said this was the last chance for me to arrange that law partnership in New York which he wanted. One would think he was kidding, but his persistence on this subject makes it clear he is serious. He said he had turned down a job in industry at $17,500 and needed a guarantee of $25,000 from a law firm."

A memorandum from Carr to McCarthy, dated Jan. 15, said:

"Maybe one of these days you should speak to John Adams in a friendly way. I've tried. He is baiting Roy pretty much lately on the 'hostage' situation. They get pretty heated before Roy buys the lunch, but it's going to lead to trouble."

CHARGES SMEAR

Cohn, the subcommittee's chief counsel, sat beside McCarthy at the news conference and when the senator completed his remarks, Cohn declared:

"It's an unprecedented thing. It (the report) was obviously leaked out to do a smear job on me because (the army) failed in blackmail attempts to stop us and particularly me from investigating the army."

Cohn said that "no improper influence was ever exerted by me or anyone else to my knowledge on the army on behalf of Schine or anybody else."

Schine is a former unpaid "consultant" to McCarthy's Investigations Subcommittee.

DENIES THREAT

The army's 34-page mimeographed report, sent to some 20 members of Congress, including members of McCarthy's subcommittee, alleged that Cohn threatened to "wreck the army" and force the ouster of Secretary Robert T. Stevens if the army carried out plans to send Schine overseas.

Cohn declared:

"No such threat as is reported in the army's document ever was made by me."

McCarthy, asked if he intends to keep Cohn on as chief counsel, replied: "As far as I'm concerned I sincerely hope and trust that Roy Cohn will remain on Capitol Hill for a long time and continue exposing and digging up Communists."

Earlier, Sen. Charles E. Potter, Mich., a GOP member of McCarthy's group, said Cohn should be "removed" if the army's charges are true and he asked for an immediate subcommittee meeting to "ascertain the facts."

LEAVING ON TRIP

McCarthy said that "if Sen. Potter of any other senator wants a meeting he will have it "but the senator said he did not know when it will take place since he is leaving for a weekend in Wisconsin later today.

The subcommittee's three Democrats said, in a joint statement, that they too desired a subcommittee session to take up the Cohn-Schine matter. Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland also called for an investigation.

McCarthy, named in the army's report as trying to get a "direct commission" for Schine, told reporters he had sent a telegram to Stevens this morning telling him:

"I would appreciate it if you would make it clear to the press that the only time you and I ever discussed the subject of a commission for David Schine was in his presence, at which time I urged and you fully agreed his case had to be handled the same as any other draftee and we agreed that any other handling in view of the investigation of the army would be extremely bad for the committee and extremely bad for the army, and that David Schine was with us and agreed on the matter."

NOT SURPRISED

McCarthy, whose office had announced he would "make a statement" after 1 p. m., eastern standard time, began his news conference suddenly an hour earlier. Newsmen, newsreel cameramen and photographers flocked into his office behind him and Cohn when they arrived there.

The senator said he had "not been at all surprised" by the army's "alleged report," which he said was "not a report, it's John Adams' version of a situation."

The senator said he "was disappointed that the army did not take advantage of our offer" to send a representative to the subcommittee and inspect McCarthy's own files on the situation.

McCarthy said: "This is a twisted, distorted, untrue version written by a man who had a great interest in this matter."

He then related his version of Adams' visit to his apartment to inform him about the report and commented: "No investigation will ever be ended by any threats, any blackmail."

'BAD FOR ARMY'

fairness to Mr. Adams," he be-fairness to Mr. Adams, "he believed the army spokesman was "acting in what he thought was the best interest of the army" since Adams evidently believed "the investigation was bad for the army and should be stopped."

After the Adams' visit, McCarthy said, he talked to Cohn who denied the charges and provided a "report completely contradictory to Mr. Adams."

McCarthy said he did not want to make his own memoranda on the case public because it "reflects upon the army" but he said that although he "very much disliked doing it" he felt he had to because of the army's report.

McCarthy said: "I am convinced the Adams story is false. I believe what Roy Cohn has told me and if I can keep him with the committee, I hope to."

SPECIAL GROUP

McCarthy said he had a meeting with Stevens and told him it would be "a good idea" to create a special group in the army to check speeches and books used in army indoctrination courses.

The lawmaker said he thought Schine was "eminently qualified" for such a post and felt that the group should consist of about six young men with Schine's qualifications.

McCarthy said, however, "I have not told Stevens to assign Schine specifically" to any job.

McCarthy said "Stevens and I are pretty much agreed" that the job should be done.

Regarding Cohn, McCarthy said the investigator has a "record like no young man I know." He added that, outside of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, "I don't think there is any man more disliked by the Communist party."

McCarthy said he would "rather let the day to day memoranda speak for itself" than comment on the details of the army's report.

McCarthy commented, however, that if Cohn "tried to exert influence it would have been very ineffective" since Schine is still a private.

When a newsman asked whether the "blackmail" charge was aimed at Stevens, Adams or any other individual, McCarthy said: "When I speak about blackmail the word is used advisedly. John Adams said no report would be made if the committee decided not to continue its investigation."

Adams could not be reached immediately for comment. His office said he was "attending a conference."

MAKES NOTES

Meanwhile, a Pentagon source said that he does not believe that Adams made a recording of his telephone conversations with Cohn, McCarthy and others.

The source said that the common practice for Adams is to make notes himself during or after a conversation, or to have a secretary listen in and make shorthand notes.

Senator Charles E. Potter, Republican of Michigan, said Cohn should be removed if what he called the "shocking charges" as to the chief counsel were true. The report said Cohn voiced threats that Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens would be "through" and the army "wrecked" if Schine were sent overseas.

Potter said he wanted a meeting today to go into "all the facts." He called reporters to his office and issued a statement.

URGES INQUIRY

The Pentagon document detailed Cohn's purported threats, abuse and demands in conversations with army officials.

Potter said: "Assuming the information is accurate, Mr. Cohn should be removed immediately. If the information is without foundation, however, then in all fairness to Mr. Cohn and the subcommittee, the facts should be ascertained without delay."

COLONIC
ENJOY A TRIAL TREATMENT $3

My technique is a scientific method of bringing about a state of erosion to impactions and the slate-like fecal content of the large intestine and rectum.
In simple language—it reduces solids to a state of solution, so that the contents may be passed by a normal effort.
Prof. Ehret says: "Every sick person has a more or less mucus-clogged system, such mucus being derived from undigested and uneliminated, unnatural food substances, accumulated from childhood on.
"The actual amount of filth and waste, which is the 'mysterious' cause, of your 'trouble,' is almost unbelievable.
"I had fat patients that eliminated from their body as much as 50 to 60 pounds waste, and 10 to 15 pounds alone from the colon, mainly consisting of foreign matters, especially old, hardened feces. The average so-called 'healthy' man of today carries constantly with him since childhood, several pounds of never-eliminated feces. One 'good stool' a day means nothing. 'A fat and sick man' is in fact a living cesspool."
"Experts in autopsy state they have found that from 60 to 70 per cent of the colons examined have foreign matters such as worms and decades-old-feces-stones. The inside walls of the over-intestines are encrusted by old hardened feces and resemble in appearance the inside of a filthy stove pipe."
"Leonard Williams, quoted by Dr. W. S. Bainbridge in his article on 'Intestinal Toxemia' (Med. Jour. and Rec. 1925) has said: 'THERE ARE HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE WHO HAVE DAILY EVACUATION OF THE BOWELS BUT WHO ARE NEVERTHELESS WALKING SEPTIC TANKS'."
Constipation is the common sense explanation of many illnesses say some of the world's best authorities. Many doctors accuse large intestine as breeding grounds of bacteria and deadly toxins that cause sickness, suffering, disease — DEATH.

When you visit my office you will see hundreds of patients under treatment—satisfied patients, many of whom have been pronounced incurable by other doctors. You will see hundreds of testimonials. You will see stamped envelopes from all over the world. Truly an experience and a sight to behold. Why? Because you will see the results that other forms of treatment have not been able to accomplish. Results that can only be accomplished with this type of treatment—Colonics.
Colonics remove the cause of many diseases, disaster, and death. It is positively amazing the results that might be obtained by a series of colonics, when properly administered by experts—specialists who are trained to eliminate that which causes toxic poisons—"the true cause of diseases."
Come in today and see with your own eyes the benefits that many derive. Enjoy a trial treatment—an experience that you may never forget. Perhaps you will respond as thousands have responded. Many of them had given up hope. Believe me I would not tell you this if it were not true.
I MAKE NO CHARGE FOR CONSULTATION. FOR MY EXAMINATION AND TRIAL TREATMENT I CHARGE $3.
The trial treatment consists of an internal bath—commonly referred to as "colonic"—given under the direction of a doctor specialist, supervised by female supervisors and given by nurses thoroughly trained.
The trial treatment includes a thorough examination.
The examination includes cardiograph test of the heart, thorough fluoroscopic X-ray study and analysis of case history by competent doctors, especially trained for this type of treatment.
Come in and enjoy a most unusual experience. Rub shoulders with hundreds of satisfied patients. See and talk to my patients and hear of thousands who were benefited. Spend hours reading amazing testimonials. Many from patients who were diagnosed "incurable." See stamped envelopes from all over the world.
I have the world's largest institution of its kind. More than 711,338 various treatments. There is no substitute for experience.
Enjoy this marvelous trial treatment today. Don't forget—the total cost for examination and trial treatment is $3. Yes! I said $3. This $3 pays for everything. There are no extras.

Charming 'Florarama' Set for Gala Premiere of Flower Show

Hollywood Park was transformed into a fairyland of flowers today as thousands and thousands of blossoms were assembled for the opening tonight of the California International Flower Show. Mrs. Benjamin Ashley and Mrs. Roberts Bowen inspect one of the beautiful floral displays. The show will continue through March 21. (Story, C-1.)

The flower show will open with a gala premiere conducted by the Assistance League of Southern California. Feature will be an original production called "Florarama," spotlighting Flora, the Goddess of Flowers, in a fantasy pantomime. Last October, Senator Joseph McCarthy (right) and army legal advisor John G. Adams entered New York's federal building together, apparently good friends. But now they're on the opposite sides of the fence. McCarthy cried "blackmail" today at the army report charging that he and his chief counsel, Roy Cohn, applied pressure for special treatment of a drafted aide, G. David Schine. McCarthy said Adams had told him the army report would be released unless probe of the army was halted.

American Professors, Trained by Soviet, Teach in U. S. Schools

IN HIS capacity as editor of "The Social Frontier," an ultra-radical "journal of educational criticism," Dr. George S. Counts, professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia University, has declared a "crusade" against the Hearst newspapers.

Dr. Counts is angry with these newspapers because they have been exposing and opposing Communistic influences and propaganda in the schools and colleges of America.

Our action interferes very seriously with Dr. Counts, who happens to be himself the foremost collegiate Communistic propagandist in the country.

This is proved by his writings, by his foreign affiliations and by his activities.

For Dr. Counts is the author of a book, "The Soviet Challenge to America," and of a pamphlet entitled "Dare the School Build a New Social Order?"

He is the translator of "New Russia's Primer," the Communist textbook used in the schools of Soviet Russia.

He is—according to the propagandist literature ISSUED BY THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT ITSELF—an OFFICIAL ADVISOR to the MOSCOW STATE UNIVERSITY, and will be in Moscow this year, from July 16 to August 25, TO SERVE IN THAT CAPACITY at the summer session of the university.

Obviously, therefore, Dr. Counts is a very satisfactory person IN MOSCOW.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the Counts-Communistic "crusade" against the Hearst press and against Americanism is made in a ten-page "release" to newspapers, graciously informing them that they have "permission to reprint any and all articles" from the forthcoming issue of "The Social Frontier."

The announcement further says:

"A call for a nation-wide attack by clergymen, newspaper workers, labor leaders, teachers and other molders of opinion upon Fascist jour-

McCARTHY'S ANSWER TO MURROW

This is a copy of part of an article which appeared in the Feb. 18, 1935, editions of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and from which Senator Joseph McCarthy quoted in answering and accusing TV Commentator Edward R. Murrow yesterday. McCarthy said the article connected Murrow with the "Moscow University summer session" and also tells of American professors trained by Soviet.

M'Carthy Blasts Back at Adlai and Murrow

—Associated Press Wirephoto

Senator Joseph McCarthy checks time and papers during his radio interview last night when he lashed back at Adlai Stevenson and declared open warfare on Edward R. Murrow. McCarthy charged that Murrow was once a member of a left-wing organization. He cited a quotation from a 1935 newspaper clipping which connected Murrow with the "advisory council of the Moscow University's summer session."

Dear Ed:

Your clipping service may have supplied these, but I thought you might be interested in eastern Iowa reaction to the program.

Generally, the papers took little editorial notice. The comment was favorable, with the exception of the Dubuque paper, and the rather foggy stand of the Belle Plaine Union.

Our own comment -- Excellent!

Best regards.

Religions Should Recognize The Force in Communism

Special to The Buffalo Evening News

NEW YORK, April 16.—Jonathan P. Mitchell, formerly associated with The New Republic, when testifying before the Jenner Committee concerning his conversations with Harry Dexter White, brought out an interesting concept that seems to be prevalent among many persons not only in the U. S. but in other countries.

It is the idea that the Christian era has terminated and that the next period in history will be the Russian version of Marxism. To many, this is inevitable even if unpleasant and they somehow adjust their thinking to a way of life which they hate but believe cannot be averted.

THE FOLLOWING COLLOQUY occurred before the Jenner Committee concerning Harold Laski's book, "Faith, Reason and Civilization":

"Mr. Grimes (committee counsel)—Would you state, please, what the thesis of Laski's book was?

"Mr. Mitchell—I think the thesis could be put as saying that the Second World War was the end of a great historic period, and that private business or capitalism had proved itself inadequate, and that the faith which underlay it, the Christian faith, no longer had any validity for the people who were living then; and that, happily, the Russians had worked out a new system of economics and a new faith which could replace capitalism and Christianity.

"Mr. Grimes—Laski expressed himself as wholeheartedly in favor of the Russian system as replacing both capitalism and Christianity, did he not?

"Mr. Mitchell—Yes, sir . . ."

CONCERNING THIS BOOK, Mitchell said:

"Mr. White said that this was by all odds the most profound book which had been written in our lifetime, and that no one had foreseen with such uncanny accuracy and depth the way in which the world was going."

HARRY DEXTER WHITE was not alone in this. Whether it was the secular education of the 1920s or the economic hardships of the 1930s, many young men and women turned their backs on the traditional concepts of the Western Christian civilization and found in Marxism an answer to their rejection of a mystical God and a social system based on the private ownership of property. They insisted upon a scientific and statistical explanation for human existence and behavior.

None of the formal religions met the challenge of Marxism as an alternative to mystical religions and Natural Law; nor have they to this day because they have been unwilling or unable to grasp the startling fact that Marxism is essentially a religious movement.

DEXTER WHITE apparently believed profoundly that the Christian era had come to an end, as Zoroastrianism once ceased to be a world religion, and that Marxism was to replace the Judaic-Christian civilization "inevitably," because evolutionary historic forces decreed it so.

None of this is surprising. What is astonishing is that the great religious organizations, which are the trustees for our civilization, did not recognize the new force and gird to meet its onslaught on our youth.

No one knows better than Mr. Murrow Laski was a Communist "Sleeper" like Alger Hiss. Why do you lie about it?

State Department Prefers Russia In

The usually exasperating, and frequently destructive as well as obstructive use of the veto by Russia creates in this country a good deal of anti-United Nations sentiment. The most frequently suggested remedy is a showdown to (1) eliminate the Soviet bloc from U.N. or (2) to leave the organization as is to Russia and Company and form a new grouping without them.

At the present time we have an organization calling itself the United Nations, which is far from united. But it is the closest resemblance to a true world forum that has existed so far.

Free of either the Soviet or the anti-Soviet bloc, what would remain would be a group best designated as the United Nations for something or other: In the case of the Soviets, for Marxism, or world domination. In the case of the rest of us, it might be more difficult to define our U.N. unless to say it is for holding the Soviets at bay.

It is this situation which suggests the reason for the Saturday pronouncement of our State Department. The United States is placed officially against any movement to oust Russia. That means that there will be no movement. For U.N., without either Russia or the United States, would be something else again.

Still inherent in our now determined position is a recognition that the United Nations can not serve the purpose for which it was instituted. It can not further the cause of world peace. It can not provide means to oppose and punish an aggressor except one on a very small scale. It can do neither of these things so long as Russia is a member with the power of veto.

The American position dooms U.N. inevitably to its current role of a forum for debate. That there is value in this can be conceded. In such a U.N., we can perhaps hold the anti-Soviet nations closer together. We can force discussion which ranges the various members on the side of the angels or otherwise. We can get a clearer picture of what goes on in the half world of Communist diplomacy. We can provide a clearinghouse of political information, of market statistics. Perhaps we can even solve most of the problems that do not concern land and battle.

But there we must stop. The alternative, of course, is a U.N. of our side, resolutely committed to battle. And whether we like it or not, or whether John Foster Dulles likes it or not, so long as the veto stands to bulwark Russian intentions, we may have to come to that alternative.

A Week People

The first week in April was National Laugh Week. Maybe you didn't know that. After all, there isn't much to laugh about. But it was also National Leave Us Alone Week, and if anybody came around to tickle you in the ribs to promote the former, he was violating the latter.

The second week of April is National Noise Abatement Week. It is also National Let's Play Ball Week.

The week people are getting things confused, and the only solution is for somebody to revive a National Do-Nothing Week—which somebody tried to do, but it was in conflict with National Achievement Week.

Manpower for Defense

"A costly waste of manpower" provided by duplication in supervisory jobs at eleven air installations was reported Saturday by a House committee. But you wonder if the House group has considered thoroughly a situation that must exist always in the armed services. It is one that dictates excess personnel on the payroll, duplication in many posts. If there is a remedy for it, nobody has come up with it. This is simply the fact that we must keep men trained for a war job for which there is no real need in peace.

In 1948, a representative peacetime year, our armed forces numbered about 500,000 men and women. To an extent all were a peacetime waste of human power and every dollar spent on them could be defined as waste, assuming that we would never have a war. But as a matter of fact the number was well below what should be the peacetime requirements of a country of this size that may have to go to war. Army engineering is fortunately usable in peacetime service but most Army technical service and training are for war only. When suddenly we are at war, many of the peacetime personnel must be replaced immediately by others capable of training our expanded forces.

In peace or war, the armed services find themselves with the problem of personnel, not needed for duty but needed for availability. There are career men with rank for which no peacetime service is possible. So waste in manpower does occur and duplication in jobs. But if we reduce to the usable maximum without duplication, we create a problem for the war that we may have to fight.

Growing Dallas Needs This New Court Aid

Governor Shivers' signature will give Dallas County a new criminal district court, though temporary. "Temporary" courts have a way of becoming permanent, however, and this one is justified in view of population and the criminal trouble that goes with it. A third county criminal court, authorized by the bill passed by the House, would help handle the mounting number of traffic cases. Such a court could possibly concentrate on drunk driving and speeding.

The judge of the district court is chosen by the Governor. The Commissioners Court chooses the county court magistrate. The Commissioners will do well to consult the Citizens Traffic Commission, the Dallas Bar and the Crime Commission, if the bench is set up.

The people will finance any expanded setup. Taxes and expenses go higher, but that is to be expected as a city grows and demands facilities to meet the growing pains.

Judges must pledge a renewed and vigorous effort toward keeping dockets abreast; delayed cases favor the criminal. The District Attorney must continue his persistent prosecution. These, the people expect.

The criminal is stopped—or deterred—only by prosecution in courts of law. The police may catch him. But he is out on bail, usually to repeat his performance. Only courts working at full speed and with vigorous effectiveness can hold the menace in check.

More Gas Customers

With more customers and, in some places, higher rates, the Lone Star Gas Company and its producing subsidiary report a substantial increase in net income for last year. This gain was achieved in spite of mild winter weather that cut the use of gas for heating in this area.

Natural gas has been a big factor in the recent industrial growth of Texas. It has provided cheap fuel for most of the new factories built here during and since World War II. While electricity has been edging into the field of home cooking fuel, the increased industrial use of gas has made up for this loss many times over.

The supply of natural gas in the Southwest may play out at some future date. By the time the gas is gone, we may be using atomic energy or solar energy for heat, anyway. Meanwhile, the new peak in Lone Star Gas income is an encouraging sign for Dallas industry.

Reaching Into Space

Not too hopeful of space travel is Dr. Conway Wilson Snyder, nuclear scientist who spoke at Southern Methodist University Thursday evening. And that's bad for hopeful space travelers who read the funny papers, because Dr. Snyder is a leading authority on the subject.

He thinks that, if all the financial resources of our country were devoted to building a space ship, we might launch one that, with rare good success in timing its take-off, would make the trip to Mars in something over eight months. There's a lot of "if" in that.

Yet, we may be missing the point of our real desires in hoping for bodily space travel. If we can go there in sight and thought while our bodies remain on the earth, we shall have achieved not much less results. And we are much closer to interstellar spaces with telescope and radar than we are with space ships.

We will never be able to see much of Mars with even such a telescope as Palomar. But present research in microscopic magnification, if it can be turned outward into telescopic observation, might in the not-too-distant future bring the Planet Mars to an apparent position much closer than the moon under our present telescope. There are some "ifs" here, too, one of them being the great difficulty of holding such a high-powered telescope on Mars after it has been invented.

It's a good guess that Mars is inhabited with a people advanced a million years beyond us in science. Since their space ships haven't reached us, there seems to be only a dim hope that ours will reach them. Yet they may be observing us in the minute details of our lives and vainly bombing us with signals that we have not yet heard. This probably points the way to "space travel" in thought if not in body.

Clue in Primaries

Tuesday the primary election battles get under way. Illinois holds its weeding-out vote then, and the nomination ballots of New Jersey will be marked a week later. These and later primaries may give some indication of the outcome of the battle for Senate and House control in the November election. At present the Senate is made up of forty-eight Democrats, forty-seven Republicans and one independent.

Worth watching in the primaries will be the total Republican and Democratic votes and the outcome as to pro- and antiadministration candidates in each party. With thirty-five Senate seats to be filled this year, fierce campaigns are likely to develop in most cases, at least in those outside the Solid South.

The Democrats can be counted on to exploit the unemployment attendant on postwar economic readjustment and to try to pin the blame on the Republicans. The GOP is likely to expose new scandals of the Truman administration and to emphasize Fair Deal coddling of the Reds.

"BROWNELL PLAN" IN ACTION

LETTERS FROM READERS

The News receives many more letters from readers than it can print. It regrets that it can not print them all. The shorter the letter the better its chance of publication. Internationalist Clique Attacked

To The Dallas News:

Our minds are gradually being softened for another police action in Indochina.

The possibility is too remote that stupid but honorable public officials could have blundered us into so many dangerous situations during the last twenty-odd years. With this in mind, we must assume there is a deliberate plot to force our nation down the road to ruin.

Authentic books and documents prove this. These traitors circulate among us daily. Some call themselves Americans and some even pretend to fight Communism.

They are money-mad internationalists who influence our foreign and domestic policies regardless of who happens to be President or which political party seems to be in power.

Their plan is to tax all industrious Americans into oblivion and to liquidate our young men through wars perpetrated all over the globe.

The stooges of these international plotters are the Queer Dealers, the left-wing liberals of every denomination, the One-Worlders, the Unescoites, the "Joe Must Go-ers" and others.

Joe McCarthy and J. Edgar Hoover can identify any and all of these plotters. This is the reason for the bitter attacks against them from the enemy-controlled press and radio.

We of the Southwest can be thankful for The Dallas Morning News, a good American paper giving both sides of every issue, but editorially standing for constitutional government.

H. W. TOTTEN.
Sherman, Texas.

Adams vs. Schine

To The Dallas News:

The dispute is really—John Adams vs. Cohn and Schine. We millions voted for Ike only to get the work done that McCarthy is doing, and for a complete change from New Dealism. Read his pledges in platform.

Those pledges are being delayed by this bird named Adams, who was appointed by Truman. Let's get on with McCarthy's real work: Who promoted and honorably discharged Fifth Amendment unmentionables? JOHN DALY.

Whooie! Rainmaker

To The Dallas News:

Where can we find the rainmaker's statistics on the Dallas watershed of April 7, 1954?

Is it possible he got his cloud-milking machine on a dry cloud, or did he get his pail kicked over?

The Creator that created and controls the heavens and earth and all therein got no mention from our water department last year. But great credit was given the rainmaker—an insult to God and to all people who read the Scriptures.

I can only say that the would-be rainmaker is a supersalesman. Whooie!

But the taxpayers have no say. There has been as much, or more, rain every year except one for the last thirty-two years as Dallas County got last year. It would be nice to trust the Creator and thank Him. We still trust Him.

G. B. KLINE,
3728 Travis, Dallas.

Results of Krick

To The Dallas News:

I want to thank our weatherman, M. C. Harrison, for his mustard seed of hope that we will have rain . . . some day . . . somehow!

I feel certain that the tiny mustard seed of hope planted in the hearts of people, trusting in our Lord, will definitely bring more satisfying results than all the "dough" planted in the pockets of Mr. Krick, competitive rainmaker, whose cloud seeding so far has brought us the second driest March in forty years, not to mention the coldest and dustiest March to be remembered by those of us who can remember that far back.

MAI PACKWOOD.

Too Much Emotion

To The Dallas News:

It is unfortunate that the McCarthy issue has reached such a stage that it can no longer be discussed objectively. To praise him for the good that he has done is to bring down the wrath of many who will regard you as having extreme right-wing leanings. To condemn him for his reckless way of sometimes handling his investigations is to invite being tagged with a pro-Communist label.

Where shall those of us turn who have no political idols either to the right or to the left, and only want to be reassured that our government will not be destroyed either from within or from without, from neither the right nor the left?

Silly Letters

To The Dallas News:

Who is this M. C. Sharp who does not like to read silly letters in the good old Dallas News?

This silly Sharp would retire Honorable Sam Rayburn, who was elected by majority vote. If such is democracy, I'm not a democrat.

Lady Drivers' Faults

To The Dallas News:

With due apologies to our lady drivers, I would like to point out a bad habit, common to many, and which could cause accidents.

When the wind disturbs her hairdo, Madame restores same while driving or awaiting a signal light, using the rear vision mirror in each case.

If she does so while driving, she must temporarily take her eyes off the road ahead—a very risky business.

If she does so while awaiting a signal light, the change in signals frequently catches her unaware and causes her to delay traffic. In fact, I have observed a few such lady drivers who keep their rear-vision mirror directed toward themselves, not toward the objective originally intended—the car following.

Before some lady driver arises in righteous wrath against these accusations, let me point out that some men drivers are guilty of the same fault.

Church Women

To The Dallas News:

"We refuse the assumption of guilt by association and of intention by implication," to quote the Texas Council of Church Women in their resolution, opposing Governor Shivers' proposal to outlaw Communism in Texas.

Are we to assume that during a bank robbery, the driver of the getaway car is innocent and his being there is accidental?

Have you ever known a Democrat or Republican to stand on his constitutional rights when asked about his party affiliations? What these Christian women do not seem to understand is the Communist party is a godless ideology, with their only allegiance to a nation endeavoring to destroy our country, our belief in God and the right of protest.

Postal Retirement

To The Dallas News:

I entered the postal service in 1912, salary $50 per month.

Increases were always slow and to live and educate our children took all we made. Few of us were able to save anything for old age.

Our retirement bill was passed in 1920, so I have paid over thirty years in retirement fund which has billions of dollars on hand.

Federal employees pay in 6 per cent of salary to the fund. We paid 100-cent dollars and are receiving 40-cent dollars. The public should know we paid for our retirement and it is not a handout by the government.

The average retiree receives $150 or less per month, on which he barely exists, but Congress holds our purse strings and we are the forgotten men. C. A. ALLEN.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

(From The Dallas News of April 13, 1929)

The Columbia phonograph company's "new process" viva-tonal recordings were advertised by the Edison Shop.

With $500,000 made in three years, youthful Metropolitan Opera Star Marion Talley announced her retirement to a farm.

Viscount Shimpei Goto, former foreign minister of Japan, died.

The Calyx Club gave a Bowery dance at the Cedar Crest Country Club.

Highway traffic between Austin and San Marcos was halted by a flood on the Guadalupe River.

W. J. Morrison of the Simms Oil Company was chosen president of the Dallas Association of Purchasing Agents.

THINKING OUT LOUD

By LYNN LANDRUM

The stage is rocked with shouting,
The puppets play their part;
But when the seeming ceases
We trust the honest heart.

When trumpet-wafted wisdom
Bedins the shrinking ear,
The better voice is quiet
And courage answers fear.

There comes a time of testing
Of men and feigned advice
When all the world is seeking
For value, not for price.

Barrel Head

Bishops and councils and organizations in aid of this and that protest that it is not good to have investigations which dredge up a man's record and expose it to the public view "without evaluation." But when these people are busy making a reputation for public use and for persuading the public to this view or that, they present that reputation at their own "evaluation."

If 2,200 clergymen ask the Supreme Court to do something to prevent an Episcopal bishop from firing an Episcopal rector because of Communist goings-on in an Episcopal church, those 2,200 preachers consent to the use of their name for one purpose. Indeed, they volunteer their names and actually thrust their names into the domain of public controversy and of public inspection. And thereby they give the public one element of measuring, according to the public view, not merely the action of the bishop, but also the discretion of 2,200 preachers in lending thus their names.

And if some committee prints in the "record" of each of these 2,200 preachers—or in the record of some of them—that they so signed their names, then the public will place its own "evaluation" on that record. And why should it not? The thing is in the open. It is on the barrel head. The signers put it there.

Noisy

In the current controversy between the Army and McCarthy—as in the controversy between Radio Commentator Murrow and McCarthy—there is too much noise on all sides for the column to make an evaluation. The noise of McCarthy has at least prevented the pinks, the fellow-travelers and the faint-hearts from hushing up the fact that we still have in government and elsewhere people who constitute a real and present danger to the safety of the Republic.

But the column has always taken a different slant toward criticism from that which the Senator takes. Apparently it is different from that which Mr. Murrow takes. The policy of this Columntator is to let them criticize. And if the criticism is printable—sometimes it isn't under our postal laws—then the Columntator favors printing it.

The theory of the column is that it either has character or it hasn't. If it has, character will catch up with reputation and correct it. If it hasn't, then maybe reputation is right, after all.

Medina

It is interesting that the name of Judge Harold R. Medina was suggested to be counsel for the McCarthy committee to investigate McCarthy and the Army. That is a real tribute to Medina's integrity. And the jurist does have integrity that has been tried as by fire.

The instinct to choose a man of such character was sound. But surely Judge Medina and the Supreme Court were correct in replying that the assignment ought not to be accepted by any federal judge because it is not right to involve the federal bench even remotely with investigations by Congress.

Investigation by Congress is the safeguard against dangers and abuses which otherwise may go unchecked. But, like many safeguards, it may itself be abused. The current investigation, if it is conducted fairly and firmly, will show who has been abusing what.

The presumption that somebody has been abusing veracity is so strong that we may say that the investigation will be useless if it does not clear up that question.

Lawyers Week For the Public

By DICK WEST

(Editorial Writing Staff of The News)

BOB STOREY is a quiet, precise man who has made the SMU Law School among the best. He has been to legal education in Dallas what the late Dr. E. H. Cary was to medical education.

R. G. STOREY

His law school sponsors Lawyers' Week, which is highly regarded in the profession. Somebody once quipped that law is for the lawyers. Lawyers' Week at SMU is for lawyers.

Above that, it seems, some agency should sponsor a Lawyers' Week for the public; or, a Law Week for the public.

The public is pitiably ignorant of the law. The SMU observance brings outstanding experts who talk in expert language on titles so technical even a newspaperman can hardly spell the words.

Those studying law at SMU will be sharper, as a result. And that is the purpose of Mr. Storey's institution.

But law would be a better profession if the public understood the law better. The stigma attached, let's say, to practice of criminal law—an unjustified stigma, for the most part—would be erased if the lay citizen knew more about it.

Lay education is a long and tortuous process. But Dallas would be a happier and better community if only a fraction of its people knew what a valid contract was.

You would be surprised at top businessmen who know nothing of jury service.

Most people know they can get out of jail on a bail bond if they haven't committed a capital offense for which they might get the death penalty. But they don't know how a bond is executed; what it means; how the abuses of it endanger their safety.

You often hear asked: "How can a lawyer defend a man everybody knows is guilty?" That's a good one. It ought to be explained to the public, for it can be explained. A good defense lawyer should not think about the guilt or innocence of his client. That's the jury's job. The lawyer should think primarily of an honorable defense, in face of all odds and public estimation.

These are elementary things that a lawyers' week for the people could explain.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION has done wonders in its public relations the last few years.

Doctors have their technical meetings. But more and more they are opening up health symposiums and clinical sessions to the public, with lectures by experts in simple terms.

Years ago there used to be heart sessions at every medical meeting. It was hard to sit through one and know any more about the heart than about the feet or kidneys.

Now doctors have simplified their discussions; they even illustrate them. If a technical term is used, it is quickly amplified in eighth-grade language.

The result has been a greater understanding of the doctor, medicine and the human body.

Law is of almost-equal import. But its processes are vague or unknown to most people. A lawyers' week for the people could not, and should not, expect to make lawyers of all the people. But it could make them more understanding. The profession needs that.

Fashion Is Lure For the Male, Too

By INA McQUAID

(Mrs. McQuaid is a free-lance writer resident at Garland.)

ANY WOMAN who has permitted even so much as a single coy curl to dally across her forehead has been subjected to questioning by the male members of her family as to the stability of her political affections, or has been bantered regarding woman's inclination to take her styles from the pattern of some public person.

The same male who banters is deeply concerned with crossing his legs precisely in order to retain the knife-like crease in his trousers, little aware that the crease to the front was a fad set a good many years ago. Formerly men wore the trousers without crease or with it along the seam line, certainly a more practical fashion from the standpoint of ease in pressing or folding garments to pack.

Before he had left his 'teens the famous citizen of early New Orleans, Bernard Phillipe de Marigny de Mandeville, had set so many fashions he had men of that city trying to bribe his tailor on the eve of any great social function trying to discover what new surprise the gay Bernard was proposing to wear. The day following his appearance in some new fol-de-rol the tailors of New Orleans were set to work copying it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON admired the set of a hunting coat worn by some members of the company which Philip Mazzei, the Florentine traveler, brought to the Colonies, planning to establish a co-operative colony. After Jefferson's first appearance in the new coat his neighbors sought to imitate it and the Piedmont tailor prospered.

The well-dressed man of today considers a Tux or Tuxedo a part of his wardrobe. It was a scandalous innovation introduced at and named for the well-known exclusive summer resort, Tuxedo Park.

During World War II General Eisenhower had made for him a warm, easy-wearing coat-jacket of waist length, now called the Eisenhower jacket. It has been generally adopted by the outdoor man of today, replacing the better-known and older Mackinaw, which, incidentally was a coat made from the famous Mackinaw blanket sold to the Indians. When the Indian was convinced of the greater warmth of the white man's coats he had one made from his blanket. These Mackinaws were adopted by the lumberjacks going into the north woods.

PRESIDENT POLK appeared before his Cabinet one day wearing a neat cravat made of material "with a dark background, having round dots of white regularly placed in it" . . . and the material design of polk-a-dot was in vogue.

Abraham Lincoln, smooth-shaven when he went to Washington, grew a beard to satisfy the whim of a small girl who wondered what he would look like with one, and businessmen and generals alike copied the fashion.

In a men's store recently I overheard a gentleman badgering a salesman to bring on something even louder and brighter than the shirts he had been shown. "You know," he insisted, "a regular Truman shirt."

Gentlemen, let us have no more heavy-handed humor regarding Mamie's bangs.

THE CASE OF EDWARD MURROW

Edward R. Murrow, CBS commentator, has acquired a reputation as an unbiased reporter of news. Some perceptive individuals have long felt that his "objectivity" is synthetic showmanship. To the keen ear, his leftwing leanings have not been well enough disguised.

Murrow is clever. No one can deny it. But he is not the first commentator to demonstrate that superficial cleverness can collect big audiences. Others less able than Murrow have made it pay off in a big way.

Since Mr. Murrow has at last discarded his disguise of cool objectivity and entered the McCarthy fight as a participant, he deserves closer examination than before. One of the reasons he deserves it is that the Communist press in recent months has given him more praise than any other radio or TV commentator.

We do not mean to imply that Murrow is a Communist or that he is a fellow traveler or even a sympathizer. But his background of experience and his influence on the public are of special interest when the official organ of the Communist party consistently applauds what he is doing.

It is not difficult to find clues to explain the applause. Go back to the Owen Lattimore case, as a starter.

LATTIMORE WROTE IN "ORDEAL BY SLANDER" that he must mention special debts to several men. "I must mention at least Edward R. Murrow," he wrote. "Even when the hysteria was at its height . . . he kept the record straight by repeatedly drawing attention to the fact that nothing had been proved against me. Later, by his program technique of using recordings, he gave me a national forum of my own, so that millions of people could hear me speaking for myself."

The McCarran committee (Senate Internal Security) later reported formally, after lengthy hearings: "Owen Lattimore was, from some time beginning in the 1930's, a conscious articulate instrument of the Soviet conspiracy."

We draw no conclusions from Murrow's stout defense of Lattimore. We cite it only as information necessary in appraising Murrow's alleged objectivity and judgment.

Last May, Communists everywhere were demanding that Malenkov, Churchill and Eisenhower meet for conspiracy."

We draw no conclusions from Murrow's stout defense of Lattimore. We cite it only as information necessary in appraising Murrow's alleged objectivity and judgment.

Last May, Communists everywhere were demanding that Malenkov, Churchill and Eisenhower meet for personal talks. Our State department did not approve. Murrow rapped the department. He said the President should not let American "hatred and hysteria" prevent a meeting with Malenkov. He made it clear that he perceived "new tides" running in Russia after Stalin's death.

The Berlin conference proved conclusively that there were no "new tides" in Russia. Murrow had been egregiously wrong again. He had also won Communist applause again.

WHEN ATTORNEY GENERAL BROWNELL exploded the Harry Dexter White scandal and Harry Truman grew so flustered that he told three self-contradictory stories, Commentator Murrow showed up exactly where some of us expected him; namely, on the side of the late Harry Dexter White, defending him and accusing Attorney General Brownell.

He won further Communist praise by championing the cause of Lt. Milo Radulovich, an Air Force Reserve officer whose discharge was recommended by a 10th Air Force Security board, the commanding general concurring.

Murrow used a clever, dishonest device in one of his attacks on Senator McCarthy to make two of the senator's statements appear to be lies. This device is analyzed in the March 19 issue of Counterattack, which is available to readers at the Peoria public library.

Edward R. Murrow is a crusader. He is a commentator with a cause. No one should condemn him for that. But to be a crusader disguised in the shining armor of an unbiased reporter of the news is quite another thing. One cannot truly be both.

The appraisal of Murrow by Counterattack, weekly publication of American Business Consultants, Inc., will sound a discordant note in the minds of Murrow fans, but it is an essential statement for those who want to see things clearly in these troubled days. We quote:

"MURROW TALKS ON THE SIDE OF THE angels. He is for the highest democratic and humanitarian ideals. But in actual practice he is not above using slick devices he would denounce if used by others. He is a master at slanting his programs while imparting an aura of great objectivity to them.

"Murrow preaches dangerous doctrine. He vastly underrates the domestic Communist party menace. To do this is as dangerous as to misjudge the menace of communism abroad. United States will be sunk if it loses to communism in either place. Even on foreign issues, Murrow advocates a policy of dangerous softness in the face of Soviet intrigue, and he has become hysterical about the issue of communism vs. civil liberties here in the United States.

"The great acclaim given to Murrow in many quarters in spite of his unsoundness in vital issues concerning communism deserves serious thought. It points up the major weakness of the United States on all fronts in the battle against communism. That weakness is lack of real understanding of Moscow's conspiracy. It is the greatest threat to United States' survival.

"Edward R. Murrow, unfortunately, represents the dominant voice in all media of communications. Too few Americans are getting the unbiased news and the intelligent commentary on it they need so badly."

McCarthy, Murrow Controversy on TV

By WILLIAM H. MOORING

Did anyone point out that Senator Joseph McCarthy's reply to Ed Murrow, given via film on the CBS program "See It Now," developed calmly and squarely, a powerful case against the anti-anti-communists?

Taking Murrow's alleged statement that McCarthy, by his methods and activities, is giving aid and comfort to the communist enemy, the Senator quietly presented quotations in tribute to Murrow from the communist press, known pro-communist socialists like the late Professor Laski and other sources of pro-Soviet bias.

He also gave quotations from the same or similar red publications on so-called McCarthyism and the man whom Murrow alleges has given the communists aid and comfort.

Specifically on this aspect of the controversy, McCarthy won hands down. If he ever gave aid or comfort to the communists, they responded typically with ingratitude.

I wonder if Murrow can produce anything by way of evidence to show that the communists ever castigated or even criticized him?

McCarthy's reply, unspectacular and at times characteristically vituperative, certainly got to the crux of the dispute between Murrow and himself which, started by Murrow, certainly has gratified communists all over the world.

It is that any among us, whose misguided liberalism impels them to oppose anti-communism with more vigor than they do communism, may be counted on the side of the communists at least any time they take the ascendancy. European and Asiatic experiences prove this up to the hilt.

What would be McCarthy's fate if communism took over the USA? What would be Ed Murrow's fate?

Judging by the laudatory mention given Murrow in the communist press he might reasonably count upon promotion, to say, Commissar in charge of State Radio and TV.

McCarthy? Summary execution beyond doubt!

Some time ago when I joined those who had words of criticism for Ed Sullivan, he wrote to me and said: "If and when you see something you like on the program, comment on that too, please!"

Not to say I haven't often found a great deal of enjoyment in "Toast of the Town," I must say that for my money Sullivan can give us more and more like we got the other week. As a sort of tribute to Mary Garden, Ed had four of the Met's top singers, Cesar Siepi, Roberta Peters, Cesare Velletti and Fernando Corena sing in an informal group. It was great.

Without intentional comparisons, they placed on a certain over-boosted blues warbler who followed them, her real value as a singer. It was, literally, a "down-to-earth" revelation.

Memos to the Editor

The Dr. Oppenheimer revelations confirmed many "blind" paragraphs (and hints) in this space for several years...After McCarthy very recently charged that the H-bomb was delayed for 18 months I told one of his intimates: "The Senator cannot make such a charge and then not offer proof. Let me make it public"... Even the President reportedly said: "News to me"...On April 13th Mutual Network commentators (and various newspapers) reported: "The most sensational story in decades was leaked to two N. Y. newspapers"..."The Gov't decided to beat McCarthy to the punch and made the facts known to the press," etc...That the "Villain" was a top atomic scientist, a Gov't adviser and an alleged Red cell member (along with other scientists) was first made public by Winchell April 11th.

When McCarthy was filming his reply to Murrow he used a teleprompter. It is a guide for speakers, commentators, announcers ...Sometimes the entire script is on the camera-front...Sometimes it offers cue-lines, reminders of a subject to mention, etc...In the studio (with the Senator) was a McCarthy-hater, an executive for the prompter firm...The moment McCarthy left, the man (IBK) raced to the office of a CBS executive with a copy of the McCarthy reply...It was supposed to be a secret...What's that about "methods"?

The editors of newspapers which published the 6th pre-trial examination (of a libel action) may have deleted the paragraph for space reasons...The court reporter's records included it...At any rate, it wasn't printed in the accounts I saw in the N. Y. Times or the N. Y. Sun...Both featured the fact that the judge had ordered me to be specific in my response. (I rebelled over "Gimme a Yesorno!" answer)...The two newspapers reported that his Honor cautioned us...But then neglected to add that he also cautioned the hysterical lawyer to stick to the script.

"Didn't Isaac Don Levine in the 1940s," asked the plaintiff's lawyer, "tell you about Alger Hiss?"

"I can't give you a yes or no to that..."

"I demand a yes or no!" he almost screamed.

"But I'm trying to tell you..."

"Mr. Winchell," threatened the lawyer impatiently, "I warn you that I will tell the Judge you are not being responsive and you will be dealt with. There will be consequences!"

"Counsel," I offered, "you are on a wrong track, off the track. Levine never mentioned the name of Hiss to me. First I heard of Hiss was in the papers years later."

He refused to listen and carried on as though he knew what he was doing—while I knew he did not...I turned to the reporters and said: "Levine never mentioned Hiss. He told me about a man named Krivitsky. That Washington was full of Reds, etc. I brought that report to President Roosevelt. That was in the papers—long ago!"

District Attorney Frank Hogan's office cracked down on the Scummy Samuel Roth, the "Publisher" of filthy magazines and other obscene publications...This col'm spotlighted Roth's criminal record many times...Nearly ten convictions since the 1920s...He served 3 years at a Federal prison...Fined $2000 for doing what he has been arrested for, again...His wife was arrested, also...This rotten pair must have been in great panic since Sunday night's WW broadcast...We complained about the arrest of an old woman newsstand dealer "for selling" obscene magazines...We said: "Why arrest her? Why not arrest Samuel Roth of 11 West 81st Street, the publisher? Here are his Rogues' Gallery photos!"...His arrest followed a few days later...This Brave Bum resisted arrest, punched a detective and then ran in panic...His troubles are just beginning ...A Senate Committee (probing juvenile delinquency) is also interested in him...They received complaints from many families of teen-agers (all over the land), who complained that his Scummy pamphlets were mailed to their homes...The next Confidential Mag (due on the stands May 5th) will feature his long criminal record under the title: "The Louse of Lewisburg"...His son and dghtr-in-law have been dealt with in Calif. for "Communist" activities, etc...This explains the Roth Tribe's printed attacks against commy-fighters, including me...One of his authors (with a criminal record for attempted extortion) will have to wait his turn in line.

This came in the mail today: "Despite all the speculation about the affects of an H-bomb on Manhattan, few people know that N. Y. was almost destroyed by a parade of fireballs in 1913. They just missed the City, plunging into the Atlantic Ocean"...Syngman Rhee's son Charles is a photographer for Life here. Staffers kid him with: "Ah, Sweet Mr. Rhee of Life"...Fire Comm. Cavanagh sent Bishop Sheen a "line pass" to get thru fire lines...In appreciation the Bishop sent this note: "Very happy to receive the pass, having turned one down from the Devil years ago."

A big story will break on June 17th from the pages of "The Secret Front. The Story of Nazi Political Espionage"...The author is Wilhelm Hoettl...Hitler's only living top spy...Frederick A. Praeger, Inc. will publish...Hoettl's corroborated facts shame down anyone who still thinks Tito's brand of communism is any better than Moscow's communauseum.

The Runyon Committee thanks all newspapers for not omitting paragraphs like this reminder to the contestants: The Runyon Fund Contest for the best letters on: "Why I Could Never Be a Communist!" ends midnight May 3rd...Please enclose $1 to fight cancer with each entry (send as many letters as you wish) to WW, Box 80, NY, Zone 36...The 1st prize is a $7000 Cadillac...2nd prize: A Kaiser Darrin sports car, value $3,750...Holidays at Honolulu, San Juan, Hollywood, New York, Washington, Phila, Florida, etc. via TWA, Eastern, American, Pan-American and United Airlines... Down front tickets to the Marciano-Charles championship fight, the World Series...Over 500 other attractive prizes...Thanks for the $125,000 in your letters to date.

Things you prob'ly never suspected: The name of the Associated Press correspondent at Harvard is Pat Yale...Judy Tyler, a former show-girl at the Copa, headlines the Mocambo (Hollywood), offering an attractive song-style...Here's a toast to Movietown's Suzan Ball, the bride, who lost a leg to cancer: "The Thoroughbride of the Year!"...If Sammy Snead snubs the annual Desert Inn Tournament of Golf Champions it will be over the treatment he complained about last time. Playing with an injured hand, some sports scribes panned him "for not trying"...But Snead has never refused to play for one of his pet causes: The Runyon Cancer Fund ...We hope he will be there on the 22nd...The McCarthy Situation: A case of the McCarthys versus the Moscowthys.

JOACHIM'S SCRAP BOOK

Sen. Joseph McCarthy in his much discussed telecast recently, unwittingly perhaps, but effectively exposed the nation's deadliest enemies — namely the highly respected intellectuals whose sincere, earnest, and effective pleas for what seems like a better life have helped to wreck the individualism which has made the past two hundred years the most progressive in world history. It has been these outstanding do-gooders, men like Murrow, Acheson, Wallace and many others, who, resenting capitalism's errors, believe government should not confine itself to preventing the use of force by one man against another but should help the weak by levying against the strong—Robin Hood fashion.

Jerome Joachim

It may be difficult for McCarthy to convince everyone that Edward R. Murrow was a member of the I.W.W. But McCarthy's quotes from the Daily Worker, and from Harold Laski's and Owen Lattimore's books will convince everyone familiar with what these men stand for that Murrow is not a friend of the American individualists.

Because they are clever and propose measures that sound similar to Christian doctrines (but doctrines which are enforced by state's decrees rather than by individual discipline) millions of innocents have been duped by such men and the world, including the United States, has gone far down the road to Socialism.

America has little to fear from the card bearing, fanatical Communists in our midst. They have neither impressed nor harmed us nearly as much as have men like Murrow, Roosevelt, Wallace and Acheson, who, though appearing to think only of the common man's welfare, have indeed brought us to the very brink of totalitarian slavery.

These are the men who coined the word "McCarthyism" and these are the men who have so confused us that millions of well meaning Americans are left with a doubt—much like the doubts which have repeatedly brought an end to racket busting efforts such as Kefauver's national committee made and such as Alderman Merriam's present efforts against the syndicate in Chicago.

There is nothing the Communists would like better than to have McCarthy silenced completely. If this were done and if perhaps it was attempted this tactic would we then have to coin a new word in order to please the Communists—and are we sufficiently naive to do just that?

The CRACKER BARREL

EAGLE ROCK, Calif., April 14—If anybody asked me to defend the Americanism of Edward R. Murrow, I wouldn't know exactly where to start. But I'm willing to fight anybody who says he ain't the funniest dead-pan comedian on the air today. I just love to watch him hollering over a NATION WIDE TELEVISION HOOKUP that McCarthy is deprivin' him of free speech.

The Murrow-McCarthy Poll

I would like to comment on the manner in which the listening and viewing public was treated by the television people on the night of the McCarthy reply to Murrow.

When I realized I had missed the McCarthy program I called CBS to inquire if there would be a rebroadcast. The phone rang many times before a frustrated voice said: "Hold on a minute, we are very busy." I held on for several minutes and then the feminine voice asked: "Is this about Murrow-McCarthy?"

I answered "yes" and she interrupted, "Who are you for?" I said "McCarthy" and before I had finished, she slammed the phone in my ear.

I dialed the phone again and the same routine was followed. I called again and hurriedly said I wanted to inquire about rebroadcasts. A man answered and I inquired: "Will you rebroadcast the McCarthy program and at what time?" He emphatically answered: "No, we will not!" I pleaded "Can I ever get to hear this by writing to someone higher up to make a request?" He answered, "Absolutely not!" and hung up.

W. H.

Blameless

About this McCarthy-Army quizz: "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

How many Army commissions have been awarded "by request," because of pull somewhere? That is no crime.

But promoting a Red Army officer, securing his "honorable" discharge when an investigation threatened, that is a crime, a treasonable crime.

Everyone connected with that disgrace and every last Un-American trying to cover up Red infiltration into our armed services now should be on a scorching grill of investigation—not America's great defender, Senator Joseph McCarthy.

'Mud Slinging Will Not Stop Me'—McCarthy

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, replying to President Eisenhower's rebuke for tactics which disregard "the standards of fair play recognized by the American people," makes it clear that neither presidential wrath nor the smear tactics of pressure groups which villify him constantly, will swerve him from his determination to expose Communists whenever and wherever he finds them.

In part he said:

"When the shouting and the tumult dies, the American people and the President will realize that this unprecedented mud-slinging against the committee by extreme left wing elements of the press and radio was caused because another Fifth Amendment Communist in government was finally dug out of the dark recesses and exposed to public view.

"It is important to remember that this silly tempest in a teapot arose because we dared to bring to light the cold, unpleasant facts about a Fifth Amendment Communist army officer who was promoted, given special immunity from duty outside the United States and finally was given an honorable discharge with the full knowledge of all concerned that he was a member of the Communist Party.

"It now appears that for some reason he was a "Sacred Cow" of certain army brass...

"A continued exchange of statements about over exposure of this Fifth Amendment Communist army officer is worse than ridiculous...

"I shall spend my time in action —in the continued exposure of those who are dedicated to the Communist enslavement of the world."

The fighting Senator from Wisconsin has no intention of "retiring to his corner" until he is satisfied that the Communist menace in America is beaten.

The McCarthy-Stevens Affair

The dispute between Army Secretary Stevens and Sen. McCarthy (R) Wis., is in some respects being exaggerated far beyond its true importance and in other respects the real importance is being ignored.

What has actually been determined is that the military in the United States is subordinate to the civilian government and that Congress has a right to ask questions and get answers to them.

No Case of 'Surrender'

This is not a case where the "Army has surrendered to McCarthyism." Secretary Stevens yielded to the Wisconsin investigator because he was convinced, by his own maturer reflection and the arguments of Sens. Dirksen (R) Ill., and Mundt (R) S.D., and others that Sen. McCarthy was right.

Certainly the Senate and the people of the United States have a right to know the details of the funny business involving one Irving Peress, a dentist, who had been drafted into the Army, given a commission, promoted to major in face of charges of Communist affiliations and activities made to Army officials last April, and finally given an honorable discharge soon after he had appeared before the McCarthy investigating committee and had resorted to the sanctuary of the 5th Amendment in his refusal to answer questions concerning Communist activities.

Sen. McCarthy sought to obtain the facts last week by questioning Brig. Gen. Ralph Zwicker, commanding officer at Camp Kilmer, and the man who signed Dr. Peress' separation from the Army. Now Sen. McCarthy is not the gentlest of examiners and undoubtedly he handled Gen. Zwicker rather roughly. But on the other hand it was plainly evident from the transcript of the testimony that Gen. Zwicker was doing his best to keep the salient facts from the committee.

It has been said that Sen. McCarthy abused Gen. Zwicker shamefully; and it is true that at one point he told him he was a disgrace to his uniform, which, in the case of a brave officer with several decorations, seems a bit extreme.

On this point—which is one of good form and not of substance—Secretary Stevens has said that he will stick up for his subordinates' right to be treated with dignity and decency, and has properly received the full approval of the President and Defense Secretary Wilson.

But it is beyond understanding why Gen. Zwicker felt it necessary to fence with the committee in the manner he did. It is not too much to say that he gave the impression, as a witness, that he was trying to protect somebody who had made a serious error of judgment. This loyalty to the Army code is admirable up to a certain point. But when it amounts to concealing information either from a court of competent jurisdiction or from a committee of Congress that point has been passed.

Let's Have the Details

In his order to Gen. Zwicker and to the Adjutant General, Gen. W. F. Bergin, not to appear before the McCarthy committee the Secretary of the Army acted in haste and incorrectly. His correction of the error is proper and does him credit.

The full circumstances of the Peress case should be made known. It may be that Peress, having been drafted, and inducted into the Army before the requirement of a non-Communist oath was in effect, was entitled to a discharge but there was no reason apparent for promoting Peress from captain to major in face of the charges of Communist activities of which Sen. McCarthy asserts Army officials were informed almost a year ago.

Commentator's Twisting of Facts Delights Communists

Murrow Latest Darling of Red Press

"No radio or TV commentator has received as much praise from the Communist party press during the last few months than Edward R. Murrow." Why? "The New Counterattack, Facts to Combat Communism," first makes the statement and then provides the answers. The following article, from the March 19 issue, is reprinted here with special permission. The emphasis is ours.

Why does the Communist press praise Edward R. Merrow so highly? No radio or TV commentator has received as much praise from the Communist party press during the last months as has Edward R. Murrow. The Daily Worker runs an item on the "Best Bets" on radio and TV each day. Murrow's CBS-TV shows "See It Now" and "Person to Person" have been consistently plugged in this feature, which mentions only a few of the many programs presented each day. His radio news commentary on CBS has recently been getting the same favored treatment.

What is the reason for this? A few examples of what Murrow says and does on his broadcasts and telecasts provide the answer.

Murrow rapped the State Department last May for not embracing Churchill's proposal of direct talks between Malenkov, President Eisenhower and himself. Murrow made it clear that he believed "new tides" were running in Russia after Stalin's death (a belief since exploded) and that the President should not let the "hatred and hysteria" of the American people prevent a meeting.

The U. S. "had better find a better answer" than the one it had given for rejecting a talk with Malenkov, Murrow said. Actually, the State Department's answer was an excellent one: Moscow had broken scores of promises; Malenkov had given no evidence of good faith — so it was foolish to talk with him.

Communists in all parts of the world were screaming for such a meeting. In fairness to them, it should be pointed out that their reasons for wanting one were much more intelligent than Murrow's — although they, naturally, would not reveal what those reasons really were.

Murrow attacked Attorney General Brownell on the Harry Dexter White case. He said it had been pointed out that "in 1947 a federal grand jury had studied the matter of Mr. White — all the evidence — and had failed to return an indictment because it felt there was insufficient evidence to warrant such action." (Note the emphasis on "all the evidnce.")

This statement was not true on Nov. 9, 1953 when Murrow made it. In 1948 Whittaker Chambers produced his "pumpkin papers," among which were notes in Harry Dexter White's own handwriting. The grand jury never saw this evidence. Murrow knows that, but for some strange reason neglected to mention it. He repeatedly pooh-poohed the evidence against White.

Murrow accused President Eisenhower and Brownell of asserting that a dead man was a spy "without producing evidence." He said this practice, if pursued, may "be applied to you or to me" and would endanger our heritage.

The Murrow program that the CP has praised most highly was his "See It Now" telecast on the case of Lt. Milo Radulovich, an Air Force Reserve officer who refused to resign his commission when asked to do so because it was decided he was not a good security risk (his loyalty was not questioned).

A 10th Air Force Security Board reviewed Radulovich's case. It recommended discharge. The Commanding General of the 10th Air Force concurred.

Then Murrow went to bat for Radulovich in a very cleverly slanted program that produced no evidence that Radulovich had been judged wrongly.

A flood of letters descended on the Defense Department in Washington. A short while later Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott said he did not think Radulovich was a security risk and reversed the Air Force's earlier decision.

The organ of the CP-led Teachers Union hailed Murrow's program in Radulovich as "a signal service to our country. The party's organ on the motion picture industry, "Film Sense" (published by the National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions), praised it as "an interesting example of TV's new awareness' and as proof that "the best of current television" is superior to the finest productions turned out by Hollywood.

The Daily Worker and its West People's World, joined in the hallelujahs. Two party writers, David Platt and Milton Howard, turned out articles for the CP press praising the Murrow program.

Murrow's recent "See It Now" program on Senator McCarthy offers examples of some of the devious techniques he uses to slant his presentations, while appearing to be very objective and fair. Murrow showed a hearing at which Senator McCarthy asked a witness (Reed Harris) these two questions:

"You know the Civil Liberties Union has been listed as a front for and doing the work of the Communist party?" "Do you know they since have been listed as a front for and doing the work of the Communist party?"

The senator's statement about the ACLU was correct. But Murrow wanted to make the senator look bad. How could he do this? Simple. Just change the senator's words. Murrow commented:

"Twice he (McCarthy) said the American Civil Liberties Union was listed as a subversive front."

This was a completely false statement. Senator McCarthy had not once used the word subversive". But that word connotes listing by the Department of Justice and the phony insertion of it by Murrow paved the way for his next sentence, which was designed to (and actually helped) discredit the Senator:

"The attorney general's list does not and has never listed the ACLU as subversive nor does the FBI or any government agency."

A neat implication that Senator McCarthy had lied by the use of a Murrow lie. The Truth: The ACLU was de cribed as a Communist front in House Report No. 2290 of the 71st Congress, published in 1931, a year before the ACLU provided defense counsel for Reed Harris. It was also listed as a front in Massachusetts House Report No. 2100 (1938), New York State Legislative Report No. 90 (1939) and in the 1943 and 1948 California Committee reports (on which Senator McCarthy based his statements).

CP leader Earl Browder testified in 1939 was the ACLU was a "transmission belt" of the Communist party.

On the sidelines, McCarthy would be conducting a running fight on the Communists and the Democrats.

REALISTIC PICTURE

In a word, the position of the moderates, as President Eisenhower likes to call the middle-of-the-roaders, will not be improved. Senator Stuart Symington, who may be the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, would undoubtedly get into the act, just to show that the Democrats are as anti-Communist as the Republicans.

Only President Eisenhower can suffer from a Democratic victory because he would be without even as much support in Congress as he has now. He would learn that it is impossible to conduct this government on a bipartisan basis and that those Democrats who are friendly to him now will be working for their own party and for his defeat in 1956.

This is the realistic picture today and unless the Republicans can kiss and make up in the next month or two, it will be a sad day for them when the next Congress meets.

Here is the complete record of the man who impugned the patriotism of General Zwicker.

When McCarthy first resigned from the Marine Corps he tried to fast-talk the Marines out of a couple of air medals. These are always awarded as a matter of routine for every 10 afr missions. McCarthy claimed 30 missions, but the Marine Corps, checking the records, could find record of only nine. Even these were flown as an "observer," in other words, as a passenger. So McCarthy's application was turned down.

Long after the war had ended and McCarthy had become an important senator, he applied for his air medals again. At first

"McCarthy was nearly through his initiation when he was hurt. He was going down a ladder with a bucket fastened to his foot when he slipped. His other foot caught on a lower rung—an iron pipe a few inches from the steel bulkhead—and he fell backward, injuring his foot . . . after my initiation was over and I had rinsed the stain from my shaved head, I went to the sick bay to see how Joe was getting along. SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT

Orono, Maine.

Editor, Bangor Daily News:

This is to set the record straight. In your story on McCarthy today, March 12, the article states that Edward R. Murrow, radio commentator was on the National Advisory Council of Moscow University Summer Session in 1935. What the article did not report was Murrow's statement in the same evening not long after McCarthy had made his, that the Summer Session referred to was never held. I know that Murrow's statement is true because I was in Russia that summer when the school was cancelled. I was there not to attend the school but on a personal trip of observation. I met many persons who had come to Moscow to attend the school. Many of them like myself had no belief in Communism, but were there to see what was going on. To learn the truth even about hated procedures is a part of the obligation of any intelligent person.

To smear Murrow because of his connection with a school session that did not occur is to distort out of all focus what in 1935 was a commendable desire to see and know what Russia actually was doing. The United States carries on an intelligence service now to do just that. In 1935 a great deal of what Russia was doing was obvious to anyone who went there and looked and listened. What I saw and heard only intensified my loathing of the whole Russian system and I so stated in many a lecture. To reason that because I associated for several weeks in Russia with practicing, convinced Communists that I am sympathetic with Communism would be the grossest libel. Such is true of many a person. Thus my desire is to set the record straight on McCarthy's statement regarding Murrow.

In an old cemetery in San Francisco there is a monument with the following inscription: "Erected by the Vigilantes to the memory of Bill Jones whom we hung by mistake."

This came to my mind when the Shimon trial board—six months after the Maine primary—found unanimously with the complete concurrence of the U. S. District Attorney that there was no evidence whatsoever that I had any knowledge of the alleged Shimon wiretapping.

I was also relieved when your editorial appeared in defense of Senator Monroney's dealing with Gruenwald in 1950 as an entirely reputable character at that time, as it was at that same time that Gruenwald was involved, thru no fault of his, in furnishing assistance to Dick Nixon to defeat Helen Gahagian Douglas in the California primary.

As to my promoting the Howard Hughes' investigation to assist Pan American Airways nothing could be farther from the truth.

MURROW AND MAC

Suspicion has always been harbored by this writer and many other liberal-thinking Americans, that E. R. Murrow's broadcasts frequently were inclined toward expounding the virtues of Socialism, but due to the personality and apparent sincerity of the man, these thoughts never emerged beyond the suspicion stage.

Confirmation of suspicions and any existing doubt disappeared the night Mr. Murrow made his television attack on Sen. McCarthy.

The usual calm and suave poise of Mr. Murrow was sadly missing immediately after Sen. McCarthy's telecast of April 6.

Murrow's face was quite haggard, apparently from deep frustration engendered by Sen. McCarthy's documented revelations pertaining to his past connections.

Once more all liberal thinking Americans owe Sen. McCarthy a vote of gratitude for bringing to light this glib master of artifice. J. W. ZAWILLA.

McCarthy And Murrow

By William H. Mooring

DID ANYONE point out that Senator Joseph McCarthy's reply to Ed Murrow, given via film on the CBS program "See It Now," developed calmly and squarely a powerful case against the anti-anti-communists?

Taking Murrow's alleged statement that McCarthy, by his methods and activities, is giving aid and comfort to the communist enemy, the Senator quietly presented quotations in tribute to Murrow from the communist press, known pro-communist socialists like the late Professor Laski and other sources of pro-Soviet bias.

He also gave quotations from the same or similar Red publications on so-called McCarthyism and the man whom Murrow alleges has given the communists aid and comfort.

Specifically on this aspect of the controversy, McCarthy won hands down. If he ever gave aid or comfort to the communists, they responded typically with ingratitude.

I wonder if Murrow can produce anything by way of evidence to show that the communists ever castigated or even criticized him?

McCarthy's reply, unspectacular and at times characteristically vituperative, certainly got to the crux of the dispute between Murrow and himself which, started by Murrow, certainly has gratified communists all over the world.

It is that any among us, whose misguided liberalism impels them to oppose anti-communism with more vigor than they do communism, may be counted on the side of the communists at least any time they take the ascendancy. European and Asiatic experiences prove this up to the hilt.

What would be McCarthy's fate if communism took over the USA? What would be Ed Murrow's fate?

Judging by the laudatory mention given Murrow in the communist press he might reasonably count upon promotion, to say, commissar in charge of state radio and TV.

McCarthy? Summary execution beyond doubt!

MURROW vs. McCARTHY

Chicago, March 10—Sen. McCarthy has done the country another valuable service, tho not deliberately this time. I refer to his having aroused CBS's Murrow to the point that he revealed his own pinkish thinking for the first time in a long career as a clever propagandist masquerading as a news reporter.

Murrow accused McCarthy of using half truths and innuendo, and of quoting out of context. He himself has used all of these tactics and devices repeatedly in trying to put over his propaganda. When the Bricker amendment was being debated he used his "See It Now" program to present what purported to be a debate on its merits. He presented one speaker for the amendment, one opposed to the amendment, and then wound the program up with a strong anti-amendment speaker carefully selected to give the impression he was acting as judge.

He also used his "Person to Person" program at about the same time to interview this same opponent of the amendment in his home on the same subject, altho this latter program professes only to give the public an intimate view of the lives and home atmosphere of typical Americans.

Other examples of Murrow's technique include television camera sequences that show his victims in the least flattering poses, shifting the camera to odd or extreme characters in the audience so as to ridicule the type of audience, and using the camera to "quote out of context" as he did thruout the McCarthy program.

From now on the public can not only "see it" but can "smell it." J. E. ALBERT

Chicago, March 10—On the television program "See It Now" last night Mr. Murrow used the very same "smear," "out of context," and "inference" tactics that he was criticizing Sen. McCarthy for. M. D. PARKER

McCarthy Charges Reds in U.S. Caused H-Bomb Delay

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's blistering charge that Reds within the United States government were responsible for an 18-month delay in the development of the hydrogen bomb today rocked the nation and indeed the world.

These revelations of delay, a delay which could prove catastrophic to America, came as the fighting senator from Wisconsin accepted the invitation of CBS Commentator Edward R. Murrow to take over the microphone on his coast-to-coast telecast, "See It Now," and answer the charges made on a previous telecast by Murrow that McCarthy "was giving aid and comfort to the enemy by his Red-hunting."

McCarthy made full use of this opportunity to strike hard at those who make a practice of attacking individuals who are seeking to expose and drive out Communists and fellow travelers within the United States.

McCarthy called Murrow..."the leader and cleverest of the jackal pack which is always found at the throat of anyone who dares to expose Communists and traitors."

In part, McCarthy said:

"As far back as 20 years ago (Murrow) was engaged in propaganda for Communist causes...His March 9 broadcast followed implicitly the Communist line as laid down in the last six months, laid down not only by the Communist Daily Worker but by the Communist magazine, Political Affairs, and by the National Conference of the Communist Party of the United States."

McCarthy went on, specifically, to charge that Murrow, by his own admission, was a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, a terrorist organization active in the 1920's.

Of the loss of China to Communism, McCarthy said:

"Those 400,000,000 Chinese were delivered to Communist slave masters by the jackal pack of Communist lying propagandists—including the friends of Mr. Edward R. Murrow, who day after day shouted to the world that the Chinese Communists were agrarian reformers and our ally, the Republic of China, represented everything that was evil and wicked..."

In his shocking charges of Red-inspired delay in production of the hydrogen bomb, Senator McCarthy said:

"If there were no Communists in our government, why did we delay for 18 months—delay our research on the hydrogen bomb, even though our intelligence agencies were reporting day after day that the Russians were feverishly pushing their development of the bomb? Who caused that delay? Was it loyal Americans or was it traitors in our government?"

In view of his words, it is only too apparent to the American people that Senator McCarthy will not be shouted down, or smeared down, or bullied into quitting his aggressive, fighting campaign to rid America of the Communist menace.
